TRUCE COMES LATE

Algeria, Morocco Cease Fire After Artillery Battle

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Shooting stopped late Saturday in all sectors along the contested Algerian-Moroccan frontier, Algerian field headquarters announced Sunday.

The end of hostilities was announced 24 hours after the official cease-fire went into effect at midnight Friday. The report said an artillery duel in the Figuig-Beni Ounif sector ended by early evening and no engagements had been fought since.

The report came from Algerian headquarters at Colomb-Bechar after both sides in the undeclared frontier war traded artillery and machine-gun fire in violation of the Bamako cease-fire agreement.

ACCUSATIONS

Each side accused the other of violating the agreement within minutes after it came into effect.

Morocco had dispatched troops to its eastern frontier and military duels shattered a brief calm Saturday in the sector bordered by the Moroccan town of Figuig on the north end and the Algerian town of Beni Ounif on the south end.

Algerian authorities said Moroccan shells ripped into Beni Ounif 25 minutes after midnight Saturday and kept coming for 20 minutes. The Algerians said they ordered their artillery to return fire later.

Morocco charged the Algerians fired on Figuig on Saturday after the cease-fire deadline.

The Moroccan government said it moved troops toward the eastern frontier for defense not attacks. It vowed it intends to abide by the Bamako agreement calling for negotiations. This was the accord reached in Bamako, Mali, last Wednesday between President Ahmed Ben Bella of Algeria and King Hassan II of Morocco.

Barry Gives Views About Berlin Wall

Urges Uniting Germany With Two Pressures

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — A West German newspaper Sunday quoted U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., as saying the West could knock down the Berlin wall without the risk of war and achieve the reunification of Germany by economic and diplomatic pressure.

The newspaper also quoted Goldwater as linking reduction of American troop strength in Europe to the equipment of North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies with tactical atomic weapons.

'WEAK POLICY'

The Washington correspondent for Welt am Sonntag, an influential German weekly, reported Goldwater said in an interview the Berlin wall "can be directly blamed on the weak foreign policies of (President) Kennedy's administration and its continual concessions to the Communists.

"The building of the wall was a direct attack against guaranteed rights of freedom of movement in the city which, according to my understanding, were firmly nailed down in five different agreements with the Soviets."

"The wall in Berlin can be knocked down without the risk of war," the newspaper reported Goldwater said. "I also believe the unification of Germany can be achieved if policies of 'peaceful coexistence' are surrendered."

The Arizonia Republican, considered the front-runner among possible candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, was quoted as saying: "Because of our superiority in weapons and atomic bombs—a superiority with which the Soviets are well acquainted—we allow ourselves firmness without risk of war."

The newspaper's correspondent gave it as his opinion that these were the policies towards Germany which Goldwater would follow if elected president.

"In case Goldwater became America's president," he wrote, "then he would—as he said during the interview — try to achieve the unification of Germany through an economic blockade by the entire West against Moscow, and, if necessary, through the breaking of diplomatic relations with the Kremlin."

West Germany does more trade with Iron Curtain countries than any other member of the Western alliance. In the past it has reacted negatively to proposals that it take part in a trade blockade against the Soviet Union.

1,643 Register In Past Month As Voters Here

Three days remain for prospective voters in Ouachita Parish to register for the December 7 Democratic primary. Local books will close at 9 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 6.

The registrar's office, located on the second floor of the courthouse, will be open Monday through Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1-5 p.m. On Tuesday and Wednesday, the office will operate from 6-9 p.m. also.

Mrs. Mae Lucky, Ouachita registrar, has reported a tremendous turnout during the past week, as applicants for registration averaged 150 a day.

During the month of October, the office staff processed a total of 1,643 new registrations. On Friday, Nov. 1, this amount was increased by 155 additional applicants.

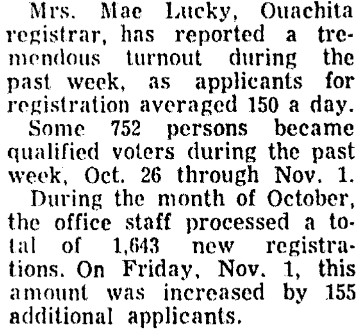
With the additional temporary staff member and office facilities, the registration process has speeded up considerably, Mrs. Lucky reported.

However, the great numbers of applicants are still causing a bottleneck. Mrs. Lucky and her staff will continue to register applicants as fast as possible.

DON'T KICK – BE A VOTER!



Have you registered to vote?
If not you have until 9 p.m. Wednesday to do so.
If you don't register and don't vote you have no kick coming about who's elected.

Castro 'Honors' Man In Exile

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Castro Cuba belatedly honored native pianist-composer Ernesto Lecuona with a concert Saturday, but he wasn't around to take any bows for "Malaguena" and "Siboney."

Lecuona, now in his 60s, is in exile in Malaga, Spain, the city he hailed in his tempestuous "Malaguena"—Woman of Malaga. The Cuban composers guild threw him out after Fidel Castro's rise to power, and his property was seized.

Lecuona's music also was seized by the revolution. CMQ, Havana television station which is Castro's mouthpiece, plays a few bars of "Siboney" to introduce its newscasts.

Two years ago Lecuona left Cuba, settling into quiet exile at Tampa, Fla. But his fans were not about to forget him.

Citizens of Malaga chipped in and bought a house in tribute to "Malaguena."

White House Awaits Word Of Next Step

Kennedy Studies Viet Nam Revolt With Advisors

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The administration, eager to see South Viet Nam get back to the war against the Communists, awaited word Saturday of the revolutionary regime's next step. President Kennedy discussed the situation with his top-level advisers throughout the day.

The United States probably would recognize President Ngo Dinh Diem's successors as soon as they formally declared the make-up and future policy of their government. Monday was seen as the earliest possible date for U.S. diplomatic recognition.

CANCELS TRIP

Kennedy cancelled a trip to Chicago for the West Point-Air Force football game to hear latest reports of Saigon developments at a 45-minute meeting in the White House Cabinet Room.

The President was briefed by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) Director John A. McCone; Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and high State Department officials.

The President's decision to cancel the Chicago trip was not interpreted as a sign of unfavorable developments in South Viet Nam.

Rather, the administration was understood to be watching the situation closely to try determine just how soon the military junta intended to set up a provisional government and return to the anti - Communist fight.

Both Diem, Brother Die In Uprising

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A Buddhist-led provisional regime controlled a nervous Saigon on Sunday after a bloody coup that brought downfall and death to President Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu.

The new regime declared the Ngo Dinh brothers dead, but did not explain the circumstances of their demise.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Associated Press reporter Roy Essoyan saw unofficial photographs of bodies identified as those of Diem and Nhu.

The picture of Diem showed him lying beside a personnel carrier with a soldier leaning over him. His body, dressed in a dark suit, was bullet-riddled and there was evidence he had been shot in the head.

Nhu's body, bearing bruises as though he had been beaten, was lying on a stretcher. He met his death by stabbing, informed sources said.

Judging from the nature of the wounds, it seemed unlikely that the two men had committed suicide, although that was the official explanation.

It was not known where the two bodies were.

Officially, coup leaders said they were looking for members of the Ngo Dinh family in order to hand over the bodies.

There were no family members known to be in Saigon. Mrs. Nhu's children were said to be safe at the family's luxury summer villa at Dalat. There was a rumor that the two Roman Catholic brothers were shot while resisting arrest, after they fled the besieged presidential palace.

25th Polaris A-Submarine Goes To Sea

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — Its blimp-shaped bow draped in bunting, the Ulysses S. Grant, 25th Polaris submarine in the Navy's arsenal, was sent down the ways Saturday into the choppy, rain-flecked Thames River.

The 425-foot, 7,000-ton sub, named after the 18th president of the United States, was hailed by Adm. Harold P. Smith as the kind of weapon that "gives our country a credible deterrent to unlimited nuclear war.'

PICKETS PICKETED

As Smith, commander of the unified U.S. Atlantic command, was speaking, picketing pacifists paraded up and down outside the Electric Boat Division shipyard. They, in turn, were picketed by members of the Citizens Anti-Communist Committee of Connecticut.

"Our opponents are compelled to realize," Smith said, "that any deliberate nuclear attack or other major aggression which could lead to a full nuclear war is simply not a rational, politic military act.

"Our naval forces, together with the great Strategic Air Command of the Air Force, give our country a credible deterrent to unlimited war," he said, referring to the Polaris missile as the Navy's "most significant weapon."

Grant's great-granddaughter, Mrs. David E. Griffiths of Arlington, Va., gave the sub the traditional champagne Christening.

The chilly crowd of 300 cheered as the Navy's 51st nuclear-powered sub slid smoothly down the ways and splashed into the water.

Goldwater Files Again As Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is preparing to take out some political insurance on his expected bid for the 1964 GOP presidential nomination by filing for re-election to the Senate.

This maneuver, as explained by the senator's strategists, would be designed to provide Goldwater with a relatively secure landing field if he should be shot down at the San Francisco convention.

Denison Kitchel, the senator's campaign manager, said in an interview that Goldwater has no intention of seeking two officies in the same election as Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson did in 1960.

If Goldwater gets the presidential nomination, Kitchel said, a substitute will be found for him on the Arizona senatorial ballot. If he isn't the national nominee, Goldwater will seek a third Senate term.

On the basis of a nationwide Associated Press poll of state and county leaders, released Saturday, Goldwater is a runaway presidential choice among these GOP leaders.

ELLENDER JOINS FIGHT

Aid Foes Seeking To End Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate foes of foreign aid, facing a tough task in cutting the authorization below $3.8 billion, turn next to an effort to terminate the present program in 1965.

Sen. Allen Ellender, D-La., a long-time critic of the present system, said Saturday he will join in the fight for an amendment to wind up the current program June 30, 1965.

The amendment also would limit assistance after that date to no more than 50 countries meeting what Ellender called "very strict criteria." More than 100 countries now receive aid.

AMENDMENT

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., will call up such an amendment sometime next week after the Senate resumes debate Monday on a compromise $3.8-billion authorization bill backed by Democratic and Republican leaders.

The bill cleared its first major hurdle Friday when the Senate voted 46-29 to reject a Morse motion to send it back to the Foreign Relations Committee with instructions to take a second look and return it no later than Nov. 8.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., the Senate Republican leader, sponsoring the compromise measure with Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, interpreted that vote as an indication the Senate finally will approve a figure pretty close to the $3.8 billion.

How long it will take to reach a final vote, however, neither Mansfield nor Dirksen would predict.

Morse and a group in revolt against the program have now piled up more than 50 amendments on which they will seek separate votes.

Cyanide Found On River Above Town In Illinois

NEWTON, Ill. (AP) — Crews of state engineers and chemists were rushed to Newton on Saturday after discovery of cyanide in the Embarrass River, from which Newton gets it water supply.

State health officials said the polluted portion of the water was about 20 miles upstream from Newton, a community of 3,000 population in east-central Illinois, and was not expected to reach the town until Saturday night.

Verdun Randolph, assistant chief sanitary engineer of the Illinois Department of Public Health, said the community is in no danger since none of the poisoned water had been pumped into the town's reservoir.

Newton is the only community on the Embarrass that takes drinking water from the river. Other towns along the river obtain their water from lakes and wells.

Viet Nam Coup Blamed On U.S. By Red Nations

TOKYO (AP) — Communist North Viet Nam and the Soviet Union claimed Saturday the United States is behind the overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem's government in South Viet Nam.

North Viet Nam, which is supporting the Viet Cong guerrillas waging war in South Viet Nam, said outright the United States "organized the coup d'etat in Saigon."

Moscow noted that U. S. officials had denied involvement. "But nobody believed these denials," the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said.

Hanoi radio noted that the leaders of the coup are as much opposed to communism as they were to Diem.

A broadcast said "The fact that the U. S. imperialists have organized a coup has shown ever more clearly their true nature as aggressors."

The Soviet news agency Tass said the situation in Saigon would return to normal if the United States quit interfering in the nation's domestic affairs and withdrew its troops.

TRIES TO ARREST DETECTIVES

Wily Swindler Nabbed Again

LONDON (AP)—Michael Patrick Murphy Woodfall is a memorable man, even without his moustache. When cornered, as he was Saturday, he reacts as quickly as a rabbit.

Held in connection with a swindle, he escaped from police custody Friday but was recaptured Saturday by two detectives. But Woodfall never gives up.

He whipped out a pair of handcuffs and, true to form, he cried out to passersby:

"In the name of the queen, help me arrest these men—they are wanted criminals."

Before the passersby could answer Woodfall's call, uniformed police appeared on the scene and put an end to his trick. But it was the kind of thing the law says Woodfall has been up to ever since Effie Ora, a lonely widow of substantial means, fell into his snare.

Woodfall met her through a matrimonial agency last April and Woodfall proposed marriage at once.

MICHAEL WOODFALL
. . . Held In Swindle

Woodfall, 42, complete with gentleman's derby and cavalry officer's bristling moustache, told Mrs. Ora, 49, he was a retired army major with titled relatives and property in London, Ireland and Cornwall. He said he was a bachelor.

They were married four weeks later and went to live in Woodfall's ancestral home" in the west of Ireland. Actually, it was a rented house, and Woodfall had a wife somewhere although he hadn't lived with her for almost 20 years.

They made frequent trips to London during the social season. When they stayed at the Ritz, it was in a suite booked by "Major" Woodfall.

Actually, he had spent two years in the army as an artilleryman and was discharged with the rank of private.

When they went to the races at Ascot, they were in the royal enclosure. Woodfall told his bride and her friends he was taking them to the Ascot Week Ball at Queen Elizabeth's Windsor Castle.

Then came an announcement over the loudspeaker: a telegram for Maj. Woodfall. Bad news—an aunt had died and the party was off. Actually, Woodfall had rigged the telegram. Mrs. Ora's guests were heartbroken and she began to grow suspicious.

Back they went to her home in Cambridge, and early in July the police began making discreet inquiries.

On Sept. 25, Woodfall, accompanied by two young men, entered the house in Cambridge and, dragged her out to a car.

Passersby became alarmed. Woodfall said she was hysterical.

"Get a doctor," suggested one bystander.

"I am a doctor," replied Woodfall.

Everyone helped push the screaming Mrs. Ora into the car and they roared off. The police soon gave chase, and the car was stopped at a roadblock.

That ended Whitfield's story in court last week, but Woodfall was not done.

As he was being escorted to a hearing in Cambridge Friday,

Aid Foes Seeking To End Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate foes of foreign aid, facing a tough task in cutting the authorization below $3.8 billion, turn next to an effort to terminate the present program in 1965.

Sen. Allen Ellender, D-La., a long-time critic of the present system, said Saturday he will join in the fight for an amendment to wind up the current program June 30, 1965.

The amendment also would limit assistance after that date to no more than 50 countries meeting what Ellender called "very strict criteria." More than 100 countries now receive aid.

AMENDMENT

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., will call up such an amendment sometime next week after the Senate resumes debate Monday on a compromise $3.8-billion authorization bill backed by Democratic and Republican leaders.

The bill cleared its first major hurdle Friday when the Senate voted 46-29 to reject a Morse motion to send it back to the Foreign Relations Committee with instructions to take a second look and return it no later than Nov. 8.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., the Senate Republican leader, sponsoring the compromise measure with Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, interpreted that vote as an indication the Senate finally will approve a figure pretty close to the $3.8 billion.

How long it will take to reach a final vote, however, neither Mansfield nor Dirksen would predict.

Morse and a group in revolt against the program have now piled up more than 50 amendments on which they will seek separate votes.

Cyanide Found On River Above Town In Illinois

NEWTON, Ill. (AP) — Crews of state engineers and chemists were rushed to Newton on Saturday after discovery of cyanide in the Embarrass River, from which Newton gets it water supply.

State health officials said the polluted portion of the water was about 20 miles upstream from Newton, a community of 3,000 population in east-central Illinois, and was not expected to reach the town until Saturday night.

Verdun Randolph, assistant chief sanitary engineer of the Illinois Department of Public Health, said the community is in no danger since none of the poisoned water had been pumped into the town's reservoir.

Newton is the only community on the Embarrass that takes drinking water from the river. Other towns along the river obtain their water from lakes and wells.

Both Diem, Brother Die In Uprising

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A Buddhist-led provisional regime controlled a nervous Saigon on Sunday after a bloody coup that brought downfall and death to President Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu.

The new regime declared the Ngo Dinh brothers dead, but did not explain the circumstances of their demise.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Associated Press reporter Roy Essoyan saw unofficial photographs of bodies identified as those of Diem and Nhu.

The picture of Diem showed him lying beside a personnel carrier with a soldier leaning over him. His body, dressed in a dark suit, was bullet-riddled and there was evidence he had been shot in the head.

Nhu's body, bearing bruises as though he had been beaten, was lying on a stretcher. He met his death by stabbing, informed sources said.

Judging from the nature of the wounds, it seemed unlikely that the two men had committed suicide, although that was the official explanation.

It was not known where the two bodies were.

Officially, coup leaders said they were looking for members of the Ngo Dinh family in order to hand over the bodies.

There were no family members known to be in Saigon. Mrs. Nhu's children were said to be safe at the family's luxury summer villa at Dalat. There was a rumor that the two Roman Catholic brothers were shot while resisting arrest, after they fled the besieged presidential palace.

Viet Nam Coup Blamed On U.S. By Red Nations

TOKYO (AP) — Communist North Viet Nam and the Soviet Union claimed Saturday the United States is behind the overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem's government in South Viet Nam.

North Viet Nam, which is supporting the Viet Cong guerrillas waging war in South Viet Nam, said outright the United States "organized the coup d'etat in Saigon."

Moscow noted that U. S. officials had denied involvement. "But nobody believed these denials," the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said.

Hanoi radio noted that the leaders of the coup are as much opposed to communism as they were to Diem.

A broadcast said "The fact that the U. S. imperialists have organized a coup has shown ever more clearly their true nature as aggressors."

The Soviet news agency Tass said the situation in Saigon would return to normal if the United States quit interfering in the nation's domestic affairs and withdrew its troops.

TRIES TO ARREST DETECTIVES

Wily Swindler Nabbed Again

LONDON (AP)—Michael Patrick Murphy Woodfall is a memorable man, even without his moustache. When cornered, as he was Saturday, he reacts as quickly as a rabbit.

Held in connection with a swindle, he escaped from police custody Friday but was recaptured Saturday by two detectives. But Woodfall never gives up.

He whipped out a pair of handcuffs and, true to form, he cried out to passersby:

Before the passersby could answer Woodfall's call, uniformed police appeared on the scene and put an end to his trick. But it was the kind of thing the law says Woodfall has been up to ever since Effie Ora, a lonely widow of substantial means, fell into his snare.

Woodfall met her through a matrimonial agency last April and Woodfall proposed marriage at once.

MICHAEL WOODFALL

defrauding Mrs. Ora of $12,320, marrying her under false pretenses and wounding her while possessing a shotgun.

Woodfall, 42, complete with gentleman's derby and cavalry officer's bristling moustache, told Mrs. Ora, 49, he was a retired army major with titled relatives and property in London, Ireland and Cornwall. He said he was a bachelor.

They were married four weeks later and went to live in Woodfall's ancestral home" in the west of Ireland. Actually, it was a rented house, and Woodfall had a wife somewhere although he hadn't lived with her for almost 20 years.

They made frequent trips to London during the social season. When they stayed at the Ritz, it was in a suite booked by "Major" Woodfall.

Actually, he had spent two years in the army as an artilleryman and was discharged with the rank of private.

When they went to the races at Ascot, they were in the royal enclosure. Woodfall told his bride and her friends he was taking them to the Ascot Week Ball at Queen Elizabeth's Windsor Castle.

Then came an announcement over the loudspeaker: a telegram for Maj. Woodfall. Bad news—an aunt had died and the party was off. Actually, Woodfall had rigged the telegram. Mrs. Ora's guests were heartbroken and she began to grow suspicious.

Back they went to her home in Cambridge, and early in July the police began making discreet inquiries.

On Sept. 25, Woodfall, accompanied by two young men, entered the house in Cambridge and, dragged her out to a car.

Passersby became alarmed. Woodfall said she was hysterical.

"Get a doctor," suggested one bystander.

"I am a doctor," replied Woodfall.

Everyone helped push the screaming Mrs. Ora into the car and they roared off. The police soon gave chase, and the car was stopped at a roadblock.

That ended Whitfield's story in court last week, but Woodfall was not done.

As he was being escorted to a hearing in Cambridge Friday,

ELECTION BACKGROUND

Candidates For Police Jury Spice Parish Races

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles on candidates in the December 7th first primaries. Today's article is on the candidates in Ouachita Parish. The series is intended to inform the voters before the election.)

By SAM HANNA
Political Editor

Major courthouse officials are unopposed this election year in Ouachita Parish, but politics hasn't been slighted in the least on the local level.

Seventy-five candidates, including Seven Republicans, are running for the 19-seat Police Jury. This is somewhat of a record.

Also adding spice to the political pot, 10 men are seeking Ouachita's two seats in the House of Representatives, which is not unusual for Ouachita.

But the local races so far have been quiet with one obvious feature overriding all others. There aren't any local issues.

No doubt the keen interest in national affairs has turned the people's attention away from the local level. For that reason, this year's race for the State Central Democratic Committee is not going to be taken for granted.

Ouachita has two seats on the committee, which casts its 10 electoral votes in the presidential elections.

With the anti-Kennedy feeling riding high here, four men are seeking the committee posts, including both incumbents—Fred Fudickar Jr., an attorney, and Rep. Lawrence Gibbs.

Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard and Fred Huenefeld Jr., a young planter, are running for the committee too. Fudickar and Gibbs have remained silent in the governor's race while Howard is backing John J. McKeithen with Huenefeld supporting Robert F. Kennon.

This race will be one of the most interesting on the local level.

Unopposed in the courthouse are Sheriff Bailey Grant, heading for his fifth term in office, Assessor Bert Coverdale, the veteran with six terms now, Clerk of Court B. S. McRaney, ending his first term, and Coroner Dr. John P. Burton, also ending his first term.

This marks the second consecutive election that these incumbents have been unopposed. In fact, Coverdale, the pipe-smoking, hand-waving dean of Ouachita politics, has been unopposed for four terms.

With 10 candidates in the House race, the Senate campaign drew only two opponents — Sen. Jamar W. Adcock, who wants a second term, and Howard Griffith, the West Monroe radio man who is seeking his first term.

They are running for the Senate seat that represents Ouachita and Jackson parishes.

Gibbs is seeking his third consecutive term in the House while Rep. Mike John Jr., an insurance man who is also in the real estate field, is out for a second term.

Their opponents include the following:

D. C. Bernhardt, an attorney in private practice; Ralph Caldwell, an attorney who handles the labor relations for Olin Mathieson; Archie L. Dickerson a salesman; Loy K. Heard, West Monroe contractor; Pete J. Medak, a salesman and former baseballer; Harvey E. White, a brick contractor who ran before; George A. Wood, a former assistant police chief; and Hubert Yeldell, a Monroe contractor.

Labor is backing Gibbs and John, but a run-off is practically assured since their opponents are working hard. Adcock also has labor support.

Meantime, the local races feature a field of Republican candidates for the Police Jury which will boost its membership from 16 to 19 posts.

Republicans to be automatically nominated on December 7th are Lee Hicks, Ward 3, Kenneth Lee and D. V. Gish, Ward 5, and John Woodburn, Hillman Madison, Sanford G. Stephens and George R. Lewis, Ward 10.

They will face the Democratic nominees in the April general election.

Incumbents on the parish executive committees of both the Democratic and Republican parties are unopposed.

WARD 1

Justice of the Peace — Clarence (Ted) Curtis; Victor F. Parish.

Diem's Brother Quits Post As British Envoy

LONDON (AP) — The youngest brother of deposed President Ngo Dinh Diem quit Saturday night as South Viet Nam's ambassador to Britain and charged the leaders of the Saigon uprising murdered the president.

The envoy, Ngo Dinh Luyen, announced his resignation in a statement.

"There are other ways to serve a country's interests than to serve a government, the promoters of which have murdered my brother and camouflaged it into suicide," he said.

Lawmen Sifting Clues To Identify Gulport Bandits

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—FBI agents and local law enforcement officers sifted clues in the hope of eventually identifying the two armed men who robbed a Gulf National Bank courier of $37,000 Friday.

A widespread search for the bandits' getaway car failed to produce results and roadblocks set up at strategic locations were called off about 7 p.m. Friday.

However, authorities continued a vigilance for the bandits' car which bank courier Ted Thompson, 21, described as a yellow 1955 (Mercury) sedan with a green top.

STATE ASSOCIATION

Dietetic Convention To Open Thursday

The 1963 convention of the Louisiana Dietetic Association will be held Thursday through Saturday at Monroe's Virginia Hotel.

Directing the program will be Miss Marlene Bond of Monroe. Miss Bond is supervisor, school lunch section of the Louisiana Department of Education.

In conjunction with the convention, Gov. Jimmie H. Davis has declared the week, Nov. 2-9, as Dieticians Week.

Thursday's program begins with an executive board meeting in the Cameo Room at 1:30 p.m., followed by an officers' workshop at 3:45 p.m. An executive board dinner is scheduled at 6 p.m. also at the hotel, and a "welcome to Monroe" meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in Enaut Hall.

General convention registration begins at 8 a.m. Friday, with the first delegates' session slated in the Cameo Room at 9:30 a.m. Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard will extend greetings from the city, while Mrs. Lillian Ellis, president of the Northeast Area Dietetics Association, will respond.

Principal first-morning speakers will be William E. Noonan, state supervisor of health and physical education, who speaks at 9:45 a.m., and Dr. Charlotte M. Young, professor of medical nutrition at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., speaking at 10:30 a.m.

Local Arrangements Chairman Mrs. Lettie Aswell will preside at a 12:30 p.m. roof luncheon, featuring Mrs. Lena Wallace as speaker.

Afternoon general sessions at 2:15 and 4 p.m. will include talks by Walter N. Dashiell of Dallas, Tex., regional milk and food consultant for the Public Health Service, Ronald M. Deutsch, well-known author of LaCanada, Calif., and Dr. Pauline G. Stitt, Washington, D. C., chief of the child health studies branch of the Division of Research, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Saturday's program begins with a coffee at 8:30 a.m. on the mezzanine floor, with the last general session set for 9:30 a.m in the Cameo Room. Dr. Young will speak again on "Challenges for Today's Dietician in the Americas."

An executive board meeting at 11:30 a.m. will close the annual meeting.

Barry Keeps 'Runaway' Lead As GOP Choice

NEW YORK (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona is the runaway choice in a nationwide poll of Republican presidential preferences for 1964, taken by The Associated Press among Republican state and county leaders.

Of the 1,404 who answered a questionnaire, 1,194 or 85.1 per cent voted Goldwater the party's strongest candidate against President Kennedy as of today.

Fewer, however, believe Goldwater will be nominated. Here his vote was 901-a 64.2 percentage of those who replied.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York received 56 votes as the strongest candidate and Richard M. Nixon, the 1960 GOP presidential candidate, received 44.

On the outlook for the nomination, Nixon had 72 votes to 65 for Rockefeller. Moreover, a sizable number of those who favor Goldwater for the nomination predicted that, if a deadlock develops in the nominating convention, Nixon will emerge again as the GOP candidate.

The convention, scheduled to open in San Francisco July 13, has a tentative apportionment of 1,308 delegate votes.

The survey was started in early October.

By mail and telephone, Associated Press correspondents in 50 states polled 2,961 Republicans, including some city and town leaders. In Alaska, which has no counties, the national committeeman and committeewoman participated in the poll.

Of the total queried, just over 47 per cent replied. Republicans in New Jersey and Hawaii declined to participate.

The questionaire asked opinions on two points:

1. "Who is the strongest potential GOP candidate against President Kennedy on the basis of present conditions? Why?"

2. "Whom do you think the party will nominate in 1964? Why?"

Three other Republicans were named several times in answers to both questions-Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky, Gov. George W. Romney of Michigan and Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania. Cited as potential "dark horses" were Henry Cabot Lodge, the 1960-vice-presidential nominee, and Milton S. Eisenhower, brother of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Goldwater topped all the potential candidates on both questions in every state except New York. There, Rockefeller received 13 votes to the senator's four on the strongest candidate question, and 10 to two on the probable nominee.

Atomic Lecture At Jonesville School Slated

JONESVILLE (Special) — A lecture and demonstration by a representative of the United States Atomic Energy Commission is scheduled for Block High School here Nov. 6., announces John E. O'Brien Jr., exhibits manager for the commission.

According to O'Brien, the program, entitled "This Atomic World," will be presented by the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies of Oak Ridge, Tenn. The institute is an non-profit, educational corporation of 39 southern universities and colleges, operating under contract with the Atomic Energy Commission.

The manager said that the demonstrations and lectures are designed specifically to acquaint high - school students with the basic principles and uses of atomic energy and to stimulate their interest in science.

CULOTTES BANNED

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI) — High school officials Saturday drew the line on hems — and it was below the knee.

Principal Brian K. Connor issued notice to the 500 girls who attend the 1,000-student Barnstable High School that culottes —tight pants — are banned.

STATE ASSOCIATION

Dietetic Convention To Open Thursday

The 1963 convention of the Louisiana Dietetic Association will be held Thursday through Saturday at Monroe's Virginia Hotel.

Directing the program will be Miss Marlene Bond of Monroe. Miss Bond is supervisor, school lunch section of the Louisiana Department of Education.

In conjunction with the convention, Gov. Jimmie H. Davis has declared the week, Nov. 2-9, as Dieticians Week.

Thursday's program begins with an executive board meeting in the Cameo Room at 1:30 p.m., followed by an officers' workshop at 3:45 p.m. An executive board dinner is scheduled at 6 p.m, also at the hotel, and a "welcome to Monroe" meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in Enaut Hall.

General convention registration begins at 8 a.m. Friday, with the first delegates' session slated in the Cameo Room at 9:30 a.m. Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard will extend greetings from the city, while Mrs. Lillian Ellis, president of the Northeast Area Dietetics Association, will respond.

Principal first - morning speakers will be William E. Noonan, state supervisor of health and physical education, who speaks at 9:45 a.m., and Dr. Charlotte M. Young, professor of medical nutrition at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., speaking at 10:30 a.m.

Local Arrangements Chairman Mrs. Lettie Aswell will preside at a 12:30 p.m. roof luncheon, featuring Mrs. Lena Wallace as speaker.

Afternoon general sessions at 2:15 and 4 p.m. will include talks by Walter N. Dashiell of Dallas, Tex., regional milk and food consultant for the Public Health Service, Ronald M. Deutsch, well-known author of LaCanada, Calif., and Dr. Pauline G. Stitt, Washington, D. C., chief of the child health studies branch of the Division of Research, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Saturday's program begins with a coffee at 8:30 a.m. on the mezzanine floor, with the last general session set for 9:30 a.m in the Cameo Room. Dr. Young will speak again on "Challenges for Today's Dietician in the Americas."

An executive board meeting at 11:30 a.m. will close the annual meeting.

Barry Keeps 'Runaway' Lead As GOP Choice

NEW YORK (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona is the runaway choice in a nationwide poll of Republican presidential preferences for 1964, taken by The Associated Press among Republican state and county leaders.

Of the 1,404 who answered a questionnaire, 1,194 or 85.1 per cent voted Goldwater the party's strongest candidate against President Kennedy as of today.

Fewer, however, believe Goldwater will be nominated. Here his vote was 901-a 64.2 percentage of those who replied.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York received 56 votes as the strongest candidate and Richard M. Nixon, the 1960 GOP presidential candidate, received 44.

On the outlook for the nomination, Nixon had 72 votes to 65 for Rockefeller. Moreover, a sizable number of those who favor Goldwater for the nomination predicted that, if a deadlock develops in the nominating convention, Nixon will emerge again as the GOP candidate.

The convention, scheduled to open in San Francisco July 13, has a tentative apportionment of 1,308 delegate votes.

The survey was started in early October.

By mail and telephone, Associated Press correspondents in 50 states polled 2,961 Republicans, including some city and town leaders. In Alaska, which has no counties, the national committeeman and committeewoman participated in the poll.

PROUD OF RECORD

Speaker Of House Defends Reputation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head man in the House of Representatives took sharp issue Saturday with critics who claim Congress has been in session too long and done too little this year.

Reviewing almost ten months of the session, Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., said he is proud of the record, especially in the House.

"Far from being a 'do-nothing' Congress as some have charged," he said in an interview, "this has been a most active and hard-working Congress, one of which its leaders and its members may well be proud."

The House especially "can pride its legislative record for 1963 to date — a record which will be even more impressive by the time we adjourn."

McCormack has been in the House a long time — 35 years next Wednesday — and he said the present Congress can pit its record against any of them.

"I know of no Congress inrecent history which has had more important measures and considered and passed as much major legislation as the House has passed this year," McCormack said.

"We have passed a major tax bill, a foreign aid authorization bill, the higher education bill, a vocational education bill, a mental retardation bill, a bill that halted the threatened railroad strike — just to mention a few. Before we adjourn, I am confident that we will pass the most constructive and effective civil rights program in the history of this nation."

The measure to fight mental retardation has become law.

New Algeria Still Unstable

By ANDREW BOROWIEC
Associated Press Staff Writer

On Nov. 1, 1954, Algerian guerrillas swooped down from their Aures Mountain hideouts to free their country from French rule.

Independence now has been won but to President Ahmed Ben Bella and his ruling Front of National Liberation-FLN-it represents only one stage of the Algerian revolution.

This revolution goes on with its slogans of socialism and sweeping reforms, with open admiration of Cuba and attacks on the West, with its uncertainty and a declining economic and social structure.

This weekend independent Algeria, a sick nation with no immediate medicine in sight, is celebrating the ninth anniversary of the start of its struggle.

The start of the revolution rather than the victory of independence was chosen as the biggest national holiday, underlining the continuing struggle ahead.

"Our generation has been sacrificed. We are working for our children and our grandchildren" said an Algerian official recently

The new people's republic of Algeria has been a headache to some Western diplomats since its birth, and particularly in recent months.

Ben Bella's admiration of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro and Cuba's sympathy and reported aid to Algeria in the Algerian-Moroccan conflict have casued some dismay in the West.

It is feared in some Western embassies in North Africa that Ben Bella's Algeria is careening toward a reckless socialistic experience.

Morocco's break with Cuba and its lesser diplomatic slaps at Egypt and Syria last week over their collaboration with Algeria have emphasized a split in the Arab world.

In its 16 months of independent existence, Algeria has faced steady and mounting internal and external problems.

While relying heavily on French aid-some $400 million this year-it has nationalized all French farms and much other private property.

Oil interest in the Sahara, and the fact that France can still use the desert for its nuclear tests, are probably the main reasons for France's continuing financial effort in Algeria.

The French community has dwindled from one million before independence to some 80,000. An additional 30,000 technicians have been sent from France to keep the country going.

The United States has sent food to keep Algeria from starving. But the government-controlled press has been attacking America as racist and imperialist.

The Soviet camp is praised despite the avowed Algerian neutralist policy. In recent months, Soviet and Red China credits have been granted to Algeria. Internal difficulties included a staggering problem of unemployment and the hard adjustment from the capitalistic economy to ill-prepared socialism.

Economists believe that Algeria, bled by the seven-year war for independence, damaged by the last stand of European right-wingers, and abandoned by its European cadres, needed several years of respite and recovery before plunging into reform.

Ben Bella disregarded the difficulties and decided to press on with his socialism. He appears convinced of his sense of mission, in the righteousness of his cause.

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
World Staff Writer

An open house from 2-5 p.m. today will mark the beginning of the first major show for the recently-established Art Center of Monroe. Works in all media by art faculty members of Louisiana colleges and universities will be displayed for two weeks at the Art Center gallery at 1504 Riverside Drive.

Staffed by Art Center members to guide visitors through the paintings, the gallery will be open from 2-5 p.m. daily, except Monday, for the coming two weeks. The public is invited to come and view the exhibits at no charge.

First purchase in the show was won by Ida Kohlmeyer of the Newcomb-Tulane University School of Art. Her abstract oil painting was entitled "Immanence No. 2."

She is a prominent artist whose paintings have been exhibited in art galleries throughout the country. Among her numerous awards are those of the Ford Foundation and the Corcoran Biennial in Washington, D. C.

Three merit prizes were presented for outstanding paintings. Winners were art faculty members Ed Schutz, Northeast Louisiana State College; Jack Beard, Louisiana Tech, and James L. Steg, Newcomb-Tulane University.

Juror for the show was Mrs. Marie Hull of Jackson, Miss. She is a well-known painter, who has served in a similar capicity in exhibitions all over the country. Mrs. Hull has studied art both in New York and in Europe.

This afternoon's opening event is sponsored by the Junior Charity League.

Displays at the local gallery change every six weeks. All works exhibited are by contemporary artists from throughout the Ark-La-Tex area.

The Monroe Art Center is the only gallery of its kind in Louisiana or the surrounding area. Established in May of this year, the organization has set up the Riverside Drive gallery and promoted art appreciation around Monroe.

Officials report that about 50 per cent of the visitors to the gallery are persons from out of town who have heard about the art shows.

Memberships are available in the Art Center in three types — patron, sustaining and associate. The patron membership is for those who want to help further the progress of the organization. Sustaining membership is the regular type, carrying the full privileges of the Art Center.

Most numerous are the associate memberships, which allow persons joining to participate in various activities of the group. Included in these are monthly programs of art education, such as lectures, slides and movies and commentary by prominent critics on different forms of art.

DRIVE APPEAL ISSUED

Final UGF Push For Goal Urged

A total of $198,891, or 76.3 per cent has been raised to date in the United Givers drive for 13 local health, welfare and character building agencies.

Campbell called on volunteer wrokers to complete their solicitations as soon as possible and finish the job successfully. "There is enough money in unreported cards, based on last year's gifts plus a reasonable amount of increases and new gifts, that our goal can be reached," Campbell stated.

Out of a total of 3,200 firms in Ouachita Parish assigned to volunteers in the campaign, only 1,640 have been worked and turned in, campaign leaders revealed. The balance of the calls represent the potential to reach the goal.

Campbell also urged all retired persons or individuals of independent income who have not been called on to send in their gifts now. They may mail their gifts to UGF Headquarters, Box 900, Monroe, or call FA 5-3869, and have their contributions picked up.

. . . . SR

Co-chairman Fletcher W. Ashcraft praised firms and their employees who have helped the campaign reach the 76 per cent mark already. "We have received increased support from employees of scores of parish firms. It is evidence, I believe, of the confidence the community has placed in the 13 UGF agencies and in the United way of raising funds," Ashcraft said.

"However," the chairmen pointed out, "a number of businesses and individuals who have given in the past still have not made their pledges. Some have not been called on, because they may have been out of town, or simply because the campaign worker has not made contact.

"We urge all businesses and individuals to turn in their pledges now if they have not done so already."

The 1964 Campaign was extended three weeks, until November 20th, when workers attending the final report meeting last week had reported the campaign still some 25 per cent shy of the goal. Since Wednesday's report session, an addition $4,257 has been turned in to UGF Headquarters.

Heart Attack Kills Colorful N.Y. Magistrate

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Magistrate J. Roland Sala, 56, a controversial courtroom dandy with a penchant for quoting Shakespeare, died of a heart attack Saturday at the home of a friend.

The colorful Sala lived life with a flourish, both on and off the bench.

His taste in clothes ran to silk suits, velvet vests, pearl stickpins and malacca canes, and he was never at a loss for an appropriate quotation to squelch an adversary. He frequently jousted with judges.

Sala's flair for dramatics kept him in constant hot water, but he seemed to relish it.

Once, when his car was ticketed in a no-parking zone, Sala was criticized when he argued that a magistrate's car was an official vehicle and should be immune from summonses. He was removed from the bench for 10 days as a result of his outcry against the policeman who had ticketed him.

In 1957, he was arrested on charges of drunken driving and disorderly conduct. In 1960, he was censured by the appellate division for "evasive and unethical" action in a divorce case. Last year he was jailed for 10 days and fined $250 for criminal contempt of court.

Rocky Cancels Newburgh Talk At Last Minute

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, opening the Newburgh - Beacon Bridge Saturday, canceled a speaking engagement at the last minute without explanation.

His wife, who had been scheduled to cut the ribbon for the $23-million bridge, did not appear at all.

In intermittent light rain, Rockefeller spoke briefly in duplicate ceremonies at each end of the 1½-mile bridge over the Hudson River. Then, 30 minutes before he was due to address a luncheon, he announced:

"I regret very much to say that a development has come up in the state which compels me to leave after this ribbon cutting."

Ex-Convict Tells About Strangling Widow To Death

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (AP)— Ex-convict George E. Chandler has admitted the strangulation death of a Pascagoula widow, Police Chief J. B. Gibson said Saturday.

Gibson quoted Chandler as saying he choked Mrs. Josephine Lott Rigal, 58, "on an impulse."

Mrs. Rigal's body was found by dove hunters last Monday in a field near Grand Bay, Ala., about 25 miles from Pascagoula. She had been missing since the night of Oct. 15.

Chandler told Detective Capt. J. B. Winstead that he strangled Mrs. Rigal and dumped her body in a corn field.

Chandler said that he needed Mrs. Rigal's car to get to Florida and used his hands to throttle her as she slept, Winstead said.

The detective quoted Chandler as saying he killed the woman "on the spur of the moment" because he was afraid she would awaken. Chandler said that he slipped an expensive ring from the woman's hand, wrapped her body in two blankets from the bed and drove to the field near Grand Bay where he left it.

Chandler was flown to Pascagoula Friday night from Shelby, N.C., where he had formally waived extradition proceedings.

OPEN HOUSE SLATED TODAY

By FRANCES PHILLIPS
World Staff Writer

An open house from 2-5 p.m. today will mark the beginning of the first major show for the recently-established Art Center of Monroe. Works in all media by art faculty members of Louisiana colleges and universities will be displayed for two weeks at the Art Center gallery at 1504 Riverside Drive.

Staffed by Art Center members to guide visitors through the paintings, the gallery will be open from 2-5 p.m. daily, except Monday, for the coming two weeks. The public is invited to come and view the exhibits at no charge.

First purchase in the show was won by Ida Kohlmeyer of the Newcomb-Tulane University School of Art. Her abstract oil painting was entitled "Immanence No. 2."

She is a prominent artist whose paintings have been exhibited in art galleries throughout the country. Among her numerous awards are those of the Ford Foundation and the Corcoran Biennial in Washington, D. C.

Three merit prizes were presented for outstanding paintings. Winners were art faculty members Ed Schutz, Northeast Louisiana State College; Jack Beard, Louisiana Tech, and James L. Steg, Newcomb-Tulane University.

Juror for the show was Mrs. Marie Hull of Jackson, Miss. She is a well-known painter, who has served in a similar capicity in exhibitions all over the country. Mrs. Hull has studied art both in New York and in Europe.

Displays at the local gallery change every six weeks. All works exhibited are by contemporary artists from throughout the Ark-La-Tex area.

The Monroe Art Center is the only gallery of its kind in Louisiana or the surrounding area. Established in May of this year, the organization has set up the Riverside Drive gallery and promoted art appreciation around Monroe.

Officials report that about 50 per cent of the visitors to the gallery are persons from out of town who have heard about the art shows.

Memberships are available in the Art Center in three types — patron, sustaining and associate. The patron membership is for those who want to help further the progress of the organization. Sustaining membership is the regular type, carrying the full privileges of the Art Center.

Most numerous are the associate memberships, which allow persons joining to participate in various activities of the group. Included in these are monthly programs of art education, such as lectures, slides and movies and commentary by prominent critics on different forms of art.

Traffic, Theft Violations Keep Officers Busy

Traffic violations and theft investigations kept Monroe police busy Saturday while the West Monroe department cleared an attempted house burglary with the apprehension of two juveniles.

West Monroe Police Chief Johnny B. Mitchell said the juveniles, both aged seven, have been released to the custody of their parents and will be handled in juvenile court. They reportedly attempted to break into the Jordan North residence at 403 Filhoil St., by cutting the screen on the back door Saturday afternoon. Whe this attempt failed, the boys allegedly tore open the mail in the mailbox which included a government check. The North family was not at home during the incident. and police reported the mail part of the occurrence to the U. S. Postal authoities.

The theft of $15 worth of frozen peach pies from Gentry's Dixie Dandy Store, 114 S. Riverfront St., Saturday morning was also being probed by the West Monroe department. E. H. Gentry, owner of the store, said that five cases of the peach pies were removed from in front of his store where they had been delivered by a truck around 5:30 a.m.

Meanwhile, Monroe police broadcast the description of a 1950, black Chevrolet sedan to local departments in an effort to find the vehicle which was stolen sometime Friday night. The car, property of Negro Albert Cherry, 4202 White St., was taken while it was parked at the Royal Feed and Seed Store in Monroe between 6 and 8 p.h. Friday.

The theft of about $15 worth of clothing from a clothes line was also being probed by the Monroe department. Mrs. E. T. Rushing, 209½ Powell Ave., said the items were taken sometime Friday night or early Saturday morning.

Monroe officers booked a Ruston man, Jimmy S. Meeks, 46, of 1001 California St., for theft by check. He was arrested by Ruston authorities for Monroe police who held a warrant for him charging him with cashing a bogus check for $35 at a local business. He was brought to Monroe and held under $110 bond.

Monroe police booked three on driving violations early Saturday and West Monroe officers booked one for driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages late Friday. Robert W. Calvert, 39, 3111 Dick Taylor St., Monroe, was apprehended by West Monroe police at 11:50 p.m. Friday on Cypress Street on the count.

At 1:10 a.m. Saturday, Monroe police booked Charles Wendell Statts, 27, of 115 N. Charmingdale Dr., for DWI, reckless driving and speeding 72 miles per hour in a 35 mph zone. He was taken into custoday at the the intersection of Jackson and S. Grand Streets. Joe J. Harper, 1010 Breard St., Negro, was booked for DWI and reckless driving at 2:35 a.m. after being arested at N. 8th and Breard Streets. James Carroll Thorp, 19, of Rt. 2 Box 199, was charged with DWI, reckless driving and speeding 50 miles an hour in a 25 mph zone at 4:30 a.m. after being apprehended at Second and Plum Streets.

Late Saturday, Monroe officers booked another man for DWI and reckless driving, Reniell Leon Norman, P. O. Box 112, Huttig, Ark., was booked on the counts at 5:58 p.m. after being arrested at North 4th and Louisville Ave. He was also charged with vagrancy and held under a $500 bond.

Meanwhile, at 9:30 p.m., West Monroe officers booked an 18-year-old New Orleans youth, Robert Joseph Dolce, for selling from door to door in violation of the City Ordinance 1258. The West Monroe department also booked a Choudrant man, Joe C. Lindsay, Rt. 2, for DWI and driving without a valid driver's license at 10 p.m. Saturday. He was taken into custody on Natchitoches Street.

Fire Damages Storage Room For Chemicals

A store room of highly explosive chemicals was saved from destruction by quick acting Monroe firemen who extinguished flames at the building located off Louisville Avenue Saturday night.

Units three and five from the fire department managed to cool the storage room for chemicals at the Adams Paper Converting Co. located on Superior Lane in time to prevent explosion of the chemicals.

C. J. Wittlief, superintendent of the paper company, said that chemicals inside were saved with exception of a small amount not stored in metal drums.

The storage building was extensively damaged, according to firemen. Cause of the fire was undetermined and was being investigated. The blaze was discovered by an unidentified workman who had entered the building for an item and saw the falmes around 10 p.m.

One-Car Wrecks Fatal To Three In Louisiana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three persons died accidental deaths during the early part of the weekend in Louisiana, all in one-car traffic mishaps.

Pvt. Roger G. Richardson, 18, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was pronounced dead early Saturday at a De Ridder hospital after a one-car accident 15 miles east of De Ridder. Two other Fort Polk soldiers suffered minor injuries.

The Longs stand for People!

Concern for the people, and especially those in our community who need assistance, has always been of prime interest to the Longs.
Under Long administrations, Louisiana's welfare program has become one of the best in the nation, however, it must be improved and developed to aid those who need it most.
GILLIS LONG has pledged to continue and to expand this essential program, where necessary, and to eliminate any waste or abuse that now exist.
The Longs have always stood for the progress of the people and have initiated the programs that benefit every member of the community. Our Charity hospitals, free schoolbooks, hot lunches and the development of our bridges and highways are proof that THE LONGS STAND FOR PEOPLE!
Louisiana needs a man of dynamic energy and determination to lead us during the next four years . . . elect a dedicated man of the people . . . GILLIS LONG, Governor on December 7th.

Traffic, Theft Violations Keep Officers Busy

Traffic violations and theft investigations kept Monroe police busy Saturday while the West Monroe department cleared an attempted house burglary with the apprehension of two juveniles.

West Monroe Police Chief Johnny B. Mitchell said the juveniles, both aged seven, have been released to the custody of their parents and will be handled in juvenile court. They reportedly attempted to break into the Jordan North residence at 403 Filhoil St., by cutting the screen on the back door Saturday afternoon. Whe this attempt failed, the boys allegedly tore open the mail in the mailbox which included a government check. The North family was not at home during the incident. and police reported the mail part of the occurrence to the U. S. Postal authoities.

The theft of $15 worth of frozen peach pies from Gentry's Dixie Dandy Store, 114 S. Riverfront St., Saturday morning was also being probed by the West Monroe department. E. H. Gentry, owner of the store, said that five cases of the peach pies were removed from in front of his store where they had been delivered by a truck around 5:30 a.m.

Meanwhile, Monroe police broadcast the description of a 1950, black Chevrolet sedan to local departments in an effort to find the vehicle which was stolen sometime Friday night. The car, property of Negro Albert Cherry, 4202 White St., was taken while it was parked at the Royal Feed and Seed Store in Monroe between 6 and 8 p.h. Friday.

The theft of about $15 worth of clothing from a clothes line was also being probed by the Monroe department. Mrs. E. T. Rushing, 209½ Powell Ave., said the items were taken sometime Friday night or early Saturday morning.

Monroe officers booked a Ruston man, Jimmy S. Meeks, 46, of 1001 California St., for theft by check. He was arrested by Ruston authorities for Monroe police who held a warrant for him charging him with cashing a bogus check for $35 at a local business. He was brought to Monroe and held under $110 bond.

Monroe police booked three on driving violations early Saturday and West Monroe officers booked one for driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages late Friday. Robert W. Calvert, 39, 3111 Dick Taylor St., Monroe, was apprehended by West Monroe police at 11:50 p.m. Friday on Cypress Street on the count.

At 1:10 a.m. Saturday, Monroe police booked Charles Wendell Statts, 27, of 115 N. Charmingdale Dr., for DWI, reckless driving and speeding 72 miles per hour in a 35 mph zone. He was taken into custoday at the the intersection of Jackson and S. Grand Streets. Joe J. Harper, 1010 Breard St., Negro, was booked for DWI and reckless driving at 2:35 a.m. after being arested at N. 8th and Breard Streets. James Carroll Thorp, 19, of Rt. 2 Box 199, was charged with DWI, reckless driving and speeding 50 miles an hour in a 25 mph zone at 4:30 a.m. after being apprehended at Second and Plum Streets.

Late Saturday, Monroe officers booked another man for DWI and reckless driving, Reniell Leon Norman, P. O. Box 112, Huttig, Ark., was booked on the counts at 5:58 p.m. after being arrested at North 4th and Louisville Ave. He was also charged with vagrancy and held under a $500 bond.

Meanwhile, at 9:30 p.m., West Monroe officers booked an 18-year-old New Orleans youth, Robert Joseph Dolce, for selling from door to door in violation of the City Ordinance 1258. The West Monroe department also booked a Choudrant man, Joe C. Lindsay, Rt. 2, for DWI and driving without a valid driver's license at 10 p.m. Saturday. He was taken into custody on Natchitoches Street.

Fire Damages Storage Room For Chemicals

A store room of highly explosive chemicals was saved from destruction by quick acting Monroe firemen who extinquished flames at the building located off Louisville Avenue Saturday night.

Units three and five from the fire department managed to cool the storage room for chemicals at the Adams Paper Converting Co. located on Superior Lane in time to prevent explosion of the chemicals.

C. J. Wittlief, superintendent of the paper company, said that chemicals inside were saved with exception of a small amount not stored in metal drums.

The storage building was extensively damaged, according to firemen. Cause of the fire was undetermined and was being investigated. The blaze was discovered by an unidentified workman who had entered the building for an item and saw the falmes around 10 p.m.

One-Car Wrecks Fatal To Three In Louisiana

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three persons died accidental deaths during the early part of the weekend in Louisiana, all in one-car traffic mishaps.

Pvt. Roger G. Richardson, 18, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was pronounced dead early Saturday at a De Ridder hospital after a one-car accident 15 miles east of De Ridder. Two other Fort Polk soldiers suffered minor injuries.

Eldred Jason, 23-year-old Lecompte Negro, was killed when his car went off the road and crashed on Highway 112 about two miles west of Lecompte Friday night.

George Turner Jr., an Alexandria Negro, was killed Saturday in a crash near the Alexandria cty limits. Officers said Turner was driving at a high speed and skidded into a utility pole when Turner applied his brakes in an effort to avoid another car.

Kennon

ALBANY (Special) — Robert F. Kennon, candidate for governor, Saturday challenged a proposal by opponent John J. McKeithen to remove tolls from the Mississippi River bridge at New Orleans as "reckless irresponsible and a threat to the state's entire road program."

Kennon said the bridge was built with revenue bonds during his previous administration — to take New Orleans west bank traffic off the ferries and speed up commerce across the river. The huge bridge spans the Mississippi River near the foot of Canal Street.

"We created the New Orleans Bridge Authority and it has done a wonderful job," Kennon said. "In a few years the bridge will be paid for with tolls which were previously going to ferry operators.

"Now McKeithen proposes to take funds from the statewide road program to pay off the bridge. Can you imagine what would happen to every other road project in the state?" Kennon asked.

"McKeithen has posted a political billboard near the New Orleans bridge promising to make this bridge toll free if he is elected governor.

"This is an obvious political promise by McKeithen without first making a study of the financing arrangement on the bridge," Kennon said.

"The Pontchartrain Causeway was started under my administration using the same sound method of financing as that used to build the Mississippi River bridge. These projects virtually removed New Orleans from the status of an island city and gave good access in every direction. We used good businesslike practices to do it."

Kennon reminded his listeners that promises are cheap in a political campaign, and added "some of the candidates in this race have made so many commitments they couldn't meet one fifth of them if they should be elected."

Kirkpatrick

PINEVILLE (Special) — Independent gubernatorial candidate Claude Kirkpatrick, Saturday spoke before a crowd of supporters at homecoming at Louisiana College in Pineville.

Kirkpatrick received his BA degree here in 1938, where his fellow students honored him by electing him "student council president." He made the honor roll and at the same time made his letter in football.

"The accent today is on quality education and as governor of this great state of ours my first task will be to make sure all our young people get the best education money can buy," Kirkpatrick said.

"I am thankful for the education I received here, for I have been able to achieve success in the business world and as a businessman I promise businesslike government.

"Business like government means a balanced budget, elimination of all unnecessary departments, fewer unclassified workers. I will work with all the powers of the governor's office to increase the prestige and authority of the legislature. I will continue to expand on the investing of idle funds of the state but not to the point of endangering or competing with private business."

Morrison

BATON ROUGE (Special) — DeLesseps "Chep" Morrison promised Saturday that as governor he would initiate a priority program to "Meet the great human needs of our people."

Morrison, campaigning in Baton Rouge with members of his ticket, told supporters that by human needs he meant such areas as "education and care of the aged, sick and handicapped."

Louisiana's political leaders in the past "have spent too much time taking care of themselves and not enough in providing for the needs of you, the people," Morrison charged.

In addition to earmarking additional funds for state educational institutions, Morrison said he would also "greatly expand our present program for retarded children. . .Our 90,000 little forgotten souls."

Matching funds are available to implement an adequate program for the retarded, Morrison said. "The only thing lacking for needed improvements in this field and so many others is, as it has been for so long in Louisiana, the proper caliber of leadership at the state level."

Morrison also said he would de-politicalize the state's charity hospital system, head it with a staff of professionals and see that sufficient funds were provided. He also cited the "urgent need" for a re-training program for Louisiana's unemployed.

McKeithen

SERRANTO (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate John McKeithen, winding up a three day stumping tour, told crowds here that as governor he will sponsor legislation that will protect the womans rights in the family homestead.

McKeithen said, "At present the husband can sell the family homestead even though it is community property, without the permission or signature of the wife. I feel that this is an unfair arrangement and that the woman should have the right and protection of the law. I will therefore, sponser legislation of both husband and wife to mortgage or sell the family homestead."

McKeithen continued, "That way the wife can know that she and her children will have the protection of the law, making secure the family homestead. That way the sanctity of the family homestaed will be maintained and equal rights afforded both husband and wife. I think this is only fair and I shall push for this measure in the very first session of the legislature."

Louisiana Grows Where Rural Power Goes

Tourism and year-around outdoorsports are fast becoming one of lovely Louisiana's greatest assets —a treasure trove that is just beginning to be tapped.

Few things have done—and are doing—more for this promising new industry than the "total area coverage" ideal of Louisiana's home-owned and managed Electric Cooperatives. This new concept in the electric industry—an exclusive of the non-profit Cooperatives—enables tourists and our own town and city people to enjoy the highways and by-ways of our fabulous Louisiana.

Yes, the difference between a wonderful vacation and discomfort is often the presence of low-cost rural power. The member-owned Electric Cooperatives have built more than 25,000 miles of far-flung power lines to serve rural areas in Louisiana which nobody else cared to serve.

Just think what this means to the traveler, the camper, the duck hunter, the fisherman—to everybody, in both town and country.

No matter where a rural electric line goes, from the remotest moss-hung bayou to the highest hill top, or the most distant marsh island, lovely Louisiana grows. Progress follows every one of those 25,000 miles of lines nobody else would build when the chances of profit seemed slim.

This locally-owned Electric Cooperative is proud of its contributions to rural development, to our growing tourism and to main street prosperity.

Louisiana Grows Where Rural Power Goes

Tourism and year-around outdoorsports are fast becoming one of lovely Louisiana's greatest assets—a treasure trove that is just beginning to be tapped.

Few things have done—and are doing—more for this promising new industry than the "total area coverage" ideal of Louisiana's home-owned and managed Electric Cooperatives. This new concept in the electric industry—an exclusive of the non-profit Cooperatives—enables tourists and our own town and city people to enjoy the highways and by-ways of our fabulous Louisiana.

Yes, the difference between a wonderful vacation and discomfort is often the presence of low-cost rural power. The member-owned Electric Cooperatives have built more than 25,000 miles of far-flung power lines to serve rural areas in Louisiana which nobody else cared to serve.

Just think what this means to the traveler, the camper, the duck hunter, the fisherman—to everybody, in both town and country.

No matter where a rural electric line goes, from the remotest moss-hung bayou to the highest hill top, or the most distant marsh island, lovely Louisiana grows. Progress follows every one of those 25,000 miles of lines nobody else would build when the chances of profit seemed slim.

This locally-owned Electric Cooperative is proud of its contributions to rural development, to our growing tourism and to main street prosperity.

Wily Swindler Caught Again By British Police

he slipped his handcuffs, vanished into the crowd and hailed a taxi. He told the driver to take him to London.

On the way, said driver John Taylor, Woodfall stopped at the Jockey Club in Newmarket and told them he wanted to enter a horse in a forthcoming race. Then he took Taylor out for a champagne lunch.

In London, he visited the Royal Automobile Club, the Jockey Club and the Picadilly Hotel. Here he vanished, and Taylor went to the police.

Woodfall spent the night at another hotel, the Bristol, which is managed by Mrs. Josephine Williams. By a coincidence, Mrs. Williams had managed a hotel in Ireland eight years ago and Woodfall had been a guest there —for one night.

Saturday morning she read in the newspapers about his escape and telephoned the police. They added, there was a scuffle and Woodfall fled.

Two detectives caught up with him outside Paddington station and collared him. That was when Woodfall whipped out the handcuffs and cried to a passerby.

He has another date in court on Monday.

Fulbright Urges Approval To Sell India More Rice

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., urged Saturday that the Agriculture Department approve the sale to India of an additional 116,000 tons of rice this year. Payment would be in Indian currency.

He said that in addition to India's authorized purchase of 250,000 tons this year India wants to buy the 116,000 tons of last year's allocation which it did not purchase then.

In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman, the senator recommended that the additional purchase be approved.

"I have been advised that a recent delegation representing the government of India asked for renewal of the 4-year rice agreement increasing the amount to 500,000 tons per year," Fulbright said.

"This delegation reportedly urged the U.S. government to increase the national rice acreage allotment to make this quantity of rice available. I hope this suggestion is being given serious consideration by departmental officials."

Fulbright also reminded Freeman of the senator's position "that more emphasis should be placed on use of food as a foreign policy tool."

Fulbright is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Area Man Hurt In Auto Mishap

DELHI (Special) — A Lake Providence man was injured about three miles south of here on La. Hwy. 17 when his late-model sedan ran off the road and crashed into a culvert.

Taken to St. Fancis Hospital in Monroe was Delphis McKenzie who reportedly suffered multiple lacerations about the arms and face, both legs broken and possible internal injuries.

Reports indicate that McKenzie was traveling south on the highway when the mishap occurred, around 7 p.m. Saturday. He was traveling alone and no other vehicles were involved.

The accident is under investigation by state troopers.

gime Saturday by exulting in the streets. But early Sunday they had returned to their homes. The city was quiet.

The wave of celebration was heightened by the release of Buddhist monks from jails. They had been arrested earlier this year in a crackdown by the Diem regime on Buddhists.

In the background, Gen. Doung Van Minh and his revolutionary junta named Nguyen Ngoc Tho, a slender 55-year-old Buddhist, as premier of the provisional government, but have not yet made an official announcement. He was vice president under Diem, but had little power.

Diplomatic sources said they believed the United States will recognize the new government as soon as it is officially formed.

Whether Tho becomes a real administrator or a figurehead under military control, U.S. officials expected South Viet Nam to drop preoccupation with its political-religious crisis and step up the American-backed war against Communist guerrillas.

Censorship imposed in Saigon at the outset of the uprising Friday was eased. Censors permitted transmission of a backlog of news stories, some long delayed.

Detachments of the army, marines and air force headed by the junta battled down resistance of palace guard and elite special forces in an 18-hour fight that ended shortly before dawn. A cease-fire was called.

The generals told newsmen the brothers slipped out of their hands during the cease-fire, apparently boarding a departing truck while casualties were being hauled from the blasted grounds of the palace.

The brothers sought refuge at a church in a Chinese quarter of suburban Cholon. Though the Roman Catholic Church condemns suicide, Radio Saigon said the two took their own lives after being arrested.

Indicating they had been free several hours, the junta said they killed themselves at 10:45 a.m.

There was speculation they had actually been slain by revolutionary troops and that the generals were presenting their death as suicide to avoid embarrassment.

The military men had said Friday night the brothers would be allowed to leave the country if they surrendered peacefully.

The junta announced casualties on the revolutionary side had been only about five killed and 20 wounded. Casualties of the loyalist troops were not known, but they also appeared fairly light.

Crowds around the shattered palace cheered tank drivers, marines and other troops who spearheaded the revolution.

Wild scenes of enthusiasm greeted Buddhist leaders when they returned to their pagodas after release from jail.

Emotional Buddhists flocked around them in the cloisters in Xa Loi and An Quang pagodas that had been deserted since Diem cracked down on pagodas Aug. 21.

One of the foremost monks released was Thich Duc Niep, regarded as a key organizer of the Buddhist cries of persecution into a movement that eventually led to Diem's downfall.

Emotional Buddhists flocked around them in the cloisters in Xa Loi and An Quang pagodas that had been deserted since Diem cracked down on pagodas Aug. 21.

One of the foremost monks released was Thich Duc Niep, regarded as a key organizer of the Buddhist cries of persecution into a movement that eventually led to Diem's downfall.

Cheers In Saigon Foretell Acceptance Of Military Coup

Editor's Note — William L. Ryan, a Communist affairs specialist for the Associated Press is on a tour of Asia. He left Viet Nam a few days before the revolution broke out there.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

TOKYO (AP)—Jubilant cheers in Saigon's streets foretell wide popular acceptance of a military coup d'etat which overthrew President Ngo Dinh Diem.

This can automatically solve a variety of problems and open the way for a total war effort against the Communist guerrillas in South Viet Nam.

When calm returns to Saigon—and when proper preparations are made—there likely will be a determined drive by South Vietnamese forces, backed, supplied and trained by Americans in the Mekong River delta area.

"Give us political stability and we could wrap this thing up in six months," an American officer told me recently in Viet Nam. Given the stability, he was willing to bet the delta offensive would come "damned soon."

The delta must be the decisive area for the Vietnamese in their war against Communist guerrillas known as the Viet Cong. If that part of the country can be cleaned up, South Viet Nam can hope for a degree of peace—at least to the extent the country knew a measure of peace before the Communists stepped up their jungle war effort late in 1959.

NEWS ANALYSIS

The U.S. military has reported that the Vietnamese generals have appointed a civilian, former Vice President Nguyen Ngoc Tho, as premier.

This would indicate an effort by the military to get themselves accepted by the people. It implies a promise to turn the government over to civilians when that is feasible.

In this, the influence if not the direct advice of the Americans may be playing a part. The leader of the well-organized coup against the Ngo Dinh family, Lt. Gen. Duong Van Minh known as Big Minh—is noted for his pro-American attitude.

Some parts of South Viet Nam are owned by the Viet Cong at the present time. This is particularly true of the Ca Mau Peninsula in the southeast corner. There the Communists levy taxes, recruit at will and run whatever government there may be.

Neville To Host Southern Area Student Councils

Over 500 students and their sponsors from 13 Southern states are expected to attend the annual convention of the Southern Association of Student Councils at Neville High School here.

The convention, slated for Nov. 6 - 9, will begin Wednesday with registration at the school from 12 until 5 p.m.

Scheduled to appear as a guest speaker is Pat Boone, internationally famous actor and singing star from Tennessee.

The four-day slate of activities will include an executive committee meeting on Wednesday, following the registration and a sponsor's dinner at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Student entertainment Wednesday evening will be in the form of a "mixer" at the Neville gymnasium with music by the Jumping Jacks.

Thursday will begin with various discussion groups and end with a 7:30 p.m. banquet and dance at Northeast Louisiana State College's Gunby Dining Hall.

Convention activities will reach a high point Friday with the representatives participating in a general session, various discussion groups, a sponsor's meeting, a problem clinic, individual state meetings and a student political rally. Boone is scheduled to speak at the general session.

Climaxing the convention Saturday will be a general election for association officers and a closing session. In the election the states will cast bloc votes.

Red Terrorists Machine Gun 2 Caracas Police

CARACAS, V-nezuela (AP) — Pro-Communist terrorists firing a machine gun killed two policemen Saturday in a patrol car in Caracas.

One terrorist was wounded but his companions picked him up and fled in a car.

Police blamed the attack on the Armed Forces of National Liberation — (FALN — which is trying to topple President Romulo Betancourt's government.

The ambush brought to 55 the number of Caracas policemen slain by terrorists in the last three years.

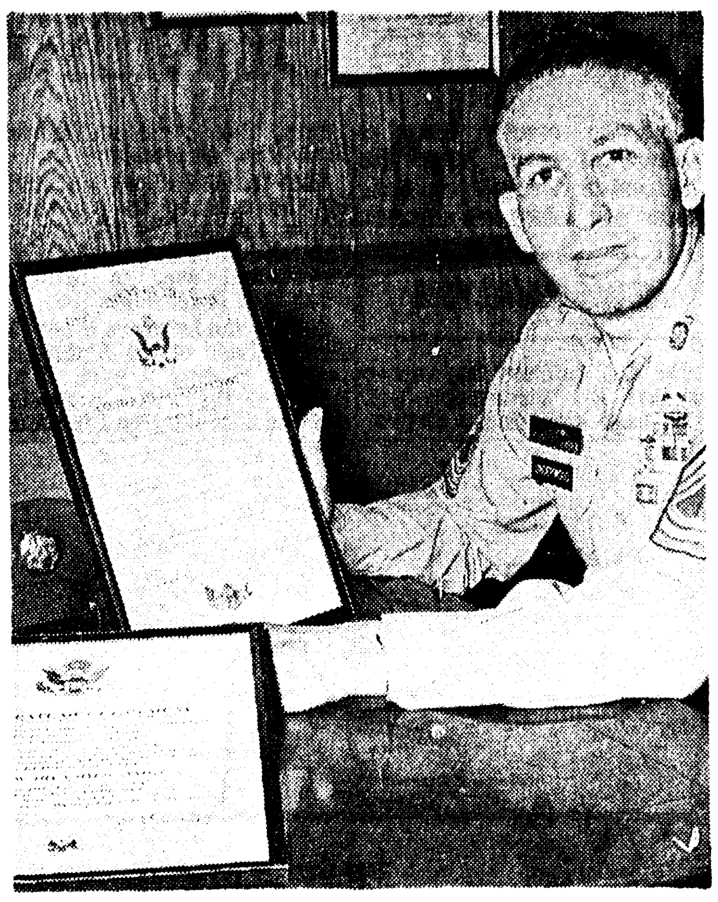
ENLISTS 2,340 IN ARMY

Combat Veteran, Recruiter Retires



M.SGT. QUILLIEN. Underwood received certificates of apreciation from the U.S. Army Chief of Staff and the Army's Adjutant General when he retired from the service this week after 20 years duty. He saw combat in two wars and enlisted 2,340 persons during his recruiting duty. (Staff photo by Bob Frazier.)

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

A front-line combat veteran of two wars with nine battle stars turn recruiter? It happened in the case of M.Sgt. Quillie N. Underwood. He enlisted 2,340 men and women into the U.S. Army.

Underwood retired from the service Thursday, after 20 years duty.

He went into the Army at the heighth of World War II as an 18-year-old Rayville kid, and was sent to the front lines in the Pacific.

He wound up with the Combat Infantry badge, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Presidential citations from two countries and nine other decorations.

His duty rated notice by the U.S. Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Earl G. Wheeler, who has given Underwood a certificate of appreciation for his "many years of outstanding service."

Next step: oil field work with his father-in-law, A. E. Mathieu of Delhi, with permanent location slated in Houma in south Louisiana.

But he still remembers how rain saved his life in the mountains of Leyte, when his patrol was cut down by Japanese ambush.

It was December 1, 1944, and he had been part of the 32nd Infantry (Red Arrow) Division in the Southwest Pacific since March when he finished basic training.

He was on the front lines two hours after landing on New Guinea, and in September had moved on with the first invasion wave to hit Morotai where the Japanese were entrenched.

Then, on the first of December, he was on patrol on Leyte.

"We had been behind enemy lines, and went back to our headquarters to draw rations and ammunition. As we were heading back to the front to join our outfit, we were hit behind our own lines.

"That was at 10:30 on the morning of the first. We had taken a 10-minute break on top of a hill, and the Japs were concealed in the trees.

"They opened fire and the first three shots got three of our guys.

"The only way we could get out of that particular ambush was because it started raining so hard. It was one of those heavy tropical rains, and it came down so hard that we eased out without being seen, at 2:30 that afternoon.

"All the other times I hated to see the rain, it was so wet and cold. But that particular time it was wonderful.

"We walked out carrying our wounded who couldn't be walked out. Out of 23 of us who were ambushed, five were killed and eight wounded.

"We got to the aid station at 9 the next night. The American troops who went to pick up the bodies of our dead later told us they had found 20 dead Japs, so we did get some in that particular little battle."

Underwood was wounded in the battle, and received the Purple Heart.

He was hospitalized, then returned to Leyte.

"I found out my outfit was on Luzon, so I hitchhiked by boat to join them there."

Bitter fighting was going on.

"You could get the heck shot out of you," he comments. "This was a line company of infantrymen — men who see the whites of a man's eyes. They're known as the queens of battle."

Occupation duty came next. The war ended on August 14, 1945, and Underwood was one of the first occupation troops to land at Sendai on Honshu in northern Japan.

"The most interesting thing was being around people who just a few days before had been fighting us," Underwood reveals. "I still kept my eyes peeled, and I was alert as I could be for a long time."

"One thing I noticed was the way they honored General MacArthur — they showed him respect for being such a great leader.

"And it was interesting to see the different customs of the country — and the way the Japanese were changing over to the American way of doing things."

He was discharged from the Army on January 10, 1946 — and re-enlisted in the Army Air Force on January 29.

He was assigned to Monroe as recruiting sergeant for the Army and Air Force. On January 30, 1949, he re-enlisted in the Regular Army (infantry) and was assigned to the 25th Infantry Division in Osaka, Japan.

Underwood was a member of the defense platoon of the division, which concentrated on guerrilla warfare.

At the outbreak of the Korean War, he was flown to Korea as part of an advanced party for the 25th Division, arriving July 6, 1950.

"We didn't know a war was going on in Korea until we got there and were sent out on patrol." Underwood reveals. "We were told we'd be going down 'to straighten things out'. We thought we'd be there for two or three months. We stayed 14.

"Of the eight men in my patrol, seven had seen duty in World War II. We went up and down that peninsula like a yo-yo. We were there to stop communism before it spread here — it looked like it was spreading like the itch — I guess it still is."

After 14 months on the front lines, he was reassigned to U.S. Army recruiting duty in Monroe, from 1951 to 1955, then sent to Korea from August 1955 to November 1956 as recruiting non - commissioned officer in charge of the 24th Infantry Division.

"Korea still looked the same. It still had the dirty rice paddies. No fighting was going on, but except for that I didn't see any change in the country over the four years I was gone."

From Korea, he went to Cortland, New York, on recruiting duty again, then transferred back to Monroe as recruiting station commander here.

In January, he and his family will move to Houma to be close to the oil field work. He now lives at 731 Lakeshore Dr. with his wife, the former Barbara Mathieu of Delhi and their children Bobby, 9 and Theresa, 8.

"I've enjoyed working with the people here," Underwood stressed. A native of Winnsboro and graduate of Rayville High School, he points out, "Without the help of the people here, my job wouldn't have been successful."

He has been recruiter for Jackson, Lincoln, Union, East Carroll, West Carroll, Morehouse, Ouachita, Caldwell, Madison and Richland parishes.

He received two citations upon retirement, one signed by Maj. Gen. J. A. Lambert, adjutant general of the Army, and the other by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army.

City Store Gets Certificate Of Commendation

A Monroe women's apparel store, Silverstein's, 342 DeSiard, was one of 33 American retail stores awarded the "Retailing Serves America" Certificate of Commendation by the National Retail Merchants Association and Readers Digest.

The certificates are awarded to retail stores "for conducting praiseworthy projects that have enhanced the sature of retailing in their respective communities."

Notification of the certificate award came from Robert Gur-Arie, public relations director of the National Retail Merchants Association, New York City.

Registrar Will Keep Long Hours

JONESVILLE (Special) — The office of the registrar of voters will be open until 9 p.m. through Wednesday, according to registrar Douglas Stockman.

Approximately 3,800 persons have registered for the Dec. 7 first Democratic primary.

"Those who wait until the last day or two may find it impossible to be registered," Stockman siad.

REMARRIAGE ISSUE

2 Catholic Papers Argue Rocky's Fix

NEW YORK (AP)—The Commonweal, a magazine published by Catholic laymen, said Saturday Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller should be judged as a possible presidential contender on his entire program and stance rather than his divorce and remarriage.

The Commonweal took issue with the Sign, a Catholic magazine published by the Passionist fathers, that said Rockefeller should withdraw as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination because of his marital record.

"As far as the execution of his public duties goes, it is largely irrevelant whether the presidency is filled by a divorced man," said the Commonweal.

"Clearly the fact of a divorce, by itself, gives no indication of a president's ability or inability to fulfill his duties."

Referring to the Sign's withdrawal suggestion, the Commonweal said:

"The assumption here seems to be that a divorced man and woman who remarry cannot possibly be people of integrity and character.

"There is no room here for qualifications; no awareness that perhaps not all the facts are in; no willingness, even, to judge the man's moral stance in terms of public and private acts performed over the length of an adult life. The candidate is simply dismissed in a few lines as unworthy of real consideration."

The Commonweal noted that the Sign had said that Rockefeller transgressed "our code of life" and had been rebuked by "Americans of all faiths." Rockefeller is a Baptist.

"Another argument has been smuggled in here, under cover of the phrase 'Americans of all faiths,' and that is Catholic opposition to divorce," said the Commonweal.

"But whose 'code of life' is Gov. Rockefeller expected to live by? His own code does not prohibit divorce and remarriage. As tragic as the break-up of two families may be, there is no evidence that Rockefeller acted against his own best conscience."

The Commonweal said any act is politically relevant if enough voters think it is and that Rockefeller's divorce and remarriage therefore were relevant. It said any attempt to separate the political from some personal acts seemed futile.

"But," the magazine said, "a man's private affairs, except as they may cast some doubt on his ability to function—to make rational decisions, to work for the common good, to put public before private advantage—ought not to overshadow the entire program and stance he offers the electorate.

"It is primarily on this basis that Gov. Rockefeller should be judged as a candidate for the presidency."

The magazine expressed no preference for any potential candidate.

J. T. RICHARDSON

candidate for

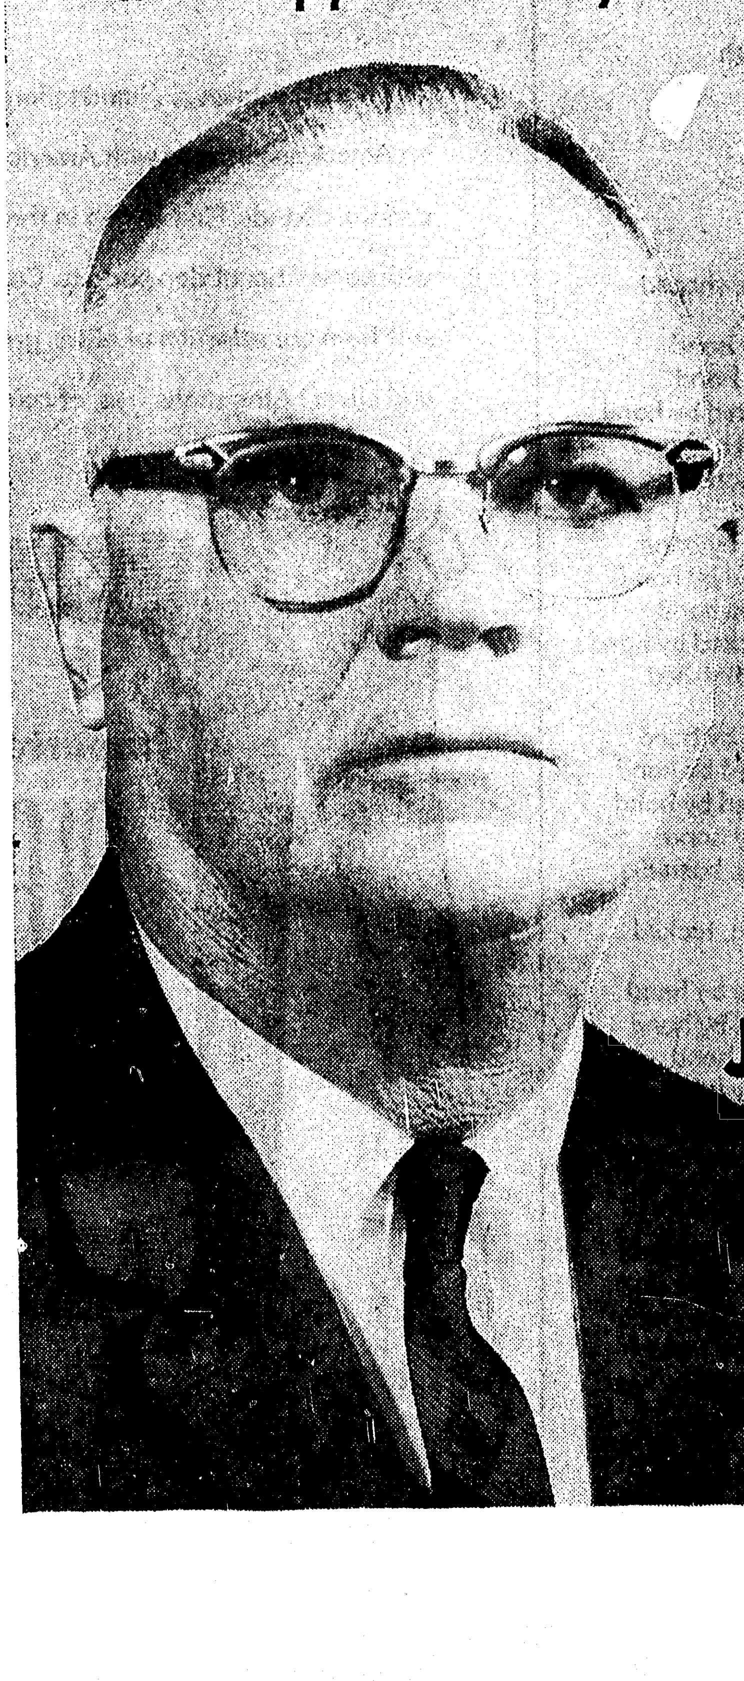
will appreciate your vote and support



I entered this campaign for a seat in the Louisiana Senate because of my deep concern about the future of our state and nation. Because of this concern, I could not sit by in this critical period without offering my services to the people of the 28th Senatorial District. It is my conviction that people who are qualified must step forward to meet the challenges of our day, or our way of life will continue to be in jeopardy. This is true even though some personal sacrifice may be involved on the part of individuals filling these important positions.

I am married and the father of three sons; a graduate of Louisiana Tech with an engineering degree; a member of the Lincoln Parish Police Jury with a record of leadership; and have been engaged in the contracting and cattle business for many years. My military experience consists of 21 years of active and reserve service.

When elected, I will weigh each issue carefully, and pledge myself to work and vote for the best interests of the people of this district. Since I am not obligated to any political clique, each decision will be MY OWN and I will not be swayed by outside pressures or influences.

ENLISTS 2,340 IN ARMY

Combat Veteran, Recruiter Retires

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

A front-line combat veteran of two wars with nine battle stars turn recruiter? It happened in the case of M.Sgt. Quillie N. Underwood. He enlisted 2,340 men and women into the U.S. Army.

Underwood retired from the service Thursday, after 20 years duty.

He went into the Army at the heighth of World War II as an 18-year-old Rayville kid, and was sent to the front lines in the Pacific.

He wound up with the Combat Infantry badge, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Presidential citations from two countries and nine other decorations.

His duty rated notice by the U.S. Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Earl G. Wheeler, who has given Underwood a certificate of appreciation for his "many years of outstanding service."

Next step: oil field work with his father-in-law, A. E. Mathieu of Delhi, with permanent location slated in Houma in south Louisiana.

But he still remembers how rain saved his life in the mountains of Leyte, when his patrol was cut down by Japanese ambush.

It was December 1, 1944, and he had been part of the 32nd Infantry (Red Arrow) Division in the Southwest Pacific since March when he finished basic training.

He was on the front lines two hours after landing on New Guinea, and in September had moved on with the first invasion wave to hit Morotai where the Japanese were entrenched.

Then, on the first of December, he was on patrol on Leyte.

"We had been behind enemy lines, and went back to our headquarters to draw rations and ammunition. As we were heading back to the front to join our outfit, we were hit behind our own lines.

"That was at 10:30 on the morning of the first. We had taken a 10-minute break on top of a hill, and the Japs were concealed in the trees.

"They opened fire and the first three shots got three of our guys.

"The only way we could get out of that particular ambush was because it started raining so hard. It was one of those heavy tropical rains, and it came down so hard that we eased out without being seen, at 2:30 that afternoon.

"All the other times I hated to see the rain, it was so wet and cold. But that particular time it was wonderful.

"We walked out carrying our wounded who couldn't be walked out. Out of 23 of us who were ambushed, five were killed and eight wounded.

"We got to the aid station at 9 the next night. The American troops who went to pick up the bodies of our dead later told us they had found 20 dead Japs, so we did get some in that particular little battle."

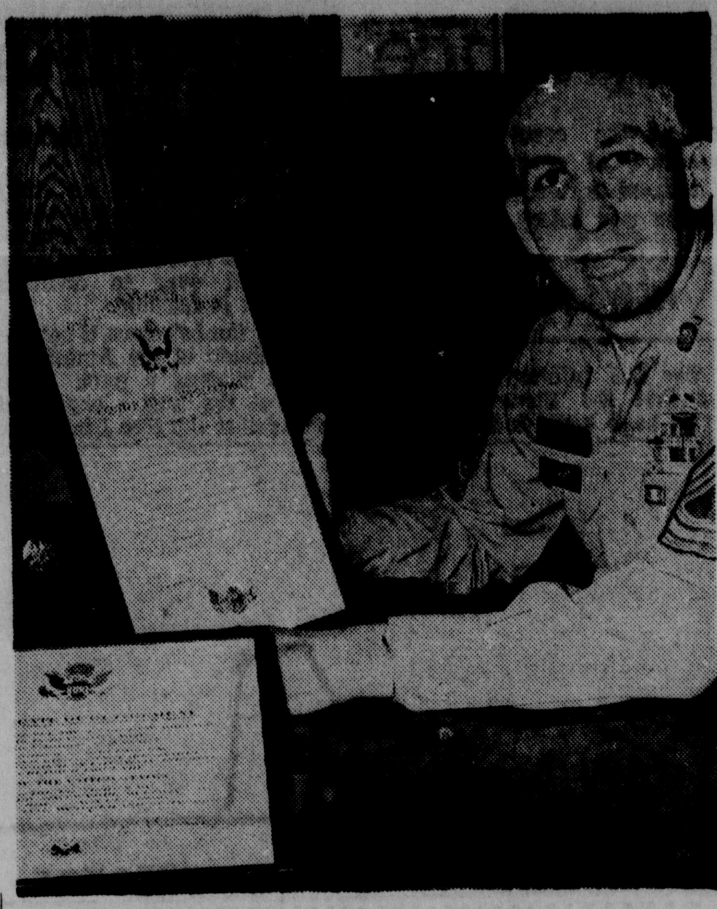
Underwood was wounded in the battle, and received the Purple Heart.

He was hospitalized, then returned to Leyte.

"I found out my outfit was on Luzon, so I hitchhiked by boat to join them there."

Bitter fighting was going on.

"You could get the heck shot out of you," he comments. "This was a line company of infantrymen — men who see the whites of a man's eyes. They're known as the queens of battle."



M.SGT. QUILLIEN. Underwood received certificates of apreciation from the U.S. Army Chief of Staff and the Army's Adjutant General when he retired from the service this week after 20 years duty. He saw combat in two wars and enlisted 2,340 persons during his recruiting duty. (Staff photo by Bob Frazier.)

Occupation duty came next. The war ended on August 14, 1945, and Underwood was one of the first occupation troops to land at Sendai on Honshu in northern Japan.

"The most interesting thing was being around people who just a few days before had been fighting us," Underwood reveals. "I still kept my eyes peeled, and I was alert as I could be for a long time."

"One thing I noticed was the way they honored General MacArthur — they showed him respect for being such a great leader.

"And it was interesting to see the different customs of the country — and the way the Japanese were changing over to the American way of doing things."

He was discharged from the Army on January 10, 1946 — and re-enlisted in the Army Air Force on January 29.

He was assigned to Monroe as recruiting sergeant for the Army and Air Force. On January 30, 1949, he re-enlisted in the Regular Army (infantry) and was assigned to the 25th Infantry Division in Osaka, Japan.

Underwood was a member of the defense platoon of the division, which concentrated on guerrilla warfare.

At the outbreak of the Korean War, he was flown to Korea as part of an advanced party for the 25th Division, arriving July 6, 1950.

"We didn't know a war was going on in Korea until we got there and were sent out on patrol," Underwood reveals. "We were told we'd be going down 'to straighten things out'. We thought we'd be there for two or three months. We stayed 14.

"Of the eight men in my patrol, seven had seen duty in World War II. We went up and down that peninsula like a yo-yo. We were there to stop communism before it spread here — it looked like it was spreading like the itch — I guess it still is."

After 14 months on the front lines, he was reassigned to U.S. Army recruiting duty in Monroe, from 1951 to 1955, then sent to Korea from August 1955 to November 1956 as recruiting non - commissioned officer in charge of the 24th Infantry Division.

"Korea still looked the same. It still had the dirty rice paddies. No fighting was going on, but except for that I didn't see any change in the country over the four years I was gone."

From Korea, he went to Cortland, New York, on recruiting duty again, then transferred back to Monroe as recruiting station commander here.

In January, he and his family will move to Houma to be close to the oil field work. He now lives at 731 Lakeshore Dr. with his wife, the former Barbara Mathieu of Delhi and their children Bobby, 9 and Theresa, 8.

"I've enjoyed working with the people here," Underwood stressed. A native of Winnsboro and graduate of Rayville High School, he points out, "Without the help of the people here, my job wouldn't have been successful."

He has been recruiter for Jackson, Lincoln, Union, East Carroll, West Carroll, Morehouse, Ouachita, Caldwell, Madison and Richland parishes.

He received two citations upon retirement, one signed by Maj. Gen. J. A. Lambert, adjutant general of the Army, and the other by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army.

City Store Gets Certificate Of Commendation

A Monroe women's apparel store, Silverstein's, 342 DeSiard, was one of 33 American retail stores awarded the "Retailing Serves America" Certificate of Commendation by the National Retail Merchants Association and Readers Digest.

The certificates are awarded to retail stores "for conducting praiseworthy projects that have enhanced the sature of retailing in their respective communities."

Notification of the certificate award came from Robert Gur-Arie, public relations director of the National Retail Merchants Association, New York City.

Registrar Will Keep Long Hours

JONESVILLE (Special) — The office of the registrar of voters will be open until 9 p.m. through Wednesday, according to registrar Douglas Stockman.

Approximately 3,800 persons have registered for the Dec. 7 first Democratic primary.

"Those who wait until the last day or two may find it impossible to be registered," Stockman siad.

REMARRIAGE ISSUE

2 Catholic Papers Argue Rocky's Fix

NEW YORK (AP)—The Commonweal, a magazine published by Catholic laymen, said Saturday Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller should be judged as a possible presidential contender on his entire program and stance rather than his divorce and remarriage.

The Commonweal took issue with the Sign, a Catholic magazine published by the Passionist fathers, that said Rockefeller should withdraw as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination because of his marital record.

"As far as the execution of his public duties goes, it is largely irrevelant whether the presidency is filled by a divorced man," said the Commonweal.

"Clearly the fact of a divorce, by itself, gives no indication of a president's ability or inability to fulfill his duties."

Referring to the Sign's withdrawal suggestion, the Commonweal said:

"The assumption here seems to be that a divorced man and woman who remarry cannot possibly be people of integrity and character.

"There is no room here for qualifications; no awareness that perhaps not all the facts are in; no willingness, even, to judge the man's moral stance in terms of public and private acts performed over the length of an adult life. The candidate is simply dismissed in a few lines as unworthy of real consideration."

The Commonweal noted that the Sign had said that Rockefeller transgressed "our code of life" and had been rebuked by "Americans of all faiths." Rockefeller is a Baptist.

"Another argument has been smuggled in here, under cover of the phrase 'Americans of all faiths,' and that is Catholic opposition to divorce," said the Commonweal.

"But whose 'code of life' is Gov. Rockefeller expected to live by? His own code does not prohibit divorce and remarriage. As tragic as the break-up of two families may be, there is no evidence that Rockefeller acted against his own best conscience."

The Commonweal said any act is politically relevant if enough voters think it is and that Rockefeller's divorce and remarriage therefore were relevant. It said any attempt to separate the political from some personal acts seemed futile.

"But," the magazine said, "a man's private affairs, except as they may cast some doubt on his ability to function—to make rational decisions, to work for the common good, to put public before private advantage—ought not to overshadow the entire program and stance he offers the electorate.

"It is primarily on this basis that Gov. Rockefeller should be judged as a candidate for the presidency."

The magazine expressed no preference for any potential candidate.

Miser Tries To Dominate After Death

THE WILL. By Harvey Swados. World. $4.95.

The theme of Swados' story is a fight by three strangely different brothers over an inheritance.

Behind that story is another, involving a character who never appears in the flesh — an eccentric bachelor uncle who was a miser, hoarding up money from slum rents, and collecting hideous junk which he piled to the ceilings of a decrepit old Victorian house.

He was Max Land, a hateful old coot who dominated the boys' father Leo and did his best — even in death — to destroy the sons.

As the tale opens, Max has been dead a week, and Leo has just been killed by a truck. The first son we see is Ralph, who had fled the old house for a calculated try at business in New York.

Then we find the youngest son Ray, while remaining secretly in the attic of the old house, had fled from reality and had become a bearded, half-mad hermit, shunning responsibility and human contact. Finally the eldest son Mel, who also had fled —after a mysterious crisis — returns in a violent episode, from a life of wandering and crime.

The sharp tensions among the brothers, and their contrasting personalities, are portrayed in a suspense-filled narrative marked by violence, sex and emotional quirks.

Swados is well rated in the literary set, with good reason, though perhaps he tends to dominate a little too much the characters and his readers' consciousness.

Despite the fact that the actions and speeches seem a little odd at times, this story has impact. Some may like it very much, and some very little, but either way it is the sort of novel that leaves many thoughts in its trail.

Story's Hero Actual Figure In Fighting

THE MERCENARY. By Charles Durbin. Houghton Mifflin. $5.

The hero of this novel was an actual figure of history— a very turbulent period of history.

In the early years of the 16th Century the land now called Italy was a jungle of feuding little city-states. Beside these bloody battles there were constant intramural fights for power, with brothers, cousins and uncles slaughtering each other.

Gianpaolo Baglioni was a member of the ruling house of the hill town of Perugia, and as such experienced his own share of family butchery and double - crossing. But he also was one of the condottieri —the hired captains who, with their retainers, fought other people's battles for pay, in the midst of shifting alliances, cynical betrayals and crude torture.

Durbin presents such historical figure as Roderigo Borgia (Pope Alexander VI) and his unlucky son Cesare; Guiliano della Rovere (Pope Julius II), Giovanni di Medici (Pope Leo X) and a slippery little politican named Machiavelli.

The narrator is Baglioni himself, and despite his callously practical recital of his own and others' ever-changing fortunes, he is a sympathetic character. Whether he is in power or in exile, he plays the game according to the rugged rules of his own day.

Durbin's story develops slowly at first and the seeker of casual entertainment may get lost in its pages. But for anyone with a sense of history and an appreciation of its lessons, this is a well - written, fictional recreation of a remarkable age. Durbin's insights into that age carry with them some thought-provoking reflections on the human state in this age.

Barnett Makes Progress For President's Job

MONCKS CORNER, S. C. (UPI)—The chairman of a campaign to elect Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett president said Saturday his organization is making progress.

'Some gains have been made even though they've been small," said the Rev. W. A. Barnett (no relation).

"We've got the potential to do a really great thing," he said.

Barnett said the drive so far has been getting a lot of competition from campaigns for unpledged electors, to draft Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., or Alabama Gov. George Wallace, and the Southern Republican movement for Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

"Some of this is wearing off now," Barnett said, "and we hope to expand our operations."

Miser Tries To Dominate After Death

THE WILL. By Harvey Swados. World. $4.95.

The theme of Swados' story is a fight by three strangely different brothers over an inheritance.

Behind that story is another, involving a character who never appears in the flesh — an eccentric bachelor uncle who was a miser, hoarding up money from slum rents, and collecting hideous junk which he piled to the ceilings of a decrepit old Victorian house.

He was Max Land, a hateful old coot who dominated the boys' father Leo and did his best — even in death — to destroy the sons.

As the tale opens, Max has been dead a week, and Leo has just been killed by a truck. The first son we see is Ralph, who had fled the old house for a calculated try at business in New York.

Then we find the youngest son Ray, while remaining secretly in the attic of the old house, had fled from reality and had become a bearded, half-mad hermit, shunning responsibility and human contact. Finally the eldest son Mel, who also had fled —after a mysterious crisis — returns in a violent episode, from a life of wandering and crime.

The sharp tensions among the brothers, and their contrasting personalities, are portrayed in a suspense-filled narrative marked by violence, sex and emotional quirks.

Swados is well rated in the literary set, with good reason, though perhaps he tends to dominate a little too much the characters and his readers' consciousness.

Despite the fact that the actions and speeches seem a little odd at times, this story has impact. Some may like it very much, and some very little, but either way it is the sort of novel that leaves many thoughts in its trail.

Story's Hero Actual Figure In Fighting

The hero of this novel was an actual figure of history— a very turbulent period of history.

In the early years of the 16th Century the land now called Italy was a jungle of feuding little city-states. Beside these bloody battles there were constant intramural fights for power, with brothers, cousins and uncles slaughtering each other.

Gianpaolo Baglioni was a member of the ruling house of the hill town of Perugia, and as such experienced his own share of family butchery and double - crossing. But he also was one of the condottieri —the hired captains who, with their retainers, fought other people's battles for pay, in the midst of shifting alliances, cynical betrayals and crude torture.

Durbin presents such historical figure as Roderigo Borgia (Pope Alexander VI) and his unlucky son Cesare; Guiliano della Rovere (Pope Julius II), Giovanni di Medici (Pope Leo X) and a slippery little politican named Machiavelli.

The narrator is Baglioni himself, and despite his callously practical recital of his own and others' ever-changing fortunes, he is a sympathetic character. Whether he is in power or in exile, he plays the game according to the rugged rules of his own day.

Durbin's story develops slowly at first and the seeker of casual entertainment may get lost in its pages. But for anyone with a sense of history and an appreciation of its lessons, this is a well - written, fictional recreation of a remarkable age. Durbin's insights into that age carry with them some thought-provoking reflections on the human state in this age.

Barnett Makes Progress For President's Job

MONCKS CORNER, S. C. (UPI)—The chairman of a campaign to elect Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett president said Saturday his organization is making progress.

'Some gains have been made even though they've been small," said the Rev. W. A. Barnett (no relation).

"We've got the potential to do a really great thing," he said.

Barnett said the drive so far has been getting a lot of competition from campaigns for unpledged electors, to draft Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., or Alabama Gov. George Wallace. and the Southern Republican movement for Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

"Some of this is wearing off now," Barnett said, "and we hope to expand our operations."

Giant Power Project Rises Again

The tides at the Bay of Fundy are the highest in the world and man knows he can harness them to produce power to run machines and provide electricity for lights. But, there's more to the proposed Passamaquoddy power project than an old dream reborn. As an engineering project it would dwarf the Pyramids of Egypt.

HIGH TIDE BRINGS the water up along the deep rock at Eastport, Me., where it drops 18 feet at low tide. Eastport is on the Bay of Passamaquoddy, site of the proposed power project to harness the 40-to-50-foot Bay of Fundy tides to produce a million kilowatts of power. Along with the promise of power and, hopefully, prosperity for the depressed area, go big problems in handling the giant tides. (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

AT THE DOCK in Eastport, Me., once a busy fishing port, a boat with 15 tons of sardines (foreground) and one with baskets of herring scales offer small hopes of profitable business. The sardines, actually baby herring, will be sold as fertilizer. The scales, whose 10-cents-a-pound price will bring more than the fish, will be used in making artificial pearls and foam fire extinguishers. Eastport people are skeptical about talk of reviving the once started and abandoned Passamaquoddy power project, which brought boom and then bust in the mid 1930's.

By DON GUY

EASTPORT, Maine (AP)—Passamaquoddy, that enormous power project with strange-sounding name, is rising into the news again like the mighty tides it seeks to harness.

The Bay of Fundy tides, the highest in the world at 40 to 50 feet, rise and fall in the relentless pattern of the ages, without any notice of man's sometimes raging argument about them.

Recently Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall reported to President Kennedy the vast project is economically feasible.

Maine's staunch Republicans had hardly time to express their love for this particular Democratic project when GOP spokesmen elsewhere sounded the old cry of "boondoggle."

COST, POTENTIAL

In round numbers Udall says the new Quoddy plan would cost a billion dollars and deliver a million kilowatts of power.

Passamaquoddy is the name of a bay between Maine and New Brunswick, Canada. It is an early settler's version of the Indian name for a tribe known as the "People Who Spear Pollock," a type of salt water fish.

Talk of a new Quoddy tidal project doesn't excite the palefaces who now live in Eastport, not by spearing pollock but by canning sardines.

"We have heard that tune before; when they start digging I'll start listening" is a typical sentiment.

Tidal power from Quoddy Bay, originally the dream of engineer Dexter Cooper in the early 1920's, was given a $7 million launching by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1935.

TORPEDOED DREAM

Congress torpedoed the dream a year later to the cry of "boondoggle." Three small dams had been built and several hundred homes for workers erected on wooden post foundations.

Today about the only evidence remaining of the grandiose plan to have the powerful tides lift New England out of the great depression is the remnants of Quoddy Village. Built to last only five years, some homes tumbled when their foundations rotted, others were moved to stone foundations and some are still standing like cardboard movie sets.

"Eastport will be a ghost town if they don't start Passamaquoddy soon," says town manager Louis Arnold.

Like many natives of this easternmost town in the United States Arnold can quote statistics on the economic decline of Eastport with the sad pride of a mortician discussing a major disaster.

"Our population has dropped from 10,000 in the bonanza day of '36 to less than 2,000 today. Our total valuation has dropped from $210,000 to $190,000 in the past five years. Our young people have nowhere to go but away."

MANY STORES CLOSED

Half the stores on the main street along the waterfront are closed. Some that are open sell second hand household articles that would be carted off to the dump in most parts of the United States.

Eastport is a fishing town, but six of the eight sardine canneries have closed and not through any shortage of fish. Changing American eating habits have led people away from canned fish to fresh or frozen varieties. Most sardines in this country are not sardines anyway but baby herring.

"Sometimes the scales of the herring are worth more than the fish," says Capt. Eric Cook of nearby Campobello, N. B. Cook has a rig on his boat that literally pumps herring from the nets and removes the scales as the fish are loaded into a carrier boat alongside. The scales are sold at 10 cents a pound to make a substance used in artificial pearls and foam fire extinguisher. Often the fish are sold for fertilizer.

ECONOMY HIT

All of Maine's big Washington County is hard hit economically. Many New Englanders, pointing out that their region has the highest power costs in the nation, look with awe and envy at vast federal power projects in the south and west.

Many "down east" natives claim a big federal project providing low-cost power would bring new industries into the region.

One of the big questions concerning Quoddy was how it would solve the problem of "peak" power needs. In systems utilizing steam turbine generators, it isn't economically feasible to start and stop them to meet a peak. But in hydroelectric power, such as obtained through dams, the closing of a valve is enough to store water until the next time it is needed. To answer the need, engineers devised a two - pool system for Quoddy which would permit a storing of tidal waters so they could be used when needed.

The peak is about 5 p.m., when the housewife turns on the electric stove, the light and runs a bath for the children. In the winter, this extra power consumption coincides with switching off of store and office lights.

The tides, however, do not ebb and flow with the clock and the workaday world.

STORAGE POSSIBLE

In the two pool system, millions of tons of water rushing into the Bay of Fundy and then into Passamaquoddy at high tide can be stored until needed in late afternoon.

Since high water wouldn't flow through the turbines if it was high tide at the outlets, too, engineers propose to block off 40 square miles of Cobscook Bay as a "low pool" to be emptied at every low tide.

By periodic filling and emptying of the pools it will be possible to have at least one major surge of power late every afternoon.

The Quoddy project would also be tied to a hydroelectric system planned for the upper St. John River in northern Maine.

Much of the cost of the billion-dollar project would go into construction of up to seven miles of dikes, some in water 300 feet deep. Critics say placing of rock and earth fill in position despite the swirling tides would be a much more difficult and costly project than anticipated.

New England private utility spokesmen say Secretary Udall's figures on tidal power generation costs are "utter nonsense." Udall estimated the Quoddy - St. John project could deliver power at $24 per kilowatt-year. This, he estimated, is $2 less than the average of 49 privately owned plants now in New England.

Private utility people say Udall's figures are as silly as the schoolboy error of trying to add apples and oranges together. They claim proper mathematical weighing of the power costs from the many different types of plants involved would produce a cost formula of $22.38 per kilowatt-year.

In any case private power spokesmen claim nuclear plants such as Yankee Atomic at Rowe, Mass., are pioneering ways to cheaper power. Lessons learned from Rowe will be incorporated in a new nuclear plant now under construction by Connecticut Yankee.

If the Quoddy is ever realized, the 100 - square mile Passamaquoddy Bay would be blocked off with a series of dams, locks and gates between the islands.

It would dwarf the Pyramids of Egypt as an engineering project.

Hurry Up And Register

Probably never in the history of Lousiana has it been more important than now that every citizen prepare himself to vote, if possible. One of the things that must be done in this preparation is that the citizen register with the parish registrar of voters if he is not already registered.

All prospective voters should realize that if they have previously registered and have voted fairly regularly since that time, there is no need to register again. Registration in Louisiana is permanent, provided the citizen takes advantage of his opportunity to vote, and if anyone has voted in the principal elections he has no need to worry for fear he is not registered.

Because of the big rush of would-be registrants on the office of Mrs. Mae Lucky, registrar of voters, announcement has been made that, in addition to the regular hours, the registrar's office will be open from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Overflowing crowds, which have waited almost until the deadline before attempting to register, have required the registrar to use the police jury room for additional space and to obtain additional help.

Many believe registering and voting is a part of the patriotic duty of every citizen in this free America of ours. First Atomic Bomb

Back in 1945, when the United States dropped the first atomic bomb the world had ever known on Hiroshima, Japan, a newspaper vendor in Memphis, Tenn., stood on the street for many hours and repeated, over and over again, as he sold his papers, "This is the biggest story ever told in any of the newspapers I have ever sold and I have been selling newspapers for 30 years."

Millions of people at the same time thought it was the biggest story ever told by newspapers covering an event that had just taken place.

When the bomb explosion came, most of the United States' some 150 million people and most of the people throughout the entire world had never dreamed of the possibility of such a thing. Scientists in the inner circles knew of the possibility and those in at least three nations were working frantically to bring their bomb-producing efforts to a culmination.

Those three nations were the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Adolf Hitler, then the mad dictator of Germany was almost beside himself in his anxiety to be the first to perfect the bomb, because, at that time, he was losing the way and he thought he could save Germany and himself from defeat if he could use it. He never developed it in time and reportedly died at his own hands when the allied armies began closing in on him, but the United States put it into operation against Japan that same year and quickly brought the war to a close, because the Japanese were utterly defenseless against American planes and the bomb.

Now, to the great surprise of nearly everyone, Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas - Home of England, newly appointed successor to Harold Macmillan, has come out with the statement that Britain beat the United States in developing the first nuclear weapon. Although Home's nation has been allied with the United States ever since World War I, his statement claiming the atomic bomb is a British development smacks of about the same sort of braggadocio Russia has used in claiming to have invented or developed everything from the steam locomotive to the southern cotton gin to the flying machine or airplane.

Heretofore, it has been stated that Albert Einstein, rated as perhaps the great scientist of all time, was the first person to suggest to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt that an atomic bomb could be developed and that it might be produced in time to help win World War II.

In Washington, some historians credited British scientists with being the first to suggest the possibility of making a deliverable atomic bomb with Uranium-235 and said they may have helped in developing the detonating "trigger" at the Los Alamos, N.M. laboratories.

It was pointed out, however, that the United States exploded its first atomic device near Almagordo, N.M., on July 16, 1945, and subsequently dropped two devastating bombs on Japan that same year, while the first British test bomb was detonated on March 10, 1952, some six and one-half years after the end of World War II.

One of the cardinal principles of the United States patent office is that no one can patent an idea. Before anyone can obtain a patent, he must produce a working model.

That is exactly what the United States did when it produced and used the first atomic bombs the world has ever known.

Lord Home is going far afield and reaching out for unearned honors when he tries to claim that, because Britain may have lent some help in developing the bomb, it beat the United States in developing the bomb. The United States helped Britain to develop its bombs and Russia stole American secrets.

Without United States ingenuity and initiative, the world might still be without an atomic bomb—which some believe would be an advantage.

Mexican Farm Labor

House and senate approval of a one-year extension of a program under which thousands of Mexican nationals are brought into the United States each year to help harvest crops appears fully justified and desirable.

Mexican short-time importees of this type are called braceros.

An almost solid Republican front joined Democrats from the south and from bracero-using western states to adopt the program by a roll-call vote of 173 to 158 to give a new lease on life on the program scheduled to expire December 31.

Contention that the Mexican laborers fill jobs that are wanted by domestic workers appears to have little foundation. Work done by the Mexicans is of an itinerant nature and farmers have difficulty in finding enough jobless people in the southern and western states who want to perform that kind of labor.

If we can keep as many of our people as possible in permanent employment and then are able to call on our neighbor, Mexico, when we need extra workers, it seems the logical thing to do. Furthermore, these workers have caused little trouble, generally being law-abiding and ready to perform their work until the time comes for them to leave.

Deplores Tree Cutting

To the Editor:

I understand that Mr. Howard Griffin is cutting the stumps in Bayou DeSiard as a public service. For this I am thankful. I narrowly escaped death in Black Bayou last January after being thrown from my boat which hit an underwater stump, while fishing alone, and I can fully appreciate the dangers of stumps in boating. However, I am very much concerned with the cutting of trees, both dead and alive, in this beautiful bayou. Before going any further, I would like to say that I am expressing my personal views and I most certainly respect the right of anyone to differ with me; and, I fully recognize the property owners' rights to decide for themselves whether these trees are to be cut or not. I am well aware of the reparian rights of property owners along the bayou.

I first came to Monroe as a boy in 1934 and I have enjoyed this bayou since that time, both the fishing and the beauty of a real Louisiana bayou. However, if these trees are cut, and it appears that a very considerable number have been, this beauty will be destroyed forever. I have always appreciated the color that the old dead cypress trees gave to Bayou DeSiard, which were standing in 1934 and would probably stand for another 100 years or more; cypress usually dosen't rot in water. Needless to say, the living trees are a real asset where fishing, pleasure boating, and scenic beauty are concerned. But, if the primary interest is water skiing, then these trees are a real liability, since every water skier knows that clear, open lakes are very conducive to faster, safer, and better skiing.

I have listened to some comments from friends and fellow citizens on this matter and it seems that there are some hard feelings between some of those who did not wish any trees at all cut and those who gave Mr. Griffin permission to cut the trees, both live and dead, abutting their property. I have also heard that some who gave permission to cut these trees now regret it. I hope so, since Bayou DeSiard was one of the most scenic pieces of nature in and around Monroe. I urge all concerned to please respect your neighbors right to cut any or all trees on their property, or to give their permission to allow Mr. Griffin to cut them as a public service.

Even though fishing, pleasure boating and just plain viewing will be somewhat impaired by the cutting of these trees, I feel sure there will be some good come from this clearing of Bayou DeSiard, such as a boost in the sales of larger boats, motors, skiing equipment, bathing suits, suntan lotion, and other affiliated lines. So, even if I am losing out on some real pleasure, there will be others who will benefit. So after all, who wants to stand in the way of progress?

Comments On Primaries

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

As one of those who, as a taxpayer each year, but as a citizen only once every four years, or each general election, I feel a little out of line about this upcoming Democratic primary.

Several months ago I wrote Russell Long on the idea of holding a general primary instead of one called a Democratic primary.

There are quite a few people in the state who are in my situation that is not registered as Democrats. We pay our taxes, some of us, but because we do not care to be termed in the same category as the Whiz Kids in Washington, or wish to be termed independent, we have no voice in the selection of either local, regional or state officers. I don't know many people are aware of such a situation, but this sort of thing exists in all the Iron Curtain countries, one party-one ticket and you vote accordingly. I am not anxious to see that situation extended here.

We have held our residence here in Monroe since 1930, a little over 33 years. In that time I have seen some very odd things happen out of the area of headquarters in Baton Rouge. One governor was noted for the number of gold doorknobs placed in strategic positions in the state. They were later moved. Another, with police escort, ran 10 red lights in the city of Ft. Worth, Tex., one of which was in front of the police station. He was later placed in custody, then later released.

The incumbent, disregarding the signs in the wind telling of the present indebtedness, could not be satisfied in the old Govenor's mansion, which only rated in the hundred of thousands in cost, but just had to have a million dollar one for his head to lie. Yes, at my last hearing of this, it had an added $120,000 to that first million. This in Louisiana, a state where people are now faced with a water shortage.

I have spent my life in construction, one sort or another over 50 years, this country and some foreign. Have been on structures costing up to and above $6,000,000. To me, with those years of experience, the idea of building a million dollar Governor's mansion when the rest of the state needed that money, and much, much, more, is pretty indicative of the type of men the people are electing to office. I know from personal experience, that a home could have been built, suitable for any state, or national official, for the $120,000, leaving the million to be put to some worthwhile project. Monroe could have used some of it - it might have kept us out of our present water situation.

Several candidates are proclaiming loud and clear that they are not for the Kennedy regime, but wait, when next year comes around, and that Kennedy money begins to roll in, just count the dissenters then. I'm rather glad I have no choice in picking those in the run-off. Maybe I can get them later.

This situation might be changed, it might even be helped if the primary was either thrown wide open, or done away with entirely. Many do not care to vote, knowing what is going to happen anyway. If they act as well as they talk, we would be blessed with a wonderful executive. I'll just wait and see.

Presidential Election

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Current proposals to change Louisiana's method of selecting presidential electors should interest all citizens who are committed to the democratic-republican form of government. Under the present system, all of our electors are selected on the basis of which party receives a majority of the popular vote in the general election. Many voters in north Louisiana feel their vote is being nullified by south Louisiana voters and desire a change in the system so their vote will mean more. Some politicians seem to be dissatisfied with the present system because they feel Louisiana is losing political influence in the Democratic party and with the Federal government under the present plan.

Under Mississippi's proposal for unpledged electors, the politicians would gain complete control of Louisiana's electoral vote. This would not be in keeping with our democratic-republican system since the voice of the people would be meaningless. Louisiana's vote for President and Vice-President would be completely in the hands of the politicians. No matter how faithfully they tried to interpret the will of the people there would always be an element of guesswork in their decisions and often the will of the people would be in outright jeopardy.

Since the only justifiable reason for altering the present electoral college system is to make it more representative, the best way to do this is to place the choice of electors as close to the people as is practical. Of all suggestions offered since 1789 it seems to me the most practical, democratic, representative, and American plan is the district system.

Louisiana could be divided into eight electoral districts, corresponding to the present congressional districts, and each district would elect one presidential elector. In addition, two electors could be selected on a statewide basis, much in the same way all ten are now selected. (This would correspond to the two Louisiana senators.)

In this way the people of each district would be sure that at least one elector would represent the majority of their district. If the majority of all the voters were supporting the same party candidate then each citizen's vote would help elect three electors, his district elector and the two state-wide electors.

The chief advantage of the district method of choosing presidential electors is its democratic - representative character. When we go to the polls to vote we would feel that our vote would actually count. We would not have to wait to see how middle or south Louisiana voted to know whether our vote would actually help elect a President. Politicans will not like this system because it requires nine contests in Louisiana instead of one. As it now stands, either the Democratic or Republican party can concentrate its effort largely in south Louisiana and trust to piling up so large a vote as to not worry about north Louisiana. Under the district system they would have both a statewide contest to wage for the two at-large electors and a campaign in each of the eight electoral districts. A third party would have a better chance at making itself heard since it could concentrate its effort in those districts where it was strongest and had a chance to win.

The major disadvantage of the district system would be its cost. Since nine contests would have to be waged, it would add considerably to the expense of presidential elections. This disadvantage is far outweighed by the more democratic procedure it would institute. Freedom costs money, time, and effort. If economy is our goal, then we should abolish our present system entirely and ease into an "effi- which there is no cost for elec- cient" totalitarian system in tions since there are no elections. Let the party which wishes to have its candidates elected pay the cost. We must keep our political system in the hands of the people. Since presidential elections are the only elections in which all Americans participate, the closer it is kept to the people the more democratic it is.

Jury Squabbles Hit

To the Editor:

In Tuesday's Morning World, front page, the Ouachita Parish Police Jury displayed its usual childish and disgusting conduct. I sincerely hope that the voters of our fine Parish take notice of the few clowns that now serve on this important body and see that a change is made come Dec. 7th at the polls. There are plenty good men offering themselves for this office, so with good judgement on the part of we who vote, a much needed change can take place.

WADE D. PEARSON

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER
U.S. Senator From Arizona

I SUGGEST THAT our government today is following the most dangerous foreign policy in its history.

We might well ask ourselves what it has achieved.

It has split the greatest alliance in free world history, NATO, into factions and inaction. The policy stands wall-eyed in Berlin and cross-eyed in Paris and blind in Cuba.

In Africa, policies of confusion and compromise have plunged the Congo back 50 years in its development. These policies have subsidized and supported the Socialist and aggressive Nasser government in Egypt. They have subsidized and supported tyranny in Ghana. They have spread across the entire continent a smokescreen behind which economic and social chaos has been able to run rampant in the name of progress.

In Southeast Asia, the present foreign policy lunged for neutrality in Laos and came up with a creeping communist take over. In Viet-Nam we fare no better. India, shocked for a time by Chinese invasion, has drifted again toward complacency encouraged by official U. S. vacillation. Pakistan, once a great ally of the West, has been frustrated and finally repelled by our indecision.

I suggest that our present attitudes and policies in the field of foreign affairs have yielded nothing but losses to the cause of freedom and general confusion throughout the world.

ONE OF THE GRAVEST elements in the international problem today is how we can define or recognize peace in a world of long conflict and continuing crisis.

The old criteria no longer seem to apply. We cannot say, as did our ancestors, that when the guns are silent there is peace. Such silence gives only the illusion of peace.

Today the weapons of war have different sounds. The scratch of a pen on a treaty table may be more significant than the roar of artillery. The pounding of frieghters on the high seas, engaged in economic warfare, may be of more significance than the roaring attack of a fleet of ships. The silent subversion of a shaky government may be a greater enemy victory than the fall of a walled city.

Although the guns in most parts of the world are silent today, the other sounds are clearly heard but not fully recognized in their true light by our present government.

TODAY, WE FACE the very real possibility that the illusion of peace, the silence of the guns, might be mistaken for genuine peace. We have been tempted that way before. We have become complacent that way before. In the exuberance that followed the end of World War II we became complacent. After the tumult of the battlefield, the seeming calm led us to disband our armies.

But we were rudely awakened in Korea. Those who had warned that a new enemy had arisen under the Soviet Communist banner were proven correct. And we began a long buildup of our strength all over again.

Today I am afraid that we are sliding back to the point where we face again the slow erosion of purpose, alertness and preparedness that so nearly proved ruinous in the past.

We are beginning again to mistake the sounds of peace for the reality of peace. We are beginning to heed the lures of comfort rather than hear the voices of national need. We are beginning to chase will-o'-the-wisp holes while avoiding the real truths, in the real world.

BUT IN THE FASHION of the day, with its emphasis on sweet dreams of an eternal status quo with the enemy, we might be said to be forgetting the Alamo, and forgetting also the Maine, the Marne, the beaches of Iwo Jima, Normandy and Inchon. We are forgetting that real peace has always been held with resolution and strength and lost by indecision and unpreparedness. Wars are waged when weakness tempts an aggressor, not when he is confronted with power and purpose.

I suggest we can keep the peace in this world only so long as our power remains adequate and our purpose remains high and unmistakable. We risk the peace at every turn when our strength declines, our purpose deteriorates and the enemy can mistake what we say and do.

How do you stand, sir?

Austria's Income Tax Rate Slashed

IN THE PAST 10 YEARS, Austria has cut her income tax rates four times. The tax reductions have been steep, have slashed the rates on low-medium income families by more than 50 per cent.

As a direct result, the Austrian government's tax collections have almost tripled since 1952. Spending by the Austrian people has more than doubled. Simultaneously, savings are at an all-time record. While the pace of Austria's economic expansion has slowed recently, her over-all economic growth since the 1950s has been astounding.

Can it be that the U. S. government will collect more in taxes after it puts through tax reductions totaling $11 billion a year? Repeatedly, skeptics ask this question and understandably. There does seem an upside-down logic in the claim that the Treasury's tax take will be higher after rates are reduced than before.

Yet, Austria's answer to the question is a flat YES.

In an exclusive statement, Dr. Reinhard Kamitz, world - known president of the Austrian National Bank, summarized it for the United States:

"Austria's record is proof for the correctness of my opinion that public revenues primarily depend on the volume of economic activities — much more so than on the height of tax rates.

Of course, our economy can't be compared with Austria's — in size or in diversity, in stage of development or in living standards. Nevertheless, the story of Austria's economy after each tax cut is so striking that it demands study by all of us — and particularly by the Senate cynics who insist that tax reductions will dangerously reduce tax revenues and thus swell our budget deficits to catastrophic levels.

Austria's first tax cut became effective Jan. 1, 1954. As an illustration of its size, it reduced the tax on a married couple earning $3.600 a year from $1,453.44 to $1,128.96.

In 1955, Austria's tax collections were a whopping 12.4 per cent higher than in 1954. The increase in her gross national product — the measure of her economic growth — was a remarkable 14.7 per cent.

The second tax cut became effective Jan. 1, 1955. As an illustration of its size, it reduced the tax on that $3,600 a year couple to $987.44.

In 1956 the Austrian government's tax collections were 8.7 per cent above the previous year's totals. Her gross national product jumped another remarkable 10.1 per cent.

The third tax cut became effective Jan. 1, 1958. This one reduced the tax on that $3,600 a year couple to $843.92.

In 1959 the government's tax take was up 6.8 per cent over the year before. Her gross national product climbed again, by 6.2 per cent.

THE FOURTH TAX CUT went into effect July 1, 1962 and it reduces that married couple's tax to around $800. Figures on its impact are not yet available but with employment, consumer spending and total production at all-time records, the likelihood is that the Austrian governments tax collection are up too.

While the timing of Senate passage of the tax bill continues fuzzy, passage of a bill generally along the lines of that approved by the House in September appears certain, with the cuts to begin taking effect in 1964.

It would be unrealistic even to hope that the tax cuts will so spur the economy that our Treasury's tax collections will skyrocket immediately. They won't.

But the tax cuts will leave more money for spending in our pocketbooks and cash registers. They will help create new jobs and new paychecks. They will increase "the volume of economic activities" and this volume, as Kamitz says, is what determines tax collections.

Austria's record tells us plainly that lower rates over the years will produce more taxes than today's rates produce.

History shrouds the exact date of the invention of the wheel but it couldn't have come too soon to suit the man who invented the axle but wasn't sure why.

There are so many household hint columnists around that we can't help feeling they must be giving out more answers than there are questions.

Hurry Up And Register

Probably never in the history of Lousiana has it been more important than now that every citizen prepare himself to vote, if possible. One of the things that must be done in this preparation is that the citizen register with the parish registrar of voters if he is not already registered.

All prospective voters should realize that if they have previously registered and have voted fairly regularly since that time, there is no need to register again. Registration in Louisiana is permanent, provided the citizen takes advantage of his opportunity to vote, and if anyone has voted in the principal elections he has no need to worry for fear he is not registered.

Because of the big rush of would-be registrants on the office of Mrs. Mae Lucky, registrar of voters, announcement has been made that, in addition to the regular hours, the registrar's office will be open from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Overflowing crowds, which have waited almost until the deadline before attempting to register, have required the registrar to use the police jury room for additional space and to obtain additional help.

Many believe registering and voting is a part of the patriotic duty of every citizen in this free America of ours. It is a time when each citizen can play a part in saying who shall be elected to govern him and who shall not be elected. Voting is a privilege all of us should cherish and uphold by casting our ballots.

So if you have not registered do so at once. It will only take a few minutes.

I don't know many people are aware of such a situation, but this sort of thing exists in all the Iron Curtain countries, one party-one ticket and you vote accordingly. I am not anxious to see that situation extended here.

We have held our residence here in Monroe since 1930, a little over 33 years. In that time I have seen some very odd things happen out of the area of headquarters in Baton Rouge. One governor was noted for the number of gold doorknobs placed in strategic positions in the state. They were later moved. Another, with police escort, ran 10 red lights in the city of Ft. Worth, Tex., one of which was in front of the police station. He was later placed in custody, then later released.

The incumbent, disregarding the signs in the wind telling of the present indebtedness, could not be satisfied in the old Govenor's mansion, which only rated in the hundred of thousands in cost, but just had to have a million dollar one for his head to lie. Yes, at my last hearing of this, it had an added $120,000 to that first million. This in Louisiana, a state where people are now faced with a water shortage.

I have spent my life in construction, one sort or another over 50 years, this country and some foreign. Have been on structures costing up to and above $6,000,000. To me, with those years of experience, the idea of building a million dollar Governor's mansion when the rest of the state needed that money, and much, much, more, is pretty indicative of the type of men the people are electing to office. I know from personal experience, that a home could have been built, suitable for any state, or national official, for the $120,000, leaving the million to be put to some worthwhile project. Monroe could have used some of it - it might have kept us out of our present water situation.

Several candidates are proclaiming loud and clear that they are not for the Kennedy regime, but wait, when next year comes around, and that Kennedy money begins to roll in, just count the dissenters then. I'm rather glad I have no choice in picking those in the run-off. Maybe I can get them later.

This situation might be changed, it might even be helped if the primary was either thrown wide open, or done away with entirely. Many do not care to vote, knowing what is going to happen anyway. If they act as well as they talk, we would be blessed with a wonderful executive. I'll just wait and see.

Presidential Election

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Current proposals to change Louisiana's method of selecting presidential electors should interest all citizens who are committed to the democratic-republican form of government. Under the present system, all of our electors are selected on the basis of which party receives a majority of the popular vote in the general election. Many voters in north Louisiana feel their vote is being nullified by south Louisiana voters and desire a change in the system so their vote will mean more. Some politicians seem to be dissatisfied with the present system because they feel Louisiana is losing political influence in the Democratic party and with the Federal government under the present plan.

Under Mississippi's proposal for unpledged electors, the politicians would gain complete control of Louisiana's electoral vote. This would not be in keeping with our democratic-republican system since the voice of the people would be meaningless. Louisiana's vote for President and Vice-President would be completely in the hands of the politicians. No matter how faithfully they tried to interpret the will of the people there would always be an element of guesswork in their decisions and often the will of the people would be in outright jeopardy.

Since the only justifiable reason for altering the present electoral college system is to make it more representative, the best way to do this is to place the choice of electors as close to the people as is practical. Of all suggestions offered since 1789 it seems to me the most practical, democratic, representative, and American plan is the district system.

Louisiana could be divided into eight electoral districts, corresponding to the present congressional districts, and each district would elect one presidential elector. In addition, two electors could be selected on a statewide basis, much in the same way all ten are now selected. (This would correspond to the two Louisiana senators.)

In this way the people of each district would be sure that at least one elector would represent the majority of their district. If the majority of all the voters were supporting the same party candidate then each citizen's vote would help elect three electors, his district elector and the two state-wide electors.

The chief advantage of the district method of choosing presidential electors is its democratic - representative character. When we go to the polls to vote we would feel that our vote would actually count. We would not have to wait to see how middle or south Louisiana voted to know whether our vote would actually help elect a President. Politicans will not like this system because it requires nine contests in Louisiana instead of one. As it now stands, either the Democratic or Republican party can concentrate its effort largely in south Louisiana and trust to piling up so large a vote as to not worry about north Louisiana. Under the district system they would have both a statewide contest to wage for the two at-large electors and a campaign in each of the eight electoral districts. A third party would have a better chance at making itself heard since it could concentrate its effort in those districts where it was strongest and had a chance to win.

The major disadvantage of the district system would be its cost. Since nine contests would have to be waged, it would add considerably to the expense of presidential elections. This disadvantage is far outweighed by the more democratic procedure it would institute. Freedom costs money, time, and effort. If economy is our goal, then we should abolish our present system entirely and ease into an "effi- which there is no cost for elec- cient" totalitarian system in tions since there are no elections. Let the party which wishes to have its candidates elected pay the cost. We must keep our political system in the hands of the people. Since presidential elections are the only elections in which all Americans participate, the closer it is kept to the people the more democratic it is.

Jury Squabbles Hit

To the Editor:

In Tuesday's Morning World, front page, the Ouachita Parish Police Jury displayed its usual childish and disgusting conduct. I sincerely hope that the voters of our fine Parish take notice of the few clowns that now serve on this important body and see that a change is made come Dec. 7th at the polls. There are plenty good men offering themselves for this office, so with good judgement on the part of we who vote, a much needed change can take place.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U.S. Senator From Arizona

I SUGGEST THAT our government today is following the most dangerous foreign policy in its history.

We might well ask ourselves what it has achieved.

It has split the greatest alliance in free world history, NATO, into factions and inaction. The policy stands wall-eyed in Berlin and cross-eyed in Paris and blind in Cuba.

In Africa, policies of confusion and compromise have plunged the Congo back 50 years in its development. These policies have subsidized and supported the Socialist and aggressive Nasser government in Egypt. They have subsidized and supported tyranny in Ghana. They have spread across the entire continent a smokescreen behind which economic and social chaos has been able to run rampant in the name of progress.

In Southeast Asia, the present foreign policy lunged for neutrality in Laos and came up with a creeping communist take over. In Viet-Nam we fare no better. India, shocked for a time by Chinese invasion, has drifted again toward complacency encouraged by official U. S. vacillation. Pakistan, once a great ally of the West, has been frustrated and finally repelled by our indecision.

I suggest that our present attitudes and policies in the field of foreign affairs have yielded nothing but losses to the cause of freedom and general confusion throughout the world.

ONE OF THE GRAVEST elements in the international problem today is how we can define or recognize peace in a world of long conflict and continuing crisis.

The old criteria no longer seem to apply. We cannot say, as did our ancestors, that when the guns are silent there is peace. Such silence gives only the illusion of peace.

Today the weapons of war have different sounds. The scratch of a pen on a treaty table may be more significant than the roar of artillery. The pounding of frieghters on the high seas, engaged in economic warfare, may be of more significance than the roaring attack of a fleet of ships. The silent subversion of a shaky government may be a greater enemy victory than the fall of a walled city.

Although the guns in mo[illegible] parts of the world are silent t[illegible]day, the other sounds are clearly heard but not fully recognized in their true light by our present government.

TODAY, WE FACE the very real possibility that the illusion of peace, the silence of the guns, might be mistaken for genuine peace. We have been tempted that way before. We have become complacent that way before. In the exuberance that fol[illegible]lowed the end of World War [illegible] we became complacent. Aft[illegible] the tumult of the battlefield, [illegible] seeming calm led us to disba[illegible] our armies.

But we were rudely awakened in Korea. Those who had warned that a new enemy had arisen under the Soviet Communist banner were proven correct. And we began a long buildup of our strength all over again.

Today I am afraid that we are sliding back to the point where we face again the slow erosion of purpose, alertness and preparedness that so nearly proved ruinous in the past.

We are beginning again to mistake the sounds of peace for the reality of peace. We are beginning to heed the lures of comfort rather than hear the voices of national need. We are beginning to chase will-o'-the-wisp holes while avoiding the real truths, in the real world.

BUT IN THE FASHION of the day, with its emphasis on sweet dreams of an eternal status quo with the enemy, we might be said to be forgetting the Alamo, and forgetting also the Maine, the Marne, the beaches of Iwo Jima, Normandy and Inchon. We are forgetting that real peace has always been held with resolution and strength and lost by indecision and unpreparedness. Wars are waged when weakness tempts an aggressor, not when he is confronted with power and purpose.

I suggest we can keep the peace in this world only so long as our power remains adequate and our purpose remains high and unmistakable. We risk the peace at every turn when our strength declines, our purpose deteriorates and the enemy can mistake what we say and do.

How do you stand, sir?

Austria's Income Tax Rate Slashed

IN THE PAST 10 YEARS, Austria has cut her income tax rates four times. The tax reductions have been steep, have slashed the rates on low-medium income families by more than 50 per cent.

As a direct result, the Austrian government's tax collections have almost tripled since 1952.

Spending by the Austrian people has more than doubled. Simultaneously, savings are at an all-time record. While the pace of Austria's economic expansion has slowed recently, her over-all economic growth since the 1950s has been astounding.

Can it be that the U. S. government will collect more in taxes after it puts through tax reductions totaling $11 billion a year? Repeatedly, skeptics ask this question and understandably. There does seem an upside-down logic in the claim that the Treasury's tax take will be higher after rates are reduced than before.

Yet, Austria's answer to the question is a flat YES.

In an exclusive statement, Dr. Reinhard Kamitz, world - known president of the Austrian National Bank, summarized it for the United States:

"Austria's record is proof for the correctness of my opinion that public revenues primarily depend on the volume of economic activities — much more so than on the height of tax rates.

Of course, our economy can't be compared with Austria's — in size or in diversity, in stage of development or in living standards. Nevertheless, the story of Austria's economy after each tax cut is so striking that it demands study by all of us — and particularly by the Senate cynics who insist that tax reductions will dangerously reduce tax revenues and thus swell our budget deficits to catastrophic levels.

Austria's first tax cut became effective Jan. 1, 1954. As an illustration of its size, it reduced the tax on a married couple earning $3.600 a year from $1,453.44 to $1,128.96.

In 1955, Austria's tax collections were a whopping 12.4 per cent higher than in 1954. The increase in her gross national product — the measure of her economic growth — was a remarkable 14.7 per cent.

The second tax cut became effective Jan. 1, 1955. As an illustration of its size, it reduced the tax on that $3,600 a year couple to $987.44.

In 1956 the Austrian government's tax collections were 8.7 per cent above the previous year's totals. Her gross national product jumped another remarkable 10.1 per cent.

The third tax cut became effective Jan. 1, 1958. This one reduced the tax on that $3,600 a year couple to $843.92.

In 1959 the government's tax take was up 6.8 per cent over the year before. Her gross [illegible]tional product climbed again, by 6.2 per cent.

THE FOURTH TAX CUT went into effect July 1, 1962 and it reduces that married couple's tax to around $800. Figures on its impact are not yet available but with employment, consumer spending and total production at all-time records, the likelihood is that the Austrian governments tax collection are up too.

While the timing of Senate passage of the tax bill continues fuzzy, passage of a bill generally along the lines of that approved by the House in September appears certain, with the cuts to begin taking effect in 1964.

It would be unrealistic even to hope that the tax cuts will so spur the economy that our Treasury's tax collections will skyrocket immediately. They won't.

But the tax cuts will leave more money for spending in our pocketbooks and cash registers. They will help create new jobs and new paychecks. They will increase "the volume of economic activities" and this volume, as Kamitz says, is what determines tax collections.

Austria's record tells us plainly that lower rates over the years will produce more taxes than today's rates produce.

Sen. Soaper Says

A syndicated brain says the Russian-Chinese split has gone past the name-calling stage. Which it would just about have to unless they used the same names over again.

History shrouds the exact date of the invention of the wheel but it couldn't have come too soon to suit the man who invented the axle but wasn't sure why.

There are so many household hint columnists around that we can't help feeling they must be giving out more answers than there are questions.

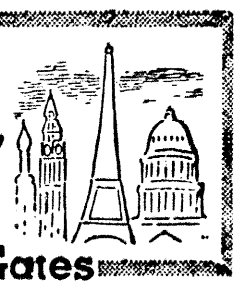
The Week In Focus



by Jack Gates

Sex And Government

Is there a sex scandal — somewhat similar to the John Profumo and Christine Keeler affair in London — brewing in Washington?

There was enough evidence uncovered the past week to indicate that something of this sort might be in the wind.

The central figure in the so-far mysterious case is Bobby Baker, who recently resigned under pressure as secretary to the Democratic majority leader in the Senate.

Linked in the Senate investigation of the business affairs Baker, who resigned after allegations he used influence to help his business interest, is a beautiful, statuesque brunette, identified as Mrs. Elly Rometsch, 27, who was sent packing after a quiet investigation by the FBI before Baker's resignation. Meanwhile, Rep. H. R. Gross of Iowa has asked the current administration to reveal the inside story of the kiss-and-tell frau who was whisked out of the country after reportedly boasting of amorous frolics with Washington figures.

Among the unconfirmed stories making the rounds is that Mrs. Rometsch, wife of a sergeant who was assigned to the West German military mission in Washington, was often at the Quorum Club, of which Baker was a charter member. It has been an elegant gathering place for lobbyists and members of Congress.

Rometsch was called home last August because of reports concerning his wife's conduct. A month later, the couple was divorced.

The Senate Rules committee, which is investigating Baker and the tie-in between him and the woman, have indicated it would like to question her. Committee members have said the hearings could touch some in the executive branch of government as well as on Capitol Hill.

Meanwhile, another story seething just below the surface, is one that several top administration and Congressional officials are trying to cool down. It concerns a modernistic, four-bedroom town house near Capitol Hill that Baker purchased for $28,000 earlier this year to house two Congressional secretaries — one his own. The two apparently took good advantage of Baker's thoughtfulness and, as any two attractive single girls in Washington might have done, held frequent parties — presumably attended by high Washington leaders. However, it seems doubtful at this phase that Baker's Washington life will get into the investigation, but it might get splashed on the record if the suit against Baker involving a vending machine firm gets to trial.

At any rate, more interesting developments in the case should be upcoming shortly.

Another Possible Scandal

A good measure of the style — or lack of it — in an administration is the way it handles its scandals. What freezers and minks were to Harry Truman, and vicuna coats to Eisenhower, former Navy Secretary Fred Korth is to the Kennedys.

And by the professional politician's yardstick of political aesthetics, the Kennedys have so far not shown to good advantage. The Navy at first claimed that Korth quit in a courageous protest against Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's rejection of a Navy demand for a second nuclear carrier. This "take-my-marbles-and-go-home" theory would not hold water, however, since Korth resigned before McNamara made his final decision. Then the White House said that Korth had committed the "indiscretion" of using official stationary for personal business. This looked like a bad joke once the enormity of this correspondence became public. Korth's office said he resigned for personal reasons and released the letters with a great show of candor — after Washington newsmen had gotten wind of them—hoping to bury them in the Sunday editions. Unlike complicated bank loans and highly technical defense contracts, Korth's cruises on the Navy yacht Sequoia with extra good customers of the Fort Worth bank he formerly headed are easy to comprehend and stick in the public's mind.

KORTH

The justice department, which last month investigated the conflict-of-interest charges against Korth and gave him a clean bill of health, is hastily taking a closer look under heavy pressure from Congressmen who feel the administration tried to do a whitewash job.

On The Political Side

Political charges — in a prelude to the 1964 presidential campaign — broke out the past week between President Kennedy and Senator Barry Goldwater, conceded to be the GOP front-runner at the present time.

In Washington, Goldwater accused the President of playing the basest kind of politics with information about the government because he wants to stay in power. He went on to accuse Kennedy of weighing everything the government does on the scales of public relations.

Later in New York, Goldwater admitted that peace and a good business climate in 1964 would make President Kennedy a tough man to beat. But so far, he said, "nearly a thousand days of waste spending, wishful thinking, unwarranted interventions and waning confidence by business and labor have marked the Kennedy administration.

KENNEDY

Overall, he accused Kennedy of "blackouts, distortions, fabrication and falsification of the news" in an effort to perpetuate himself.

In a reply at Philadelphia, Kennedy, who campaigned three years ago on a pledge to get the country on the move again, claimed that "America is on the march."

Kennedy flew to Philadelphia in the taxpayers airplane to attend a Democratic fund raising dinner and to give a boost to Mayor James H. J. Tate's bid to his first full-four-year term.

The chief executive referred only slightly to the racial issue which threatens to play an important role in next Tuesday's mayoralty election there. Tate's administration has been plagued by the racial issue this year, notably school integration and job equality. There have been a series of riots and near riots in recent weeks and within the last week, 59 firemen were dismissed for picketing a Tate political speech in demands for pay increases.

Republican mayoralty candidate James McDermott has capitalized on these problems by distributing miniature firemen helmets and questioning whether the government goes too far if it interferes with a person's right to choose his neighborhood and schools for his children.

In fact, there is indication that that city's powerful Democratic organization, which gave Kennedy a 331,000 majority in 1960, finds itself in an unexpectedly tough battle to retain control over city hall.

The latest incident came a week ago when a white policeman shot and killed a Negro youth being questioned about a stolen watch. The officer, since suspended pending a hearing, said the youth attacked him with a knife. The shooting sparked a riot in which, among other things, white motorists driving through the streets in the areas were menaced and their cars attacked.

Meanwhile back in Washington, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said "it is inconceivable" that Vice President Lyndon Johnson will be dumped from the 1964 Democratic ticket. There have been reports that he would be. Later, Kennedy, at a press conference, said he would like nothing better than to have Johnson as a running mate again.

Election And Civil Rights

The big question politicians pondered the past week: Will voters who have loudly condemned racism in Jackson, Miss., and Albany, Ga., stick to their principles when demonstrators turn up in their own towns?

Congressmen, Senators, even White House advisors are watching some upcoming elections to see how far the northern white electorate is willing to go along with integration.

Incidentally, the first warning flag was hoisted in Boston — President Kennedy's home town. There, during an otherwise uneventful school board election, chairman Mrs. Louise Hicks refused NAACP demands that a state of de facto segregation be declared. Boston has the policy of letting any child enroll in any school, but it's so cumbersome few make use of it and 16 Boston schools are over 80 per cent Negro. Mrs. Hicks won a whopping vote of confidence.

In Chicago, school superintendent Benjamin Willis not only ignored segregation charges, but refused to carry out a policy of letting children select their schools. He has strong white backing for his stand. Also in Chicago, opponents of the city's new anti-discrimination housing ordinance are driving for a statewide referendum on the question.

A key vote is scheduled in Philadelphia Tuesday. The powerful Democratic organization there is backing for re-election Mayor James H. J. Tate. His opponent is Republican James T. McDermott, 37, a lawyer who never has held public office.

Racial issues have made this a hotter than usual race. Tate's administration has been plagued with racial riots. A strong showing by the Republican candidate would indicate trouble for President Kennedy, who was so concerned about the situation he flew there the past week for a speech, during the course of which he praised Tate.

In Kentucky, another key race is on tap. The dominant issue in the campaign between Democrat Edward T. Breathitt, 38, and Republican Louie B. Nunn, also 38, is civil-rights and anti-Kennedyism.

Nunn pledged if elected he would rescind the present executive order in Kentucky banning racial discrimination in businesses and professions licensed by the state which was established by the present governor, Bert T. Combs, a democrat. He also said he would not introduce any comparable civil rights legislation that would create racial problems.

So popular has been Nunn's stand on the civil rights issue, that Breathitt who is backed by Combs, has said if elected he would submit the entire civil rights question to the General Assembly.

Again a strong showing by Nunn would indicate trouble for the democrats. In fact most election forecasters regard the series of upcoming local elections as boding no good for civil rights forces.

Meanwhile in Congress, the administration won its fight to kill a tough civil rights bill in the House Judiciary Committee. After some members had conferred with the President, the committee voted 19 to 15 to reject a bill the administration had contended was too stiff to get through Congress. It then began consideration of a milder, but still wide-ranging bill that is stronger in some respects than the original administration proposal. Later in the week, the committee reported out favorably the so-called compromise bill.

Meanwhile, some congressmen figure there is not enough time left for the 88th Congress to approve the top-priority tax cut and civil rights legislation, although the August body will remain in operation up to the start of the 1964 session which begans January 3.

The Washington Scene

HOUSEWIVES — relax for the time being — anyway. The government's economists see no danger that the automatic outbreak of price boosts in a dozen industries will unbalance the family budget. Meanwhile, Walter W. Heller, the administration's top economist says the central problem facing the nation's economy is lack of demand. This, he said, must be met by a substantial tax reduction. Added to this picture was the Labor Department's report that the cost of living in September remained unchanged with fluctuating prices of selected items balancing off. Food prices, for example, fell six-tenths of one per cent from August . . .

LAST WEEKEND, Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev made headlines with the announcement — or rather assumed announcement — that the Soviets were reducing their space efforts — including the moon probe. However, later, Dr. Edward C. Welsh, a leading space adviser to President Kennedy, panned the idea and said he believed the statement was an attempt to slow down the U.S. lunar project, rather than a Soviet withdrawal. He said there was nothing in Khrushchev's remarks to indicate a withdrawal. In fact, on close reading of the remarks, he said, the opposite impression is gained . . .

KHRUSHCHEV

MEANWHILE, President Kennedy has assured an apprehensive West Germany that the U.S. intends to keep its present combat strength in Europe intact. The president's reply was in answer to a series of news dispatches from abroad indicating that a cutback in U.S. military forces is planned or under way. He said the U.S. policy is to maintain six divisions in Germany as long as they are needed. Simultaneously, it was reported the U.S. is considering withdrawal of some military personnel from Japan as part of the administration's drive to reduce dollar spending abroad . . .

THE CHAIRMAM of the House Space Committee says the U.S. may have surpassed the Soviet Union in the space race. Rep. George P. Miller declared that is one conclusion that could be drawn from recent developments. Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Soviet announced it has launched a space ship into orbit which can maneuver in all directions, changing its orbit both sidewise and in height. The announcement said the apparatus is called "Polyot One" which means flight. This presumably is a key step in the manned probe of outer space .. . . .

On The Domestic Side Of The News

At Cambridge, Mass., the dean of Harvard College reports serious violations of dormitory rules are bringing the school closer and closer to outright scandal.

In a letter to the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily newspaper, Dean John U. Munro, said instances of immorality in men's dormitories have badly shaken up the school administration.

He went on to say that "trouble has arisen because of what was once considered a pleasant privilege — permitting women to visit the dormitories — has come to be a license to use the college rooms for wild parties and sexual intercourse." College authorities throughout the nation have repeatedly expressed apprehension at the increase of sexual intercourse among students. . . .

NEW CHURCHES of the United Church of Christ faith which fail to adopt non-discriminatory membership policies will be denied financial help from the parent organization. The church group's Board of Homeland Ministers — meeting in New Orleans — passed such a resolution. It applies to churches organized after July 1, 1964 . . .

IN CHICAGO, a committee of professional journalists reports that freedom of information in the federal government is at "the lowest ebb in history." In its 1963 report, the Advancement of Freedom of Information Committee of Sigma Delta Chi, the journalistic society, singled out the Defense Department as the prime offender . . . .

A SWEEPING call for elimination of racial discrimination has won approval of the UN General Assembly's Social and Humanitarian and Cultural Committee. The declaration was worded so strongly that the U.S. abstained on grounds that enforcement would abridge U.S. constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and association . . .

IN A SHARP replay in the past week, Ambassador Charles C. Stelle of the arms negotation team, defended West Germany as a loyal ally and advocate of peace. The reply was to communist charges that West Germany was a militant and dangerous nation.

Around The World Briefly

COMMUNIST CHINA reported that the Chinese air force has shot down another U. S.-made U2 high altitude reconnaissance plane that intruded over Hua Tung near Shanghai. The Reds claimed the plane belonged to the Nationalist Chinese and added that the U2 was on a "harrassing mission"...

IN HAVANA, Fidel Castro claimed his men had captured U. S. counter-intelligence agents smuggling explosives into Cuba. He threatened to shoot them along with prisoners from an American - organized raiding party. Castro then charged that the U. S. foreign policy in regard to Cuba is "hypocritical." . . .

TERROR AGAIN struck Caracas, Venezuela. Terrorists, in an almost disdainful manner, burned an office of the Interior Ministry in a stepped up campaign of burning raids in an attempt to topple the government of President Romulo Betancourt. Businessmen in Caracas have demanded better protection against terrorist sabotage . . .

EARLIER IN the week, Communist guerrillas smashed a crack South Vietnamese task force and in doing so, captured the three U. S. Army advisers with the force. The U. S. is attempting to negotiate with the guerrillas for the return of the Americans . . .

HALLOWEEN turned into fear in Decatur, Ill. It seems a practical joker distributed mothballs to youngsters on a Halloween trick-or-treat jaunt. Health authorities, who are seeking the joker, warned that the balls are poisonous. Authorities urged parents of children known to have tasted or eaten the balls to take the children to a hospital for treatment . . .

MEANWHILE, in Washington President Kennedy reported there is a good chance the U. S. and Soviet Union will agree on direct air service between the two countries. If put into effect, it would be between New York and Moscow . . .

TRAGEDY OCCURRED in two separate sections of the country late in the week. In Indianapolis, a gas explosion in an auditorium in Indianapolis during a Holiday on Ice show, killed at least 62 persons and injured 385. The other blast came a few hours earlier in Marietta, Ga., where seven were killed and 25 injured. The Georgia explosion occurred in a drug store which was crowded with shoppers, some dressed in Halloween costumes . . .

At The Taxpayers' Expense

Presidential Trips Costly

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nobody knows for certain how many people are involved in making sure a President moves safely and swiftly on his flying, out-of-town trips.

Nobody can even guess how much they cost. Hundreds, maybe thousands, of individuals have some part, mostly minor, in the complex preparations.

If the trip is long enough, thousands, maybe hundreds of thousands, of dollars can be charged to the trip if all tasks and the salaries of those who performed them, are included.

But how can you calculate the total cost of sending not one, but two mammoth jets on each trip?

Or of seven plush, air-conditioned, twin-jet helicopters?

Or of the assorted other planes, such as the cargo ship that carries the President's automobile?

Despite this lack of information—or maybe because of it—presidential trips will be a 1964 campaign issue.

AS PRESIDENT Kennedy's jet, Air Force One, lands at Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, a helicopter (foreground) warms up to fly Kennedy to his summer home at Hyannis Port 20 miles away, for the weekend. Even a short trip like this recent one, during which the President accepted an honorary university degree, runs into considerable money. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

The Cry

Already the cry has gone up, even before the Republican hopefuls have had a chance for early spring tryouts.

Rep. William E. Miller of New York, the Republican national chairman, said President Kennedy's recent, so-called conservation trip through the West was "an out-and-out campaign tour," and so the Democrats should pick up the tab.

"He is grossly abusing his prerogatives," Miller said. "I must vehemently protest."

Because vehement protests will continue, and because these trips in themselves have become a remarkable study in jet age logistics, lets look at what happens when a President goes visiting.

Perhaps we should observe the finished product first.

Any stop would do, but President Kennedy's brief visit to the new Whiskeytown Dam in Northern California is a good, and spectacular, example.

One by one the helicopters flap in, clumsy as seabirds trying a beach landing, but lining up neatly on the top of the huge dam.

After A Pause

Instantly girls squeal. (who would have thought in Lincoln's day that the instant squeal would someday be a chief ingredient in our political ritual?) The band plays. Reporters and photographers with the President scurry for their places. Secret Service men fan out purposefully. Local dignitaries, puffed up for the great occasion, somehow manage a final, satisfying puff.

Long before the trip is announced, the White House staff and party leaders size up hundreds of requests for presidential time.

During his Western nature tour, through hostile territory that went to Nixon in 1960, Kennedy usually was introduced by Democratic senators up for re-election. This may not sway a vote, but it's supposed to put renewed zip into the party faithful.

Trip Planned

Secret Service men worry over potential trouble spots.

Advance men from the White House and Democratic headquarters check schedules, try to keep the would-be dignitaries to hand-shakable proportions, offer suggestions for boosting the size of the crowd.

Minute details are hashed over.

Everywhere the President goes, he has a White House switchboard set up, ready for any emergency. If he moves into remote areas, extra lines or microwave equipment provide additional long distance circuits.

Not only is a direct phone handy wherever the President is —including the church at which he may attend Mass—but the advance men try to guess where he might want to go.

Around 50 newspaper, radio and television reporters traipse after the President. Their combined telephonic and telegraphic demands won't begin to match those of the touring White House.

The Week In Focus

by Jack Gates

Sex And Government

Is there a sex scandal — somewhat similar to the John Profumo and Christine Keeler affair in London — brewing in Washington?

There was enough evidence uncovered the past week to indicate that something of this sort might be in the wind.

Linked in the Senate investigation of the business affairs of Baker, who resigned after allegations he used influence to help his business interest, is a beautiful, statuesque brunette, identified as Mrs. Elly Rometsch, 27, who was sent packing after a quiet investigation by the FBI before Baker's resignation. Meanwhile, Rep. H. R. Gross of Iowa has asked the current administration to reveal the inside story of the kiss-and-tell frau who was whisked out of the country after reportedly boasting of amorous frolics with Washington figures.

Among the unconfirmed stories making the rounds is that Mrs. Rometsch, wife of a sergeant who was assigned to the West German military mission in Washington, was often at the Quorum Club, of which Baker was a charter member. It has been an elegant gathering place for lobbyists and members of Congress.

Rometsch was called home last August because of reports concerning his wife's conduct. A month later, the couple was divorced.

The Senate Rules committee, which is investigating Baker and the tie-in between him and the woman, have indicated it would like to question her. Committee members have said the hearings could touch some in the executive branch of government as well as on Capitol Hill.

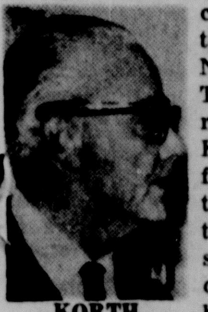
Meanwhile, another story seething just below the surface, is one that several top administration and Congressional officials are trying to cool down. It concerns a modernistic, four-bedroom town house near Capitol Hill that Baker purchased for $28,000 earlier this year to house two Congressional secretaries — one his own. The two apparently took good advantage of Baker's thoughtfulness and, as any two attractive single girls in Washington might have done, held frequent parties — presumably attended by high Washington leaders. However, it seems doubtful at this phase that Baker's Washington life will get into the investigation, but it might get splashed on the record if the suit against Baker involving a vending machine firm gets to trial.

At any rate, more interesting developments in the case should be upcoming shortly.

Another Possible Scandal

A good measure of the style — or lack of it — in an administration is the way it handles its scandals. What freezers and minks were to Harry Truman, and vicuna coats to Eisenhower, former Navy Secretary Fred Korth is to the Kennedys.

And by the professional politician's yardstick of political aesthetics, the Kennedys have so far not shown to good advantage. The Navy at first claimed that Korth quit in a courageous protest against Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's rejection of a Navy demand for a second nuclear carrier. This "take-my-marbles-and-go-home" theory would not hold water, however, since Korth resigned before McNamara made his final decision. Then the White House said that Korth had committed the "indiscretion" of using official stationary for personal business. This looked like a bad joke once the enormity of this correspondence became public. Korth's office said he resigned for personal reasons and released the letters with a great show of candor — after Washington newsmen had gotten wind of them—hoping to bury them in the Sunday editions. Unlike complicated bank loans and highly technical defense contracts, Korth's cruises on the Navy yacht Sequoia with extra good customers of the Fort Worth bank he formerly headed are easy to comprehend and stick in the public's mind.



KORTH

The justice department, which last month investigated the conflict-of-interest charges against Korth and gave him a clean bill of health, is hastily taking a closer look under heavy pressure from Congressmen who feel the administration tried to do a whitewash job.

On The Political Side

Political charges — in a prelude to the 1964 presidential campaign — broke out the past week between President Kennedy and Senator Barry Goldwater, conceded to be the GOP front-runner at the present time.

In Washington, Goldwater accused the President of playing the basest kind of politics with information about the government because he wants to stay in power. He went on to accuse Kennedy of weighing everything the government does on the scales of public relations.

Later in New York, Goldwater admitted that peace and a good business climate in 1964 would make President Kennedy a tough man to beat. But so far, he said, "nearly a thousand days of waste spending, wishful thinking, unwarranted interventions and waning confidence by business and labor have marked the Kennedy administration.

KENNEDY

Overall, he accused Kennedy of "blackouts, distortions, fabrication and falsification of the news" in an effort to perpetuate himself.

In a reply at Philadelphia, Kennedy, who campaigned three years ago on a pledge to get the country on the move again, claimed that "America is on the march."

Kennedy flew to Philadelphia in the taxpayers airplane to attend a Democratic fund raising dinner and to give a boost to Mayor James H. J. Tate's bid to his first full-four-year term.

The chief executive referred only slightly to the racial issue which threatens to play an important role in next Tuesday's mayoralty election there. Tate's administration has been plagued by the racial issue this year, notably school integration and job equality. There have been a series of riots and near riots in recent weeks and within the last week, 59 firemen were dismissed for picketing a Tate political speech in demands for pay increases.

Republican mayoralty candidate James McDermott has capitalized on these problems by distributing miniature firemen helmets and questioning whether the government goes too far if it interferes with a person's right to choose his neighborhood and schools for his children.

In fact, there is indication that that city's powerful Democratic organization, which gave Kennedy a 331,000 majority in 1960, finds itself in an unexpectedly tough battle to retain control over city hall.

The latest incident came a week ago when a white policeman shot and killed a Negro youth being questioned about a stolen watch. The officer, since suspended pending a hearing, said the youth attacked him with a knife. The shooting sparked a riot in which, among other things, white motorists driving through the streets in the areas were menaced and their cars attacked.

Meanwhile back in Washington, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said "it is inconceivable" that Vice President Lyndon Johnson will be dumped from the 1964 Democratic ticket. There have been reports that he would be. Later, Kennedy, at a press conference, said he would like nothing better than to have Johnson as a running mate again.

Election And Civil Rights

The big question politicians pondered the past week: Will voters who have loudly condemned racism in Jackson, Miss., and Albany, Ga., stick to their principles when demonstrators turn up in their own towns?

Congressmen, Senators, even White House advisors are watching some upcoming elections to see how far the northern white electorate is willing to go along with integration.

Incidentally, the first warning flag was hoisted in Boston — President Kennedy's home town. There, during an otherwise uneventful school board election, chairman Mrs. Louise Hicks refused NAACP demands that a state of de facto segregation be declared. Boston has the policy of letting any child enroll in any school, but it's so cumbersome few make use of it and 16 Boston schools are over 80 per cent Negro. Mrs. Hicks won a whopping vote of confidence.

In Chicago, school superintendent Benjamin Willis not only ignored segregation charges, but refused to carry out a policy of letting children select their schools. He has strong white backing for his stand. Also in Chicago, opponents of the city's new anti-discrimination housing ordinance are driving for a statewide referendum on the question.

A key vote is scheduled in Philadelphia Tuesday. The powerful Democratic organization there is backing for reelection Mayor James H. J. Tate. His opponent is Republican James T. McDermott, 37, a lawyer who never has held public office.

Racial issues have made this a hotter than usual race. Tate's administration has been plagued with racial riots. A strong showing by the Republican candidate would indicate trouble for President Kennedy, who was so concerned about the situation he flew there the past week for a speech, during the course of which he praised Tate.

In Kentucky, another key race is on tap. The dominant issue in the campaign between Democrat Edward T. Breathitt, 38, and Republican Louie B. Nunn, also 38, is civil-rights and anti-Kennedyism.

Nunn pledged if elected he would rescind the present executive order in Kentucky banning racial discrimination in businesses and professions licensed by the state which was established by the present governor, Bert T. Combs, a democrat. He also said he would not introduce any comparable civil rights legislation that would create racial problems.

So popular has been Nunn's stand on the civil rights issue, that Breathitt who is backed by Combs, has said if elected he would submit the entire civil rights question to the General Assembly.

Again a strong showing by Nunn would indicate trouble for the democrats. In fact most election forecasters regard the series of upcoming local elections as boding no good for civil rights forces.

Meanwhile in Congress, the administration won its fight to kill a tough civil rights bill in the House Judiciary Committee. After some members had conferred with the President, the committee voted 19 to 15 to reject a bill the administration had contended was too stiff to get through Congress. It then began consideration of a milder, but still wide-ranging bill that is stronger in some respects than the original administration proposal. Later in the week, the committee reported out favorably the so-called compromise bill.

Meanwhile, some congressmen figure there is not enough time left for the 88th Congress to approve the top-priority tax cut and civil rights legislation, although the August body will remain in operation up to the start of the 1964 session which begans January 3.

The Washington Scene

HOUSEWIVES — relax for the time being — anyway. The government's economists see no danger that the automatic outbreak of price boosts in a dozen industries will unbalance the family budget. Meanwhile, Walter W. Heller, the administration's top economist says the central problem facing the nation's economy is lack of demand. This, he said, must be met by a substantial tax reduction. Added to this picture was the Labor Department's report that the cost of living in September remained unchanged with fluctuating prices of selected items balancing off. Food prices, for example, fell six-tenths of one per cent from August . . .

LAST WEEKEND, Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev made headlines with the announcement — or rather assumed announcement — that the Soviets were reducing their space efforts — including the moon probe. However, later, Dr. Edward C. Welsh, a leading space adviser to President Kennedy, panned the idea and said he believed the statement was an attempt to slow down the U.S. lunar project, rather than a Soviet withdrawal. He said there was nothing in Khrushchev's remarks to indicate a withdrawal. In fact, on close reading of the remarks, he said, the opposite impression is gained . . .

KHRUSHCHEV

MEANWHILE, President Kennedy has assured an apprehensive West Germany that the U.S. intends to keep its present combat strength in Europe intact. The president's reply was in answer to a series of news dispatches from abroad indicating that a cutback in U.S. military forces is planned or under way. He said the U.S. policy is to maintain six divisions in Germany as long as they are needed. Simultaneously, it was reported the U.S. is considering withdrawal of some military personnel from Japan as part of the administration's drive to reduce dollar spending abroad . . .

THE CHAIRMAM of the House Space Committee says the U.S. may have surpassed the Soviet Union in the space race. Rep. George P. Miller declared that is one conclusion that could be drawn from recent developments. Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Soviet announced it has launched a space ship into orbit which can maneuver in all directions, changing its orbit both sidewise and in height. The announcement said the apparatus is called "Polyot One" which means flight. This presumably is a key step in the manned probe of outer space .. . . .

On The Domestic Side Of The News

At Cambridge, Mass., the dean of Harvard College reports serious violations of dormitory rules are bringing the school closer and closer to outright scandal.

In a letter to the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily newspaper, Dean John U. Munro, said instances of immorality in men's dormitories have badly shaken up the school administration.

He went on to say that "trouble has arisen because of what was once considered a pleasant privilege — permitting women to visit the dormitories — has come to be a license to use the college rooms for wild parties and sexual intercourse." College authorities throughout the nation have repeatedly expressed apprehension at the increase of sexual intercourse among students. . . .

NEW CHURCHES of the United Church of Christ faith which fail to adopt non-discriminatory membership policies will be denied financial help from the parent organization. The church group's Board of Homeland Ministers — meeting in New Orleans — passed such a resolution. It applies to churches organized after July 1, 1964 . . .

IN CHICAGO, a committee of professional journalists reports that freedom of information in the federal government is at "the lowest ebb in history." In its 1963 report, the Advancement of Freedom of Information Committee of Sigma Delta Chi, the journalistic society, singled out the Defense Department as the prime offender . . . .

A SWEEPING call for elimination of racial discrimination has won approval of the UN General Assembly's Social and Humanitarian and Cultural Committee. The declaration was worded so strongly that the U.S. abstained on grounds that enforcement would abridge U.S. constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and association . . .

IN A SHARP replay in the past week, Ambassador Charles C. Stelle of the arms negotation team, defended West Germany as a loyal ally and advocate of peace. The reply was to communist charges that West Germany was a militant and dangerous nation.

Around The World Briefly

COMMUNIST CHINA reported that the Chinese air force has shot down another U. S.-made U2 high altitude reconnaissance plane that intruded over Hua Tung near Shanghai. The Reds claimed the plane belonged to the Nationalist Chinese and added that the U2 was on a "harrassing mission"...

IN HAVANA, Fidel Castro claimed his men had captured U. S. counter-intelligence agents smuggling explosives into Cuba. He threatened to shoot them along with prisoners from an American - organized raiding party. Castro then charged that the U. S. foreign policy in regard to Cuba is "hypocritical." . . .

TERROR AGAIN struck Caracas, Venezuela. Terrorists, in an almost disdainful manner, burned an office of the Interior Ministry in a stepped up campaign of burning raids in an attempt to topple the government of President Romulo Betancourt. Businessmen in Caracas have demanded better protection against terrorist sabotage . . .

EARLIER IN the week, Communist guerrillas smashed a crack South Vietnamese task force and in doing so, captured the three U. S. Army advisers with the force. The U. S. is attempting to negotiate with the guerrillas for the return of the Americans . . .

HALLOWEEN turned into fear in Decatur, Ill. It seems a practical joker distributed mothballs to youngsters on a Halloween trick-or-treat jaunt. Health authorities, who are seeking the joker, warned that the balls are poisonous. Authorities urged parents of children known to have tasted or eaten the balls to take the children to a hospital for treatment . . .

MEANWHILE, in Washington President Kennedy reported there is a good chance the U. S. and Soviet Union will agree on direct air service between the two countries. If put into effect, it would be between New York and Moscow . . .

TRAGEDY OCCURRED in two separate sections of the country late in the week. In Indianapolis, a gas explosion in an auditorium in Indianapolis during a Holiday on Ice show, killed at least 62 persons and injured 385. The other blast came a few hours earlier in Marietta, Ga., where seven were killed and 25 injured. The Georgia explosion occurred in a drug store which was crowded with shoppers, some dressed in Halloween costumes . . .

Presidential Trips Costly

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nobody knows for certain how many people are involved in making sure a President moves safely and swiftly on his flying, out-of-town trips.

Nobody can even guess how much they cost. Hundreds, maybe thousands, of individuals have some part, mostly minor, in the complex preparations.

If the trip is long enough, thousands, maybe hundreds of thousands, of dollars can be charged to the trip if all tasks and the salaries of those who performed them, are included.

But how can you calculate the total cost of sending not one, but two mammoth jets on each trip?

Or of seven plush, air-conditioned, twin-jet helicopters?

Or of the assorted other planes, such as the cargo ship that carries the President's automobile?

Despite this lack of information—or maybe because of it—presidential trips will be a 1964 campaign issue.

AS PRESIDENT Kennedy's jet, Air Force One, lands at Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, a helicopter (foreground) warms up to fly Kennedy to his summer home at Hyannis Port 20 miles away, for the weekend. Even a short trip like this recent one, during which the President accepted an honorary university degree, runs into considerable money. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

The Cry

Already the cry has gone up, even before the Republican hopefuls have had a chance for early spring tryouts.

Rep. William E. Miller of New York, the Republican national chairman, said President Kennedy's recent, so-called conservation trip through the West was "an out-and-out campaign tour," and so the Democrats should pick up the tab.

"He is grossly abusing his prerogatives," Miller said. "I must vehemently protest."

Because vehement protests will continue, and because these trips in themselves have become a remarkable study in jet age logistics, lets look at what happens when a President goes visiting.

Perhaps we should observe the finished product first.

Any stop would do, but President Kennedy's brief visit to the new Whiskeytown Dam in Northern California is a good, and spectacular, example.

One by one the helicopters flap in, clumsy as seabirds trying a beach landing, but lining up neatly on the top of the huge dam.

After A Pause

Instantly girls squeal. (who would have thought in Lincoln's day that the instant squeal would someday be a chief ingredient in our political ritual?) The band plays. Reporters and photographers with the President scurry for their places. Secret Service men fan out purposefully. Local dignitaries, puffed up for the great occasion, somehow manage a final, satisfying puff.

No matter how often you have seen it, no matter whether it's in a major city or a small town, no matter whether he comes by helicopter, jet liner or limousine, a President's arrival is always impressive.

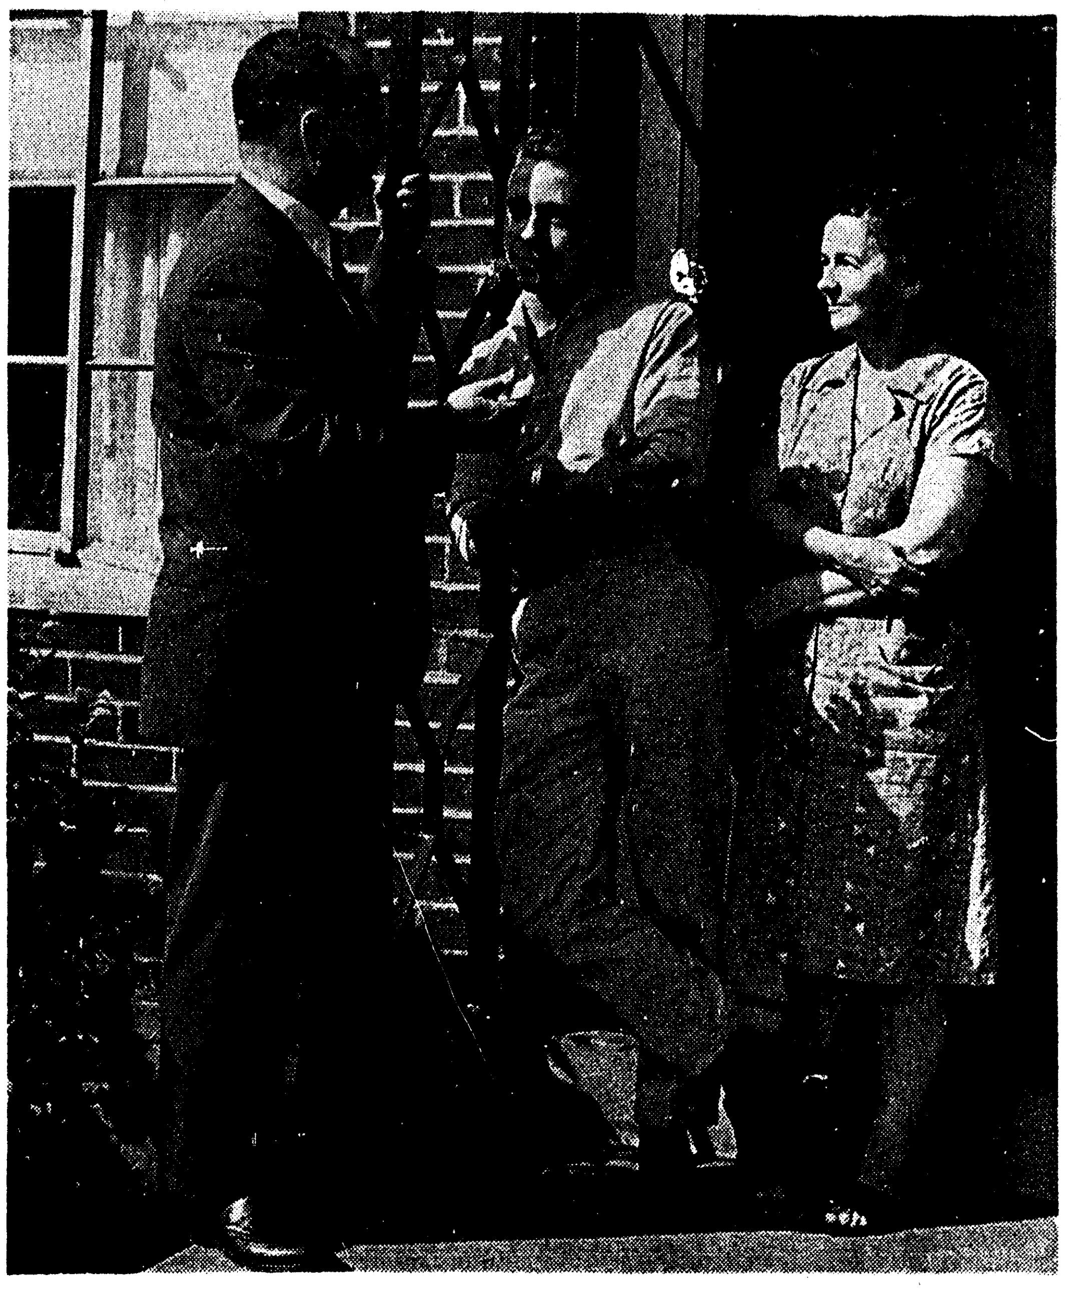
School Dropouts; A Grave Problem



IN THE DRIVE to get dropouts to return to school in Detroit, guidance counselor Alfred F. Bracciano (left) talks with Gene Ostasiewicz, 18, and his mother before going into their home. Bracciano was checking home conditions and discussing possible part-time work for Gene. He persuaded Gene, who dropped out of school last May, to go back this fall. A TYPICAL stance for school dropouts, hanging around a sandwich shop next door to the state employment office where they had tried to get jobs, in Detroit. Both Daniel Pennington, 18 (left,) and Joseph William Kuck, 21, told of hitting their teachers before they quit school. Daniel dropped out three years ago after being sent to a school for boys with behavior problems. Joseph left five years ago, after his father died. He has not been able to get steady work. EDITOR'S NOTE — One of the United States' gravest social problems today is its thousands of high school dropouts. Here is an examination, by an Associated Press specialist in educational affairs, of the dimensions of the problem.

By G.K. HODENFIELD

AP Educational Writer

The national crash program to lure high school dropouts back to the classrooms this fall appears to be a national flop.

The dropouts who went back are dropping out again, and for the same reason: failure, frustration, and boredom.

One expert predicts that 9 out of 10 of them will be back on the streets by January.

"Unless there are radical changes in the programs offered these young people, 90 per cent of the dropouts will drop out again by the end of the first semester," said Daniel Schreiber, director of the National Education Association's (NEA) dropout project.

VERY SLIGHT

"And the chances of getting those radical changes in this school year are very slight."

The NEA got the nationwide program under way in July with an "each one reach one" project. It asked each of its 860,000 members to personally get in touch with a potential dropout and persuade him to stay in school.

But the real impetus came when President Kennedy on Aug. 1 threw the influence and resources of his office behind it.

Kennedy told a news conference then he was allocating $250,000, one-fourth of his emergency funds, to the U.S. Office of Education for grants to the schools.

The money financed the efforts of about 600 guidance counselors who embarked on door-to-door campaigns to get the dropouts back.

But back to what?

All too often, Schreiber said, it was just more of the same. And therein lies the story of the program's failure.

About 800 dropouts were persuaded to return to school in the capital. Within two weeks, 50 per cent of them had left again. Within a month, 75 per cent had called it quits.

Many found themselves in classes of 80-90 students. They were jammed two and three deep around the walls of the classroom, with no place to sit down or put their books. Some times their teachers knew the subjects they were supposed to be teaching; often they were in the classroom only because they were available.

THE PROBLEMS

With a possible rare exception, schools were not geared to handle the returning dropouts.

For one thing, Schreiber said, the schools did not have enough time.

"The campaign was concentrated in the last two weeks of August. With school reopening in early September, there was no possibility of reacting quickly enough to make the necessary changes in organization and curriculum," he said.

About 75,000 dropouts were persuaded to return to school, including 1,000 in New York City, 800 in Washington, D.C., 498 in Detroit, 452 in Kansas City.

Those who worked in the program were understandably delighted to get 75,000 dropouts back to the classroom.

But these are the grim realities:

About 600,000 young Americans left school between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1963, most of them in the January-June period. The 75,000 who were lured back this fall represented 12½ per cent of the total.

But, if Schreiber is right in estimating that 90 per cent of those 75,000 will drop out again by January, the program will have been effective for just over 1 per cent of the young Americans who have tried school and found it wanting.

And that is only part of the tragic story.

The U.S. Office of Education has estimated that 400,000 additional students who stayed in high school through the end of the 1962-63 school year in June would decide not to show up again in September.

Over and over, Detroit's teenagers heard songstress Jan Wynn belt out an original lyric which implored them to "play it cool, stay in school."

The song was written by Jimmy Clark. It was made available to all Detroit stations, in a campaign sponsored by the Women's Advertising Club of Detroit.

Detroit also was allocated $11,000 from the President's fund. It used this to hire 21 guidance counselors to personally contact the 2,700 students who had left school since Feb. 1, 1963.

Dr. George Baker, chairman of the Detroit School Dropout Committee, summed it up:

"It's one thing to get them back in school. It's another to keep them. Many who decided to quit spent the summer trying to find a job. They couldn't find it, so they returned to school.

While the nation centers its attention on those who have already left school behind, a new army of dropouts-to-be steadily marches upward through the grade schools.

DON'T HAPPEN

Drop-outs don't just happen.

The forces that drive a youngster to quit school begin operating almost as soon as he enters the first grade.

"Earmarked" dropouts are not difficult to spot. They have these things in common:

They hate school intensely as a place where they meet only endless failure and frustration.

Many come from broken homes, or homes were no value is placed on education.

Devise a program in which every child finds some measure of success in school, some reason for wanting to be there.

Larry, Sally and Annie, three junior high pupils in Cleveland, have found no success in school. So they plan to drop out.

Their case histories tell a pitiful story.

Larry is a white boy from a middle-to-low income family. He is enrolled in the seventh grade for the second year. Last year he failed every subject and was absent 35 days. His teachers call him a belligerent show-off. His mother says he is sullen and uncooperative.

"I just don't like school, and the teachers just don't like me," he says.

"Oh, I guess I like wood-working all right. But the teacher there, he slapped me last week. And I'm not gonna turn out in English this year, either. The teacher seems kinda funny.

"Now, I don't like to read. Oh, sometimes I like to look at the sports pages.

"I'll get out and get me a job. Why, if I was in West Virginia right now I could go to work for $50 a week. I've got a job all lined up there, at a gas station.

"Or I might go to California. I like to travel. Another kid and me are saving our money. I ain't worried about money. I shine shoes for mine.

Sally, a white girl, lives with her mother and has no idea where her father is. She is in the 8th grade, more because of her age than her grades. Her teachers say she is highly emotional and refuses to do her assignments. Often, she goes to sleep in class. She reads at about the 4th grade level.

"I don't like school," she said. "I don't get along. I like the teachers, but they get mean to me, and I get mean right back.

"And my math—I just don't get it. I was in the 6th grade for two years, and I still don't know fractions. School is too hard for me.

"Mother wants me to stay in school, but I'll get a job. Mother wants me to study, but I tell her it's just no use. I gave up when I was in 6th grade.

"I'm 14 now. I'll finish this school year and then three months of next year. I'll grow up, and in my 20s I'll get married, and school isn't gonna do me no good. I can sew things now.

World Is Facing A Water Dilemma

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Always, somewhere, man is gasping for water. U.S. conservation experts say its depletion poses a greater problem than the disappearance of other natural resources such as coal and iron.

Yet, water doesn't disappear. It covers three-fourths of our planet and can be forever reused.

Why, then, the shortages that have ruined lands and destroyed civilizations? Uneven distribution is to blame. In the United States, for example, two-thirds of the seven trillion tons of annual rainfall occurs over one-third of the land area.

THE PROBLEM

Man finally is attacking the problem on a worldwise scale. Plans are being laid for a 10-year study of the earth's water resources—an International Hydrological Decade to begin Jan. 1, 1965. Projects initiated before 1975 may continue for a century, planners say.

Scientists of 100 nations will gather and study data on the earth's water cycle—the continuous movement of water from the oceans to storm clouds to the land and back to the oceans again.

They'll study its infiltration into the soil and how it moves through the soil—the effects of agriculture, man-built reservoirs, highways and cities on water circulation and quality—how it is lost to the atmosphere through evaporation from the soil and the "breathing" of plants — how snow and ice accumulate and release water.

International teams of hydrologists will study streamflow, levels of natural underground reservoirs and the way water steals topsoil — three billion tons of it in the United States every year.

Water erosion has destroyed an estimated one-fourth of this nation's fertile cropland. Since the 1880s, erosion has dug gullies and pits in the U.S. South, yet seemingly similar conditions have not had similar results in the southern Soviet Union and elsewhere in the world. Why? Hydrologists hope to find answers during the decade of cooperative study of the earth's waters.

The International Hydrological Decade is being guided by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization with support of many other international agencies.

Scientific communications will be maintained by the nongovernmental International Association of Scientific Hydrology, which spent two weeks in Berkeley recently setting up plans for the decade. It was the association that first proposed the 10-year study, at a meeting in Athens, Greece, in October 1961.

CONSTANT

Water yield is relatively constant while the world's population is exploding, Dr. Wilhelm K. Friedrich of Coblenz, Germany, told the Berkeley meeting. The first big job, he said, is to win support of governments for the program's projects.

Prof. David K. Todd of the University of California puts education and training of hydrologists high on the priority list. Todd heads a University Council on Hydrology, an organization formed a year ago by representatives of 29 major U.S. universities to promote advanced training in water science.

"There is a great shortage of competent men in hydrology," says Todd. "We have a missionary problem to make known the tremendous opportunity in the field of water resources."

NEEDS GREAT

Our water needs are enormous. The average man consumes about one ton of water a year in his food and drink. Plants need about 1,000 pounds of water to produce one pound of food. Industry and transportation require tremendous amounts.

To meet mushrooming needs, man must increase the availability or utility of the less than three per cent of the world's water that is fresh—and an estimated 80 per cent of that is in ice and snow, mostly in the polar ice caps. He can supplement this by desalting sea water, but the methods are costly.

The constant resource can be magnified by re-use. And man is learning how, even to the point of purifying and reclaiming sewage water.

Astronauts Training For Space Program Is Varied

S. astronauts. The truck tows the astronaut until he reaches an altitude of about 800 feet. Then he is cut loose to parachute to the ground. This is training for an emergency during the early phase of a Gemini space flight. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Each weekday morning at 8:15 America's astronauts assemble in a conference room at the Manned Spacecraft Center here and compare notes on developments in the Gemini and Apollo man-in-space programs.

"Major purpose of these meetings is to permit the astronauts to report and exchange views on latest happenings in the specialty area assigned each man," explained astronaut Frank Borman, 35-year-old Air Force major.

"For instance, I might submit a memorandum on the status of the Gemini Titan 2 launch vehicle," said Borman, whose special assignment covers booster rockets and booster abort systems.

RARE MEETING

Astronaut Neil Armstrong, 33, civilian and former X-15 rocket plane pilot commented:

"It's rare when all 16 of us attend one of these morning meetings. Because of our special tasks and other commitments, some of us usually are visiting manufacturing plants or training centers around the country. Those who miss a meeting are filled in later."

Armstrong, whose specialty is to monitor development and use of trainers and flight simulators, and Borman were among the nine astronauts named last fall to join the seven Project Mercury space pilots in training for the two-man Gemini flights and the Apollo man-on-the-moon project. Additional astronauts have just been named to the pool.

In interviews, Armstrong and Borman discussed the astronaut training program which eventually may culminate in several of them landing on the moon.

Neither is discouraged by the lengthy delay in the Gemini program, where technical difficulties have postponed the first manned flight more than a year until late 1964. As in any revolutionary program of this sort, delays can be expected, they said.

MORE TIME

"The additional time means we'll be much better trained," Borman said. "You can never overtrain for something like this."

The Gemini and Apollo preparation is much more sophisticated than that for Mercury.

"We must accept the fact," explained Borman, "that the missions which will concern us in the next decade will not be designed solely for the purpose of demonstrating man's capability to function in space. As a result of the Mercury experience, the pilot in both the Gemini and Apollo missions will have a more demanding role."

The Gemini astronauts, he said, must train to rendezvous and dock their spacecraft with other orbiting satellites and to conduct complex engineering and scientific experiments. Eventually, one of the two Gemini pilots is expected to step outside his spacecraft to see what it's like more than 100 miles above the earth protected only by a space suit.

Apollo will have the even more exacting pilot tasks of navigating to the moon, steering to a lunar touchdown and conducting a launching from the moon's surface.

As the spacecraft flights become longer and extend farther from the earth, Armstrong stated, systems management becomes a critical astronaut function.

IMPORTANCE

Thus, the importance of the specialty areas, where each astronaut can become proficient in a particular field and pass his knowledge onto the others in the daily meetings.

Often, an astronaut, applying his knowledge as a test pilot, suggests an engineering change which he thinks will benefit all of them. The morning sessions kick the idea around, and if it sounds feasible, it is suggested to engineers. Several spacecraft changes have resulted.

Rep. Hebert Finds Himself Plugging For Kennedy Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the strange workings of politics and government, a part of President Kennedy's program is being shepherded through the House by a congressman who is not exactly pro-Kennedy.

"Imagine that," said the congressman, Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., with a warm appreciation of the irony of the situation "Imagine Hebert plugging for an administration bill."

Hebert, pronounced "A-Bear," is often pointed out to newcomers as a most unusual personality on Capitol Hill, which is rich in characters.

For one thing, he has one of the most luxurious offices anyone ever saw. For another, he's the type that can laugh at himself, unusual in Congress.

As chairman of the legislative subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, Hebert has the job of getting some major measures passed.

These include the nuclear fallout shelter bill, the administration measure he found it so amusing to be sponsoring. Others are the military pay bill, the service academy appointment bill and the National Guard bill.

A Southern conservative and opponent of federal legislation in the field of civil rights, Hebert is frequently at outs with the national Democratic administration.

In 1948 he supported the states rights ticket for president - an act which cost him his post on the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Had he remained in the fold, he would be chairman of the group today.

In 1960 Hebert supported the independent elector plan in Louisiana. There was some talk of purging him from the Democratic party. Nothing came of it however.

Born Oct. 12, 1091, Hebert has had two successful careers-23 years as a New Orleans newspaper reporter and editor and then 23 years as a congressman.

As city editor of the New Orleans States, Hebert broke the "Louisiana scandals" stories that routed the remnants of the old Huey Long political machine back in 1937. As a result he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1940.

In Congress, Hebert has been in the middle of many a hot news story.

A power on the Armed Services Committee, Hebert - a tough, direct questioner - has given many a member of the Pentagon high brass set a rough morning of testifying.

When he was on the Committee on Un-American Activities Hebert was in the middle of the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers investigation. Later he headed an investigation subcommittee which among other things, looked into overcharges on defense contracts.

A big, genial man, he obviously relishes life and enjoys being F. Edward Hebert.

From the high ceilings, half a dozen spotlights shine on his big desk. The room has wall-to-wall carpeting, handsome window drapes that are always drawn, big, comfortable leather chairs and divans, a large television set, a hi-fi set from which comes soft music, a bar and a grandfather clock with soft chimes.

He paid for the extra equipment.

The office has a large pantry equipped with cooker and ice box. Almost every day his staff prepares lunch for him and he eats at his desk, sometimes alone, sometimes with members of the staff and frequently with Pentagon brass, constituents or with someone who happens to drop in at lunch time. The specialties of the office are Southern food and drink.

He can read by holding a letter close to his face. He strides around the Capitol corridors as if he could see a mile. In committee he afixes a special lens to his glasses to enable him to see a witness.

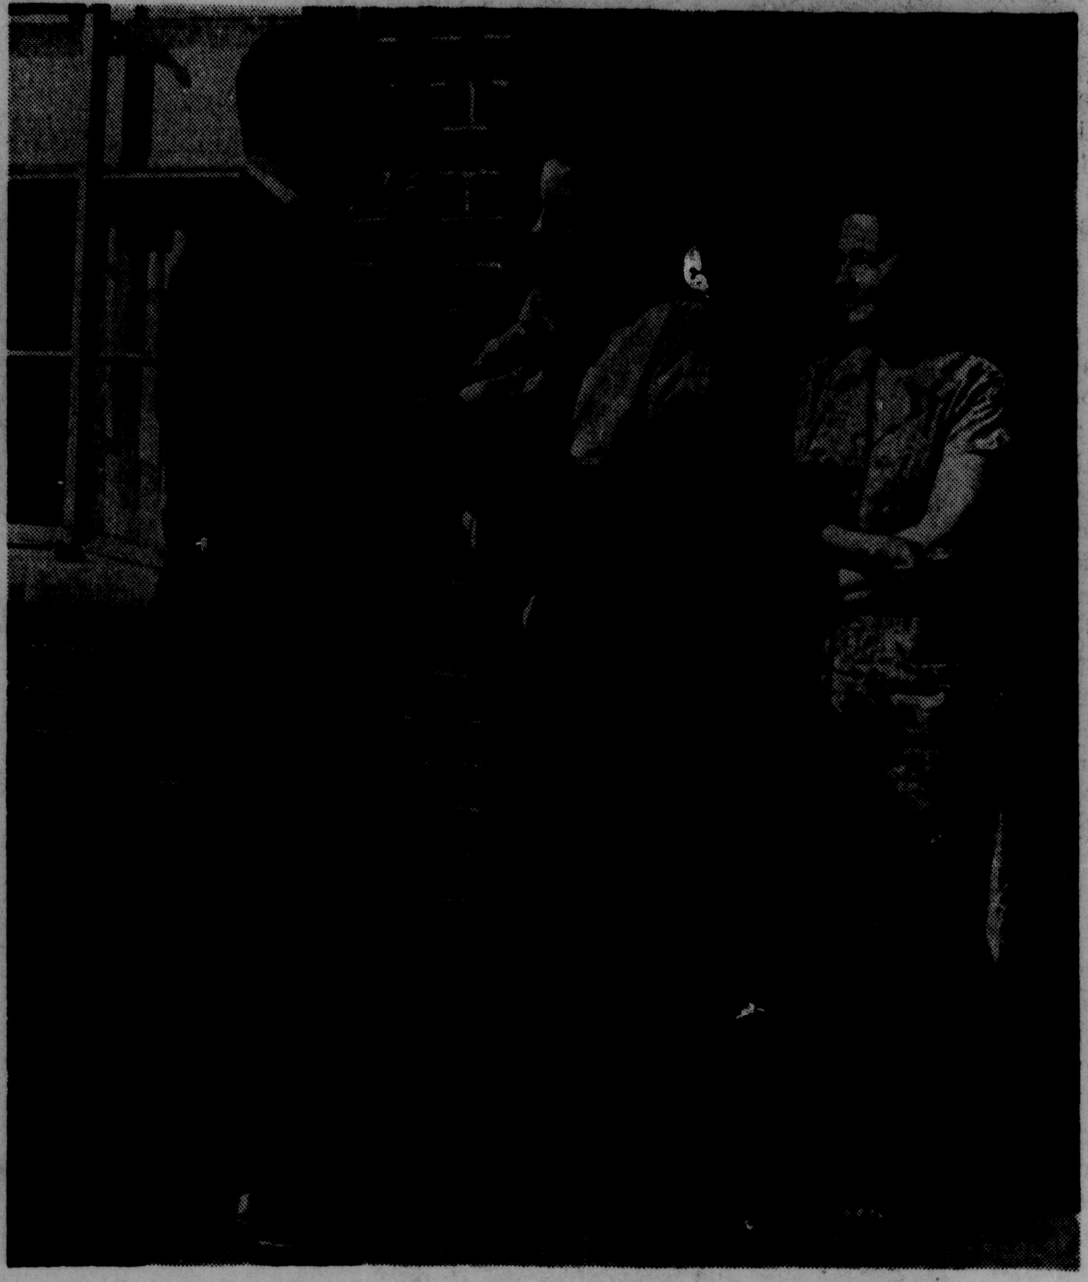
School Dropouts; A Grave Problem



IN THE DRIVE to get dropouts to return to school in Detroit, guidance counselor Alfred F. Bracciano (left) talks with Gene Ostasiewicz, 18, and his mother before going into their home. Bracciano was checking home conditions and discussing possible part-time work for Gene. He persuaded Gene, who dropped out of school last May, to go back this fall. EDITOR'S NOTE — One of the United States' gravest social problems today is its thousands of high school dropouts. Here is an examination, by an Associated Press specialist in educational affairs, of the dimensions of the problem.

By G.K. HODENFIELD

AP Educational Writer

The national crash program to lure high school dropouts back to the classrooms this fall appears to be a national flop.

The dropouts who went back are dropping out again, and for the same reason: failure, frustration, and boredom.

One expert predicts that 9 out of 10 of them will be back on the streets by January.

"Unless there are radical changes in the programs offered these young people, 90 per cent of the dropouts will drop out again by the end of the first semester," said Daniel Schreiber, director of the National Education Association's (NEA) dropout project.

VERY SLIGHT

"And the chances of getting those radical changes in this school year are very slight."

The NEA got the nationwide program under way in July with an "each one reach one" project. It asked each of its 860,000 members to personally get in touch with a potential dropout and persuade him to stay in school.

But the real impetus came when President Kennedy on Aug. 1 threw the influence and resources of his office behind it.

Kennedy told a news conference then he was allocating $250,000, one-fourth of his emergency funds, to the U.S. Office of Education for grants to the schools.

The money financed the efforts of about 600 guidance counselors who embarked on door-to-door campaigns to get the dropouts back.

But back to what?

All too often, Schreiber said, it was just more of the same. And therein lies the story of the program's failure.

About 800 dropouts were persuaded to return to school in the capital. Within two weeks, 50 per cent of them had left again. Within a month, 75 per cent had called it quits.

Many found themselves in classes of 80-90 students. They were jammed two and three deep around the walls of the classroom, with no place to sit down or put their books. Sometimes their teachers knew the subjects they were supposed to be teaching; often they were in the classroom only because they were available.

THE PROBLEMS

With a possible rare exception, schools were not geared to handle the returning dropouts.

For one thing, Schreiber said, the schools did not have enough time.

"The campaign was concentrated in the last two weeks of August. With school reopening in early September, there was no possibility of reacting quickly enough to make the necessary changes in organization and curriculum," he said.

About 75,000 dropouts were persuaded to return to school, including 1,000 in New York City, 800 in Washington, D.C., 498 in Detroit, 452 in Kansas City.

Those who worked in the program were understandably delighted to get 75,000 dropouts back to the classroom.

But these are the grim realities:

About 600,000 young Americans left school between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1963, most of them in the January-June period. The 75,000 who were lured back this fall represented 12½ per cent of the total.

But, if Schreiber is right in estimating that 90 per cent of those 75,000 will drop out again by January, the program will have been effective for just over 1 per cent of the young Americans who have tried school and found it wanting.

The U.S. Office of Education has estimated that 400,000 additional students who stayed in high school through the end of the 1962-63 school year in June would decide not to show up again in September.

Over and over, Detroit's teenagers heard songstress Jan Wynn belt out an original lyric which implored them to "play it cool, stay in school."

The song was written by Jimmy Clark. It was made available to all Detroit stations, in a campaign sponsored by the Women's Advertising Club of Detroit.

Detroit also was allocated $11,000 from the President's fund. It used this to hire 21 guidance counselors to personally contact the 2,700 students who had left school since Feb. 1, 1963.

Dr. George Baker, chairman of the Detroit School Dropout Committee, summed it up:

"It's one thing to get them back in school. It's another to keep them. Many who decided to quit spent the summer trying to find a job. They couldn't find it, so they returned to school.

While the nation centers its attention on those who have already left school behind, a new army of dropouts-to-be steadily marches upward through the grade schools.

DON'T HAPPEN

Drop-outs don't just happen.

The forces that drive a youngster to quit school begin operating almost as soon as he enters the first grade.

"Earmarked" dropouts are not difficult to spot. They have these things in common:

They hate school intensely as a place where they meet only endless failure and frustration.

Many come from broken homes or homes were no value is placed on education.

Devise a program in which every child finds some measure of success in school, some reason for wanting to be there.

Larry, Sally and Annie, three junior high pupils in Cleveland, have found no success in school. So they plan to drop out.

Their case histories tell a pitiful story.

Larry is a white boy from a middle-to-low income family. He is enrolled in the seventh grade for the second year. Last year he failed every subject and was absent 35 days. His teachers call him a belligerent show-off. His mother says he is sullen and uncooperative.

"I just don't like school, and the teachers just don't like me," he says.

"Oh, I guess I like wood-working all right. But the teacher there, he slapped me last week. And I'm not gonna turn out in English this year, either. The teacher seems kinda funny.

"Now, I don't like to read. Oh, sometimes I like to look at the sports pages.

"I'll get out and get me a job. Why, if I was in West Virginia right now I could go to work for $50 a week. I've got a job all lined up there, at a gas station.

"Or I might go to California. I like to travel. Another kid and me are saving our money. I ain't worried about money. I shine shoes for mine.

Sally, a white girl, lives with her mother and has no idea where her father is. She is in the 8th grade, more because of her age than her grades. Her teachers say she is highly emotional and refuses to do her assignments. Often, she goes to sleep in class. She reads at about the 4th grade level.

"I don't like school," she said. "I don't get along. I like the teachers, but they get mean to me, and I get mean right back.

"And my math—I just don't get it. I was in the 6th grade for two years, and I still don't know fractions. School is too hard for me.

"Mother wants me to stay in school, but I'll get a job. Mother wants me to study, but I tell her it's just no use. I gave up when I was in 6th grade.

"I'm 14 now. I'll finish this school year and then three months of next year. I'll grow up, and in my 20s I'll get married, and school isn't gonna do me no good. I can sew things now.

World Is Facing A Water Dilemma

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Always, somewhere, man is gasping for water. U.S. conservation experts say its depletion poses a greater problem than the disappearance of other natural resources such as coal and iron.

Yet, water doesn't disappear. It covers three-fourths of our planet and can be forever reused.

Why, then, the shortages that have ruined lands and destroyed civilizations? Uneven distribution is to blame. In the United States, for example, two-thirds of the seven trillion tons of annual rainfall occurs over one-third of the land area.

THE PROBLEM

Man finally is attacking the problem on a worldwise scale. Plans are being laid for a 10-year study of the earth's water resources—an International Hydrological Decade to begin Jan. 1, 1965. Projects initiated before 1975 may continue for a century, planners say.

Scientists of 100 nations will gather and study data on the earth's water cycle—the continuous movement of water from the oceans to storm clouds to the land and back to the oceans again.

They'll study its infiltration into the soil and how it moves through the soil—the effects of agriculture, man-built reservoirs, highways and cities on water circulation and quality—how it is lost to the atmosphere through evaporation from the soil and the "breathing" of plants — how snow and ice accumulate and release water.

International teams of hydrologists will study streamflow, levels of natural underground reservoirs and the way water steals topsoil — three billion tons of it in the United States every year.

Water erosion has destroyed an estimated one-fourth of this nation's fertile cropland. Since the 1880s, erosion has dug gullies and pits in the U.S. South, yet seemingly similar conditions have not had similar results in the southern Soviet Union and elsewhere in the world. Why? Hydrologists hope to find answers during the decade of cooperative study of the earth's waters.

The International Hydrological Decade is being guided by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization with support of many other international agencies.

Scientific communications will be maintained by the nongovernmental International Association of Scientific Hydrology, which spent two weeks in Berkeley recently setting up plans for the decade. It was the association that first proposed the 10-year study, at a meeting in Athens, Greece, in October 1961.

CONSTANT

Water yield is relatively constant while the world's population is exploding, Dr. Wilhelm K. Friedrich of Coblenz, Germany, told the Berkeley meeting. The first big job, he said, is to win support of governments for the program's projects.

Prof. David K. Todd of the University of California puts education and training of hydrologists high on the priority list. Todd heads a University Council on Hydrology, an organization formed a year ago by representatives of 29 major U.S. universities to promote advanced training in water science.

"There is a great shortage of competent men in hydrology," says Todd. "We have a missionary problem to make known the tremendous opportunity in the field of water resources."

NEEDS GREAT

Our water needs are enormous. The average man consumes about one ton of water a year in his food and drink. Plants need about 1,000 pounds of water to produce one pound of food. Industry and transportation require tremendous amounts.

REV. JAMES W. WHITE JR.

Rev. J. White Speaker At Revival Meet

Rev. James W. White, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, will begin a series of evangelistic services at the Memorial Presbyterian Church, North 4th at Mills Street, West Monroe, at 11 a.m. today. Rev. Hugh E. Bradshaw, pastor, announced that services will be at 7 p.m. daily Sunday through Thursday and at 7 every morning beginning with the Monday schedule.

The general subject for the Sunday morning worship and succeeding evening hours of worship will be "Men Who Did Follow Christ's Command." The 7 a.m. worship, Monday through Thursday, will be a 30-minute fellowship devotional. The subject of this series is "Doers of the Word."

Rev. White graduated from Southwestern College in Memphis with its 1959 class with the B. A. degree. Entering Austin Presbyterian Seminary in the Fall of 1959, he graduated with the 1962 class with the B. D. degree. He has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, since June, 1962. He is married to the former Sue Grower, and has one daughter.

Dr. Bradshaw, host pastor at Memorial, states that the public is cordially invited to all the services. Monday evening has been designated as Men-of-the-Church Night; Tuesday, Women-of-the Church; Wednesday, Community Night; and Thursday is set aside to honor Boy Scouts and their parents as special guests.

REV. MILLARD R. Perkins of Minden will serve as evangelist at a series of revival services starting today and extending through the following Sunday, it was announced by the Rev. Filer J. Seal, pastor. Sunday services will be held at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. and daily services Monday through Saturday will be held at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Every evening the choir will provide singing under the direction of church music director, Benny Owens.

Commission Will Install Rev. Faires

A Red River Presbytery commission will install the Rev. Archie B. Faires as associate minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe at 7:30 worship services this evening.

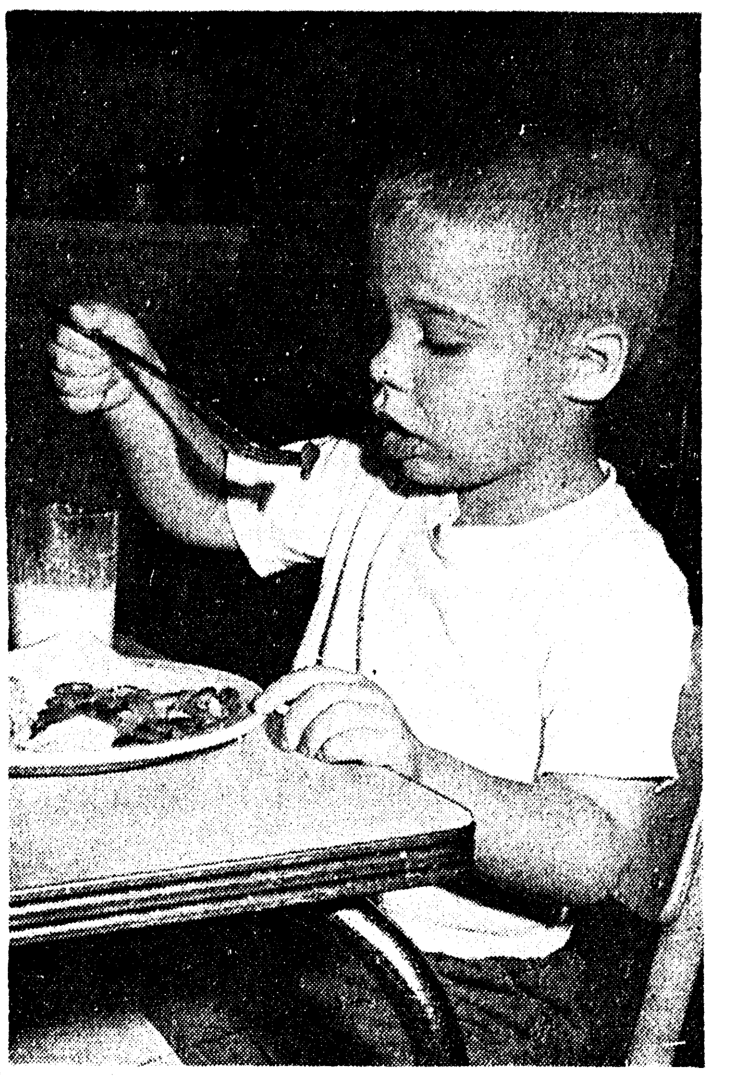
In this capacity, he also will have the responsibilities of being minister of education.

Dr. W. H. McFadden, pastor of the church will preside and propound the constitutional questions.

Rev. F. Clark Williams, pastor of Alabama Presbyterian Church, Choudrant, will preach the sermon and Rev. William W. Hatcher, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Monroe, will charge Rev. Faires.

Charles B. Griffis, elder of Rayville Presbyterian Church, Rayville, will charge the congregation. Other members of the commission are Carl R. Odom, elder, Highland Presbyterian Church, West Monroe, and Jesse R. McDonald, elder, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Monroe.

Special music will be provided by the Chancel, Chapel and Carol Choirs under the direction of Davis Bingham. Immediately following the installation worship service, a reception will be held for Rev. and Mrs. Faires in the youth room of the church.



"A FELLOW HAS TO EAT, You Know," is the slogan for the annual Fall Food Round-Up now in progress in churches throughout the state for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe. Allen, this year's "poster boy", gets the idea across pretty well. (Children's Home Photo)

GREGORY WALCOTT

Movie Star Speaker At Service Here

A star of movies and television, Gregory Walcott, will be featured speaker at a special 10:30 a.m. worship service today at the First Baptist Church of West Monroe.

Known to some of his filmland co-workers as "the Billy Graham of Hollywood," he has made many appearances around the country as a church lay speaker. He is a charter member of the Beverly Hills (Southern) Baptist Church, serves as a deacon, Sunday school teacher, member of the finance committee, and member of the pulpit committee.

ANOTHER APPEARANCE

In addition to appearing at the special service, he also will speak to junior laymen and deacons of the church.

In describing his work, Walcott said, "I am a layman. I make my living in the motion picture business, but I am essentially in the business of winning men to Jesus Christ."

He has appeared in such films as "Battle Cry," and "Mr. Roberts," and in television on "Wagon Train," "Perry Mason," and other shows.

Christ The King Rally Arranged

The annual Christ the King Rally will be held in St. Matthew's Cemetery today at 3 p.m. Father George Martinez, pastor of Our Lady of Fatima Parish, will give the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, assisted by Fathers Earl Beaulieu and Edward Deevy.

The sermon will be delivered by Father William Allen, pastor of St. Joseph Church. The St. Matthew's choir will be under the direction of Sister Mary Michael, D.C.

The rally will conclude with the blessing of the graves by Rt. Rev. Msgr. John C. Marsh, pastor of St. Matthew's Parish. The master of ceremonies for the event will be Father Warren Larroque.

Rev. E. Mercer Is Pulpit Guest

Rev. Earl D. Mercer, public relations director for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, will be pulpit guest at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. today at Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe.

Rev. Mercer, a graduate of Louisiana College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, will be preaching in the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. L. Sampson, who will be concluding a revival at Lakeshore Baptist Church in Monroe.

Home Starts Annual Fall Food Drive

The annual Fall Food Round Up in progress through December 5 in churches throughout the state is vital to the operation of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe.

The undertaking is sponsored by the churches in an effort to help provide canned goods and staple groceries to be used in feeding about 150 dependent boys and girls who live in the Home.

FOOD NEEDS

At the Home, 45 average-sized cans of a vegetable are required for one meal. Part of one breakfast may consist of 30-dozen eggs, 300 biscuits, 4 sides of sugar cured bacon and 12 tall cans of fruit juice. In one week, 150 pounds of flour and 75 pounds of corn meal are consumed.

Sixteen scheduled trips by the Home truck are being made to church members and other friends. The first trip was made October 22 and response thus far has been good,, acording to Wade B. East, Home superintendent.

In addition to foodstuffs, many miscellaneous items needed by the Home are contributed. All items are unloaded in a storeroom supervised by Walter Ray Weeks, a cottage parent. Boys in the Home assist him in sorting items which are given.

REMAINING TRIPS

Among remaining trips this Fall are the following in North Louisiana:

Monday, November 18: Start, Rayville, Delhi, Wisner, Gilbert, Chase, Winnsboro, Baskin, Mangham, Archibald and Alto.

Friday, November 29: Simsboro, Arcadia, Hurricane, Cross Roads, Athens, Homer, Haynesville, Summerfield, Bernice, Dubach, Vienna, Ruston, Choudrant and Calhoun.

Thursday, December 5: Newellton, St. Joseph, Waterproof, Manifest, Harrisonburg and Sicily Island.

Student Union Head To Help With Services

The Baptist Student Union of Northeast Louisiana State College will have charge of the evening services today at the Emmanuel Baptist Church of Monroe. The pastor, Rev. Fred Doolittle, is in Minnesota conducting a revival in the First Baptist Church of Owatonna.

Jerry Johnston, director of the Baptist Student Union work at Northeast, will have charge of the Training Union Assembly program which begins at 6 P.M. At the evening worship, he will bring the special music, and David Perkins, a medical missions volunteer, will bring the evening message.

The Baptist Student Union serves as a spiritual center for Baptist students enrolled at Northeast and also serves students of other denominations. The center serves about 2,000 students on the Northeast campus. These college young people conduct religious services each day and plan weekly programs of activities to help dormitory students to have christian fellowship while away from home.

REV. JAMES W. WHITE JR.

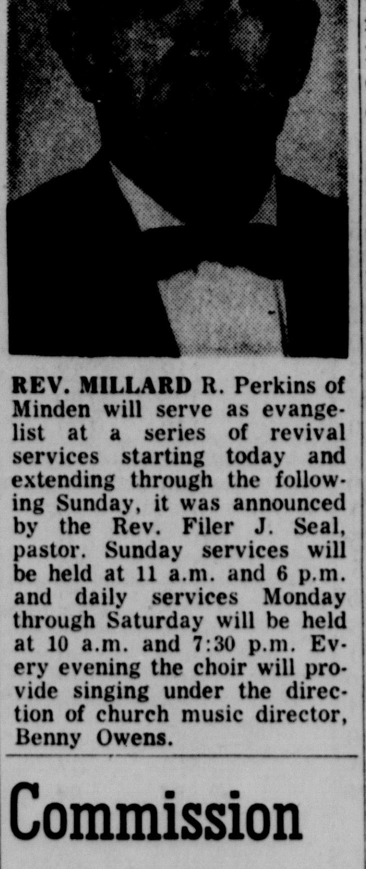
Rev. J. White Speaker At Revival Meet

Rev. James W. White, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, will begin a series of evangelistic services at the Memorial Presbyterian Church, North 4th at Mills Street, West Monroe, at 11 a.m. today. Rev. Hugh E. Bradshaw, pastor, announced that services will be at 7 p.m. daily Sunday through Thursday and at 7 every morning beginning with the Monday schedule.

The general subject for the Sunday morning worship and succeeding evening hours of worship will be "Men Who Did Follow Christ's Command." The 7 a.m. worship, Monday through Thursday, will be a 30-minute fellowship devotional. The subject of this series is "Doers of the Word."

Rev. White graduated from Southwestern College in Memphis with its 1959 class with the B. A. degree. Entering Austin Presbyterian Seminary in the Fall of 1959, he graduated with the 1962 class with the B. D. degree. He has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, since June, 1962. He is married to the former Sue Grower, and has one daughter.

Dr. Bradshaw, host pastor at Memorial, states that the public is cordially invited to all the services. Monday evening has been designated as Men-of-the-Church Night; Tuesday, Women - of - the Church; Wednesday, Community Night; and Thursday is set aside to honor Boy Scouts and their parents as special guests.



REV. MILLARD R. Perkins of Minden will serve as evangelist at a series of revival services starting today and extending through the following Sunday, it was announced by the Rev. Filer J. Seal, pastor. Sunday services will be held at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. and daily services Monday through Saturday will be held at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Every evening the choir will provide singing under the direction of church music director, Benny Owens.

Commission Will Install Rev. Faires

A Red River Presbytery commission will install the Rev. Archie B. Faires as associate minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe at 7:30 worship services this evening.

In this capacity, he also will have the responsibilities of being minister of education.

Dr. W. H. McFadden, pastor of the church will preside and propound the constitutional questions.

Rev. F. Clark Williams, pastor of Alabama Presbyterian Church, Choudrant, will preach the sermon and Rev. William W. Hatcher, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Monroe, will charge Rev. Faires.

Charles B. Griffis, elder of Rayville Presbyterian Church, Rayville, will charge the congregation. Other members of the commission are Carl R. Odom, elder, Highland Presbyterian Church, West Monroe, and Jesse R. McDonald, elder, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Monroe.

Special music will be provided by the Chancel, Chapel and Carol Choirs under the direction of Davis Bingham. Immediately following the installation worship service, a reception will be held for Rev. and Mrs. Faires in the youth room of the church.

"A FELLOW HAS TO EAT, You Know," is the slogan for the annual Fall Food Round-Up now in progress in churches throughout the state for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe. Allen, this year's "poster boy", gets the idea across pretty well. (Children's Home Photo)

GREGORY WALCOTT

Movie Star Speaker At Service Here

A star of movies and television, Gregory Walcott, will be featured speaker at a special 10:30 a.m. worship service today at the First Baptist Church of West Monroe.

Known to some of his filmland co-workers as "the Billy Graham of Hollywood," he has made many appearances around the country as a church lay speaker. He is a charter member of the Beverly Hills (Southern) Baptist Church, serves as a deacon, Sunday school teacher, member of the finance committee, and member of the pulpit committee.

ANOTHER APPEARANCE

In addition to appearing at the special service, he also will speak to junior laymen and deacons of the church.

In describing his work, Walcott said, "I am a layman. I make my living in the motion picture business, but I am essentially in the business of winning men to Jesus Christ."

He has appeared in such films as "Battle Cry," and "Mr. Roberts," and in television on "Wagon Train," "Perry Mason," and other shows.

Christ The King Rally Arranged

The annual Christ the King Rally will be held in St. Mathew's Cemetery today at 3 p.m. Father George Martinez, pastor of Our Lady of Fatima Parish, will give the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, assisted by Fathers Earl Beaulieu and Edward Deevy.

The sermon will be delivered by Father William Allen, pastor of St. Joseph Church. The St. Matthew's choir will be under the direction of Sister Mary Michael, D.C.

The rally will conclude with the blessing of the graves by Rt. Rev. Msgr. John C. Marsh, pastor of St. Matthew's Parish. The master of ceremonies for the event will be Father Warren Larroque.

Rev. E. Mercer Is Pulpit Guest

Rev. Earl D. Mercer, public relations director for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, will be pulpit guest at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. today at Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe.

Rev. Mercer, a graduate of Louisiana College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, will be preaching in the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. L. Sampson, who will be concluding a revival at Lakeshore Baptist Church in Monroe.

Home Starts Annual Fall Food Drive

The annual Fall Food Rounα Up in progress through December 5 in churches throughout the state is vital to the operation of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe.

The undertaking is sponsored by the churches in an effort to help provide canned goods and staple groceries to be used in feeding about 150 dependent boys and girls who live in the Home.

FOOD NEEDS

At the Home, 45 average-sized cans of a vegetable are required for one meal. Part of one breakfast may consist of 30-dozen eggs, 300 biscuits, 4 sides of sugar cured bacon and 12 tall cans of fruit juice. In one week, 150 pounds of flour and 75 pounds of corn meal are consumed.

Sixteen scheduled trips by the Home truck are being made to church members and other friends. The first trip was made October 22 and response thus far has been good,, acording to Wade B. East, Home superintendent.

In addition to foodstuffs, many miscellaneous items needed by the Home are contributed. All items are unloaded in a storeroom supervised by Walter Ray Weeks, a cottage parent. Boys in the Home assist him in sorting items which are given.

REMAINING TRIPS

Among remaining trips this Fall are the following in North Louisiana:

Monday, November 18: Start, Rayville, Delhi, Wisner, Gilbert, Chase, Winnsboro, Baskin, Mangham, Archibald and Alto.

Friday, November 29: Simsboro, Arcadia, Hurricane, Cross Roads, Athens, Homer, Haynesville, Summerfield, Bernice, Dubach, Vienna, Ruston, Choudrant and Calhoun.

Thursday, December 5: Newellton, St. Joseph, Waterproof, Manifest, Harrisonburg and Sicily Island.

Student Union Head To Help With Services

The Baptist Student Union of Northeast Louisiana State College will have charge of the evening services today at the Emmanuel Baptist Church of Monroe. The pastor, Rev. Fred Doolittle, is in Minnesota conducting a revival in the First Baptist Church of Owatonna.

Jerry Johnston, director of the Baptist Student Union work at Northeast, will have charge of the Training Union Assembly program which begins at 6 P.M. At the evening worship, he will bring the special music, and David Perkins, a medical missions volunteer, will bring the evening message.

The Baptist Student Union serves as a spiritual center for Baptist students enrolled at Northeast and also serves students of other denominations. The center serves about 2,000 students on the Northeast campus. These college young people conduct religious services each day and plan weekly programs of activities to help dormitory students to have christian fellowship while away from home.

School Dropouts; A Grave Problem

IN THE DRIVE to get dropouts to return to school in Detroit, guidance counselor Alfred F. Bracciano (left) talks with Gene Ostasiewicz, 18, and his mother before going into their home. Bracciano was checking home conditions and discussing possible part-time work for Gene. He persuaded Gene, who dropped out of school last May, to go back this fall. EDITOR'S NOTE — One of the United States' gravest social problems today is its thousands of high school dropouts. Here is an examination, by an Associated Press specialist in educational affairs, of the dimensions of the problem.

By G.K. HODENFIELD

AP Educational Writer

The national crash program to lure high school dropouts back to the classrooms this fall appears to be a national flop.

The dropouts who went back are dropping out again, and for the same reason: failure, frustration, and boredom.

One expert predicts that 9 out of 10 of them will be back on the streets by January.

"Unless there are radical changes in the programs offered these young people, 90 per cent of the dropouts will drop out again by the end of the first semester," said Daniel Schreiber, director of the National Education Association's (NEA) dropout project.

VERY SLIGHT

"And the chances of getting those radical changes in this school year are very slight."

The NEA got the nationwide program under way in July with an "each one reach one" project. It asked each of its 860,000 members to personally get in touch with a potential dropout and persuade him to stay in school.

But the real impetus came when President Kennedy on Aug. 1 threw the influence and resources of his office behind it.

Kennedy told a news conference then he was allocating $250,000, one-fourth of his emergency funds, to the U.S. Office of Education for grants to the schools.

The money financed the efforts of about 600 guidance counselors who embarked on door-to-door campaigns to get the dropouts back.

But back to what?

All too often, Schreiber said, it was just more of the same. And therein lies the story of the program's failure.

About 800 dropouts were persuaded to return to school in the capital. Within two weeks, 50 per cent of them had left again. Within a month, 75 per cent had called it quits.

Many found themselves in classes of 80-90 students. They were jammed two and three deep around the walls of the classroom, with no place to sit down or put their books. Sometimes their teachers knew the subjects they were supposed to be teaching; often they were in the classroom only because they were available.

THE PROBLEMS

With a possible rare exception, schools were not geared to handle the returning dropouts.

For one thing, Schreiber said, the schools did not have enough time.

"The campaign was concentrated in the last two weeks of August. With school reopening in early September, there was no possibility of reacting quickly enough to make the necessary changes in organization and curriculum," he said.

About 75,000 dropouts were persuaded to return to school, including 1,000 in New York City, 800 in Washington, D.C., 498 in Detroit, 452 in Kansas City.

Those who worked in the program were understandably delighted to get 75,000 dropouts back to the classroom.

But these are the grim realities:

About 600,000 young Americans left school between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1963, most of them in the January-June period. The 75,000 who were lured back this fall represented 12½ per cent of the total.

But, if Schreiber is right in estimating that 90 per cent of those 75,000 will drop out again by January, the program will have been effective for just over 1 per cent of the young Americans who have tried school and found it wanting.

The U.S. Office of Education has estimated that 400,000 additional students who stayed in high school through the end of the 1962-63 school year in June would decide not to show up again in September.

Over and over, Detroit's teenagers heard songstress Jan Wynn belt out an original lyric which implored them to "play it cool, stay in school."

The song was written by Jimmy Clark. It was made available to all Detroit stations, in a campaign sponsored by the Women's Advertising Club of Detroit.

Detroit also was allocated $11,000 from the President's fund. It used this to hire 21 guidance counselors to personally contact the 2,700 students who had left school since Feb. 1, 1963.

Dr. George Baker, chairman of the Detroit School Dropout Committee, summed it up:

"It's one thing to get them back in school. It's another to keep them. Many who decided to quit spent the summer trying to find a job. They couldn't find it, so they returned to school.

While the nation centers its attention on those who have already left school behind, a new army of dropouts-to-be steadily marches upward through the grade schools.

DON'T HAPPEN

Drop-outs don't just happen.

The forces that drive a youngster to quit school begin operating almost as soon as he enters the first grade.

"Earmarked" dropouts are not difficult to spot. They have these things in common:

They hate school intensely as a place where they meet only endless failure and frustration.

Many come from broken homes or homes were no value is placed on education.

Devise a program in which every child finds some measure of success in school, some reason for wanting to be there.

Larry, Sally and Annie, three junior high pupils in Cleveland, have found no success in school. So they plan to drop out.

Their case histories tell a pitiful story.

Larry is a white boy from a middle-to-low income family. He is enrolled in the seventh grade for the second year. Last year he failed every subject and was absent 35 days. His teachers call him a belligerent show-off. His mother says he is sullen and uncooperative.

"I just don't like school, and the teachers just don't like me," he says.

"Oh, I guess I like wood-working all right. But the teacher there, he slapped me last week. And I'm not gonna turn out in English this year, either. The teacher seems kinda funny.

"Now, I don't like to read. Oh, sometimes I like to look at the sports pages.

"I'll get out and get me a job. Why, if I was in West Virginia right now I could go to work for $50 a week. I've got a job all lined up there, at a gas station.

"Or I might go to California. I like to travel. Another kid and me are saving our money. I ain't worried about money. I shine shoes for mine.

Sally, a white girl, lives with her mother and has no idea where her father is. She is in the 8th grade, more because of her age than her grades. Her teachers say she is highly emotional and refuses to do her assignments. Often, she goes to sleep in class. She reads at about the 4th grade level.

"I don't like school," she said. "I don't get along. I like the teachers, but they get mean to me, and I get mean right back.

"And my math—I just don't get it. I was in the 6th grade for two years, and I still don't know fractions. School is too hard for me.

"Mother wants me to stay in school, but I'll get a job. Mother wants me to study, but I tell her it's just no use. I gave up when I was in 6th grade.

"I'm 14 now. I'll finish this school year and then three months of next year. I'll grow up, and in my 20s I'll get married, and school isn't gonna do me no good. I can sew things now.

Spotlight ON THE WORLD

Monroe Morning World

World Is Facing A Water Dilemma

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Always, somewhere, man is gasping for water. U.S. conservation experts say its depletion poses a greater problem than the disappearance of other natural resources such as coal and iron.

Yet, water doesn't disappear. It covers three-fourths of our planet and can be forever reused.

Why, then, the shortages that have ruined lands and destroyed civilizations? Uneven distribution is to blame. In the United States, for example, two-thirds of the seven trillion tons of annual rainfall occurs over one-third of the land area.

THE PROBLEM

Man finally is attacking the problem on a worldwise scale. Plans are being laid for a 10-year study of the earth's water resources—an International Hydrological Decade to begin Jan. 1, 1965. Projects initiated before 1975 may continue for a century, planners say.

Scientists of 100 nations will gather and study data on the earth's water cycle—the continuous movement of water from the oceans to storm clouds to the land and back to the oceans again.

They'll study its infiltration into the soil and how it moves through the soil—the effects of agriculture, man-built reservoirs, highways and cities on water circulation and quality—how it is lost to the atmosphere through evaporation from the soil and the "breathing" of plants — how snow and ice accumulate and release water.

International teams of hydrologists will study streamflow, levels of natural underground reservoirs and the way water steals topsoil — three billion tons of it in the United States every year.

Water erosion has destroyed an estimated one-fourth of this nation's fertile cropland. Since the 1880s, erosion has dug gullies and pits in the U.S. South, yet seemingly similar conditions have not had similar results in the southern Soviet Union and elsewhere in the world. Why? Hydrologists hope to find answers during the decade of cooperative study of the earth's waters.

The International Hydrological Decade is being guided by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization with support of many other international agencies.

Scientific communications will be maintained by the nongovernmental International Association of Scientific Hydrology, which spent two weeks in Berkeley recently setting up plans for the decade. It was the association that first proposed the 10-year study, at a meeting in Athens, Greece, in October 1961.

CONSTANT

Water yield is relatively constant while the world's population is exploding, Dr. Wilhelm K. Friedrich of Coblenz, Germany, told the Berkeley meeting. The first big job, he said, is to win support of governments for the program's projects.

Prof. David K. Todd of the University of California puts education and training of hydrologists high on the priority list. Todd heads a University Council on Hydrology, an organization formed a year ago by representatives of 29 major U.S. universities to promote advanced training in water science.

"There is a great shortage of competent men in hydrology," says Todd. "We have a missionary problem to make known the tremendous opportunity in the field of water resources."

NEEDS GREAT

Our water needs are enormous. The average man consumes about one ton of water a year in his food and drink. Plants need about 1,000 pounds of water to produce one pound of food. Industry and transportation require tremendous amounts.

To meet mushrooming needs, man must increase the availability or utility of the less than three per cent of the world's water that is fresh—and an estimated 80 per cent of that is in ice and snow, mostly in the polar ice caps. He can supplement this by desalting sea water, but the methods are costly.

The constant resource can be magnified by re-use. And man is learning how, even to the point of purifying and reclaiming sewage water.

Astronauts Training For Space Program Is Varied

WITH HIS parachute unfurled, astronaut Frank Borman, Air Force major, starts out behind a truck (unseen) which is towing him, during parachute training near Houston, Tex., where he is in training with the 15 other U. S. astronauts. The truck tows the astronaut until he reaches an altitude of about 800 feet. Then he is cut loose to parachute to the ground. This is training for an emergency during the early phase of a Gemini space flight. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Each weekday morning at 8:15 America's astronauts assemble in a conference room at the Manned Spacecraft Center here and compare notes on developments in the Gemini and Apollo man-in-space programs.

"Major purpose of these meetings is to permit the astronauts to report and exchange views on latest happenings in the specialty area assigned each man," explained astronaut Frank Borman, 35-year-old Air Force major.

"For instance, I might submit a memorandum on the status of the Gemini Titan 2 launch vehicle," said Borman, whose special assignment covers booster rockets and booster abort systems.

RARE MEETING

Astronaut Neil Armstrong, 33, civilian and former X-15 rocket plane pilot commented:

"It's rare when all 16 of us attend one of these morning meetings. Because of our special tasks and other commitments, some of us usually are visiting manufacturing plants or training centers around the country. Those who miss a meeting are filled in later."

Armstrong, whose specialty is to monitor development and use of trainers and flight simulators, and Borman were among the nine astronauts named last fall to join the seven Project Mercury space pilots in training for the two-man Gemini flights and the Apollo man-on-the-moon project. Additional astronauts have just been named to the pool.

In interviews, Armstrong and Borman discussed the astronaut training program which eventually may culminate in several of them landing on the moon.

Neither is discouraged by the lengthy delay in the Gemini program, where technical difficulties have postponed the first manned flight more than a year until late 1964. As in any revolutionary program of this sort, delays can be expected, they said.

MORE TIME

"The additional time means we'll be much better trained," Borman said. "You can never overtrain for something like this."

The Gemini and Apollo preparation is much more sophisticated than that for Mercury.

"We must accept the fact," explained Borman, "that the missions which will concern us in the next decade will not be designed solely for the purpose of demonstrating man's capability to function in space. As a result of the Mercury experience, the pilot in both the Gemini and Apollo missions will have a more demanding role."

The Gemini astronauts, he said, must train to rendezvous and dock their spacecraft with other orbiting satellites and to conduct complex engineering and scientific experiments. Eventually, one of the two Gemini pilots is expected to step outside his spacecraft to see what it's like more than 100 miles above the earth protected only by a space suit.

Apollo will have the even more exacting pilot tasks of navigating to the moon, steering to a lunar touchdown and conducting a launching from the moon's surface.

As the spacecraft flights become longer and extend farther from the earth, Armstrong stated, systems management becomes a critical astronaut function.

IMPORTANCE

Thus, the importance of the specialty areas, where each astronaut can become proficient in a particular field and pass his knowledge onto the others in the daily meetings.

Often, an astronaut, applying his knowledge as a test pilot, suggests an engineering change which he thinks will benefit all of them. The morning sessions kick the idea around, and if it sounds feasible, it is suggested to engineers. Several spacecraft changes have resulted.

THE "ARAB" sitting on the ground is astronaut Elliot M. See Jr., undergoing desert survival training at Stead Air Force Base, Nev. Learning to use available equipment, such as parachute material made into the protective costume See wears, was part of the training given a group of the 16 astronauts on one of their training trips away from the spacecraft center at Houston, Tex. Rep. Hebert Finds Himself Plugging For Kennedy Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the strange workings of politics and government, a part of President Kennedy's program is being shepherded through the House by a congressman who is not exactly pro-Kennedy.

"Imagine that," said the congressman, Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., with a warm appreciation of the irony of the situation "Imagine Hebert plugging for an administration bill."

Hebert, pronounced "A-Bear," is often pointed out to newcomers as a most unusual personality on Capitol Hill, which is rich in characters.

For one thing, he has one of the most luxurious offices anyone ever saw. For another, he's the type that can laugh at himself, unusual in Congress.

As chairman of the legislative subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, Hebert has the job of getting some major measures passed.

These include the nuclear fallout shelter bill, the administration measure he found it so amusing to be sponsoring. Others are the military pay bill, the service academy appointment bill and the National Guard bill.

A Southern conservative and opponent of federal legislation in the field of civil rights, Hebert is frequently at outs with the national Democratic administration.

In 1948 he supported the states rights ticket for president - an act which cost him his post on the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Had he remained in the fold, he would be chairman of the group today.

In 1960 Hebert supported the independent elector plan in Louisiana. There was some talk of purging him from the Democratic party. Nothing came of it however.

Born Oct. 12, 1091, Hebert has had two successful careers-23 years as a New Orleans newspaper reporter and editor and then 23 years as a congressman.

As city editor of the New Orleans States, Hebert broke the "Louisiana scandals" stories that routed the remnants of the old Huey Long political machine back in 1937. As a result he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1940.

In Congress, Hebert has been in the middle of many a hot news story.

A power on the Armed Services Committee, Hebert - a tough, direct questioner - has given many a member of the Pentagon high brass set a rough morning of testifying.

When he was on the Committee on Un-American Activities Hebert was in the middle of the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers investigation. Later he headed an investigation subcommittee which among other things, looked into overcharges on defense contracts.

A big, genial man, he obviously relishes life and enjoys being F. Edward Hebert.

From the high ceilings, half a dozen spotlights shine on his big desk. The room has wall-to-wall carpeting, handsome window drapes that are always drawn, big, comfortable leather chairs and divans, a large television set, a hi-fi set from which comes soft music, a bar and a grandfather clock with soft chimes.

He paid for the extra equipment.

The office has a large pantry equipped with cooker and ice box. Almost every day his staff prepares lunch for him and he eats at his desk, sometimes alone, sometimes with members of the staff and frequently with Pentagon brass, constituents or with someone who happens to drop in at lunch time. The specialties of the office are Southern food and drink.

He can read by holding a letter close to his face. He strides around the Capitol corridors as if he could see a mile. In committee he afixes a special lens to his glasses to enable him to see a witness.

The dropouts who went back are dropping out again, and for the same reason: failure, frustration, and boredom.

One expert predicts that 9 out of 10 of them will be back on the streets by January.

"Unless there are radical changes in the programs offered these young people, 90 per cent of the dropouts will drop out again by the end of the first semester," said Daniel Schreiber, director of the National Education Association's (NEA) dropout project.

VERY SLIGHT

"And the chances of getting those radical changes in this school year are very slight."

The NEA got the nationwide program under way in July with an "each one reach one" project. It asked each of its 860,000 members to personally get in touch with a potential dropout and persuade him to stay in school.

But the real impetus came when President Kennedy on Aug. 1 threw the influence and resources of his office behind it.

Kennedy told a news conference then he was allocating $250,000, one-fourth of his emergency funds, to the U.S. Office of Education for grants to the schools.

The money financed the efforts of about 600 guidance counselors who embarked on door-to-door campaigns to get the dropouts back.

But back to what?

All too often, Schreiber said, it was just more of the same. And therein lies the story of the program's failure.

About 800 dropouts were persuaded to return to school in the capital. Within two weeks, 50 per cent of them had left again. Within a month, 75 per cent had called it quits.

Many found themselves in classes of 80-90 students. They were jammed two and three deep around the walls of the classroom, with no place to sit down or put their books. Some times their teachers knew the subjects they were supposed to be teaching; often they were in the classroom only because they were available.

THE PROBLEMS

With a possible rare exception, schools were not geared to handle the returning dropouts.

For one thing, Schreiber said, the schools did not have enough time.

"The campaign was concentrated in the last two weeks of August. With school reopening in early September, there was no possibility of reacting quickly enough to make the necessary changes in organization and curriculum," he said.

About 75,000 dropouts were persuaded to return to school, including 1,000 in New York City, 800 in Washington, D.C., 498 in Detroit, 452 in Kansas City.

Those who worked in the program were understandably delighted to get 75,000 dropouts back to the classroom.

But these are the grim realities:

About 600,000 young Americans left school between Jan. 1 and Sept. 1, 1963, most of them in the January-June period. The 75,000 who were lured back this fall represented 12½ per cent of the total.

But, if Schreiber is right in estimating that 90 per cent of those 75,000 will drop out again by January, the program will have been effective for just over 1 per cent of the young Americans who have tried school and found it wanting.

The U.S. Office of Education has estimated that 400,000 additional students who stayed in high school through the end of the 1962-63 school year in June would decide not to show up again in September.

Over and over, Detroit's teenagers heard songstress Jan Wynn belt out an original lyric which implored them to "play it cool, stay in school."

The song was written by Jimmy Clark. It was made available to all Detroit stations, in a campaign sponsored by the Women's Advertising Club of Detroit.

Detroit also was allocated $11,000 from the President's fund. It used this to hire 21 guidance counselors to personally contact the 2,700 students who had left school since Feb. 1, 1963.

Dr. George Baker, chairman of the Detroit School Dropout Committee, summed it up:

"It's one thing to get them back in school. It's another to keep them. Many who decided to quit spent the summer trying to find a job. They couldn't find it, so they returned to school.

While the nation centers its attention on those who have already left school behind, a new army of dropouts-to-be steadily marches upward through the grade schools.

DON'T HAPPEN

Drop-outs don't just happen.

The forces that drive a youngster to quit school begin operating almost as soon as he enters the first grade.

"Earmarked" dropouts are not difficult to spot. They have these things in common:

They hate school intensely as a place where they meet only endless failure and frustration.

Many come from broken homes or homes were no value is placed on education.

Devise a program in which every child finds some measure of success in school, some reason for wanting to be there.

Larry, Sally and Annie, three junior high pupils in Cleveland, have found no success in school. So they plan to drop out.

Their case histories tell a pitiful story.

Larry is a white boy from a middle-to-low income family. He is enrolled in the seventh grade for the second year. Last year he failed every subject and was absent 35 days. His teachers call him a belligerent show-off. His mother says he is sullen and uncooperative.

"I just don't like school, and the teachers just don't like me," he says.

"Oh, I guess I like wood-working all right. But the teacher there, he slapped me last week. And I'm not gonna turn out in English this year, either. The teacher seems kinda funny.

"Now, I don't like to read. Oh, sometimes I like to look at the sports pages.

"I'll get out and get me a job. Why, if I was in West Virginia right now I could go to work for $50 a week. I've got a job all lined up there, at a gas station.

"Or I might go to California. I like to travel. Another kid and me are saving our money. I ain't worried about money. I shine shoes for mine.

Sally, a white girl, lives with her mother and has no idea where her father is. She is in the 8th grade, more because of her age than her grades. Her teachers say she is highly emotional and refuses to do her assignments. Often, she goes to sleep in class. She reads at about the 4th grade level.

"I don't like school," she said. "I don't get along. I like the teachers, but they get mean to me, and I get mean right back.

"And my math—I just don't get it. I was in the 6th grade for two years, and I still don't know fractions. School is too hard for me.

"Mother wants me to stay in school, but I'll get a job. Mother wants me to study, but I tell her it's just no use. I gave up when I was in 6th grade.

"I'm 14 now. I'll finish this school year and then three months of next year. I'll grow up, and in my 20s I'll get married, and school isn't gonna do me no good. I can sew things now.

Spotlight ON THE WORLD

Monroe Morning World

World Is Facing A Water Dilemma

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Always, somewhere, man is gasping for water. U.S. conservation experts say its depletion poses a greater problem than the disappearance of other natural resources such as coal and iron.

Yet, water doesn't disappear. It covers three-fourths of our planet and can be forever reused.

Why, then, the shortages that have ruined lands and destroyed civilizations? Uneven distribution is to blame. In the United States, for example, two-thirds of the seven trillion tons of annual rainfall occurs over one-third of the land area.

THE PROBLEM

Man finally is attacking the problem on a worldwise scale. Plans are being laid for a 10-year study of the earth's water resources—an International Hydrological Decade to begin Jan. 1, 1965. Projects initiated before 1975 may continue for a century, planners say.

Scientists of 100 nations will gather and study data on the earth's water cycle—the continuous movement of water from the oceans to storm clouds to the land and back to the oceans again.

They'll study its infiltration into the soil and how it moves through the soil—the effects of agriculture, man-built reservoirs, highways and cities on water circulation and quality—how it is lost to the atmosphere through evaporation from the soil and the "breathing" of plants — how snow and ice accumulate and release water.

International teams of hydrologists will study streamflow, levels of natural underground reservoirs and the way water steals topsoil — three billion tons of it in the United States every year.

Water erosion has destroyed an estimated one-fourth of this nation's fertile cropland. Since the 1880s, erosion has dug gullies and pits in the U.S. South, yet seemingly similar conditions have not had similar results in the southern Soviet Union and elsewhere in the world. Why? Hydrologists hope to find answers during the decade of cooperative study of the earth's waters.

The International Hydrological Decade is being guided by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization with support of many other international agencies.

Scientific communications will be maintained by the nongovernmental International Association of Scientific Hydrology, which spent two weeks in Berkeley recently setting up plans for the decade. It was the association that first proposed the 10-year study, at a meeting in Athens, Greece, in October 1961.

CONSTANT

Water yield is relatively constant while the world's population is exploding, Dr. Wilhelm K. Friedrich of Coblenz, Germany, told the Berkeley meeting. The first big job, he said, is to win support of governments for the program's projects.

Prof. David K. Todd of the University of California puts education and training of hydrologists high on the priority list. Todd heads a University Council on Hydrology, an organization formed a year ago by representatives of 29 major U.S. universities to promote advanced training in water science.

"There is a great shortage of competent men in hydrology," says Todd. "We have a missionary problem to make known the tremendous opportunity in the field of water resources."

NEEDS GREAT

Our water needs are enormous. The average man consumes about one ton of water a year in his food and drink. Plants need about 1,000 pounds of water to produce one pound of food. Industry and transportation require tremendous amounts.

To meet mushrooming needs, man must increase the availability or utility of the less than three per cent of the world's water that is fresh—and an estimated 80 per cent of that is in ice and snow, mostly in the polar ice caps. He can supplement this by desalting sea water, but the methods are costly.

The constant resource can be magnified by re-use. And man is learning how, even to the point of purifying and reclaiming sewage water.

Astronauts Training For Space Program Is Varied

WITH HIS parachute unfurled, astronaut Frank Borman, Air Force major, starts out behind a truck (unseen) which is towing him, during parachute training near Houston, Tex., where he is in training with the 15 other U. S. astronauts. The truck tows the astronaut until he reaches an altitude of about 800 feet. Then he is cut loose to parachute to the ground. This is training for an emergency during the early phase of a Gemini space flight. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

THE "ARAB" sitting on the ground is astronaut Elliot M. See Jr., undergoing desert survival training at Stead Air Force Base, Nev. Learning to use available equipment, such as parachute material made into the protective costume See wears, was part of the training given a group of the 16 astronauts on one of their training trips away from the spacecraft center at Houston, Tex. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Each weekday morning at 8:15 America's astronauts assemble in a conference room at the Manned Spacecraft Center here and compare notes on developments in the Gemini and Apollo man-in-space programs.

"Major purpose of these meetings is to permit the astronauts to report and exchange views on latest happenings in the specialty area assigned each man," explained astronaut Frank Borman, 35-year-old Air Force major.

"For instance, I might submit a memorandum on the status of the Gemini Titan 2 launch vehicle," said Borman, whose special assignment covers booster rockets and booster abort systems.

RARE MEETING

Astronaut Neil Armstrong, 33, civilian and former X-15 rocket plane pilot commented:

"It's rare when all 16 of us attend one of these morning meetings. Because of our special tasks and other commitments, some of us usually are visiting manufacturing plants or training centers around the country. Those who miss a meeting are filled in later."

Armstrong, whose specialty is to monitor development and use of trainers and flight simulators, and Borman were among the nine astronauts named last fall to join the seven Project Mercury space pilots in training for the two-man Gemini flights and the Apollo man-on-the-moon project. Additional astronauts have just been named to the pool.

In interviews, Armstrong and Borman discussed the astronaut training program which eventually may culminate in several of them landing on the moon.

Neither is discouraged by the lengthy delay in the Gemini program, where technical difficulties have postponed the first manned flight more than a year until late 1964. As in any revolutionary program of this sort, delays can be expected, they said.

MORE TIME

"The additional time means we'll be much better trained," Borman said. "You can never overtrain for something like this."

The Gemini and Apollo preparation is much more sophisticated than that for Mercury.

"We must accept the fact," explained Borman, "that the missions which will concern us in the next decade will not be designed solely for the purpose of demonstrating man's capability to function in space. As a result of the Mercury experience, the pilot in both the Gemini and Apollo missions will have a more demanding role."

The Gemini astronauts, he said, must train to rendezvous and dock their spacecraft with other orbiting satellites and to conduct complex engineering and scientific experiments. Eventually, one of the two Gemini pilots is expected to step outside his spacecraft to see what it's like more than 100 miles above the earth protected only by a space suit.

Apollo will have the even more exacting pilot tasks of navigating to the moon, steering to a lunar touchdown and conducting a launching from the moon's surface.

As the spacecraft flights become longer and extend farther from the earth, Armstrong stated, systems management becomes a critical astronaut function.

IMPORTANCE

Thus, the importance of the specialty areas, where each astronaut can become proficient in a particular field and pass his knowledge onto the others in the daily meetings.

Often, an astronaut, applying his knowledge as a test pilot, suggests an engineering change which he thinks will benefit all of them. The morning sessions kick the idea around, and if it sounds feasible, it is suggested to engineers. Several spacecraft changes have resulted.

Rep. Hebert Finds Himself Plugging For Kennedy Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the strange workings of politics and government, a part of President Kennedy's program is being shepherded through the House by a congressman who is not exactly pro-Kennedy.

"Imagine that," said the congressman, Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., with a warm appreciation of the irony of the situation "Imagine Hebert plugging for an administration bill."

Hebert, pronounced "A-Bear," is often pointed out to newcomers as a most unusual personality on Capitol Hill, which is rich in characters.

For one thing, he has one of the most luxurious offices anyone ever saw. For another, he's the type that can laugh at himself, unusual in Congress.

As chairman of the legislative subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, Hebert has the job of getting some major measures passed.

These include the nuclear fallout shelter bill, the administration measure he found it so amusing to be sponsoring. Others are the military pay bill, the service academy appointment bill and the National Guard bill.

A Southern conservative and opponent of federal legislation in the field of civil rights, Hebert is frequently at outs with the national Democratic administration.

In 1948 he supported the states rights ticket for president - an act which cost him his post on the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Had he remained in the fold, he would be chairman of the group today.

In 1960 Hebert supported the independent elector plan in Louisiana. There was some talk of purging him from the Democratic party. Nothing came of it however.

Born Oct. 12, 1091, Hebert has had two successful careers-23 years as a New Orleans newspaper reporter and editor and then 23 years as a congressman.

As city editor of the New Orleans States, Hebert broke the "Louisiana scandals" stories that routed the remnants of the old Huey Long political machine back in 1937. As a result he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1940.

In Congress, Hebert has been in the middle of many a hot news story.

A power on the Armed Services Committee, Hebert - a tough, direct questioner - has given many a member of the Pentagon high brass set a rough morning of testifying.

When he was on the Committee on Un-American Activities Hebert was in the middle of the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers investigation. Later he headed an investigation subcommittee which among other things, looked into overcharges on defense contracts.

A big, genial man, he obviously relishes life and enjoys being F. Edward Hebert.

From the high ceilings, half a dozen spotlights shine on his big desk. The room has wall-to-wall carpeting, handsome window drapes that are always drawn, big, comfortable leather chairs and divans, a large television set, a hi-fi set from which comes soft music, a bar and a grandfather clock with soft chimes.

He paid for the extra equipment.

The office has a large pantry equipped with cooker and ice box. Almost every day his staff prepares lunch for him and he eats at his desk, sometimes alone, sometimes with members of the staff and frequently with Pentagon brass, constituents or with someone who happens to drop in at lunch time. The specialties of the office are Southern food and drink.

He can read by holding a letter close to his face. He strides around the Capitol corridors as if he could see a mile. In committee he afixes a special lens to his glasses to enable him to see a witness.

REV. JAMES W. WHITE JR.

Rev. J. White Speaker At Revival Meet

Rev. James W. White, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, will begin a series of evangelistic services at the Memorial Presbyterian Church, North 4th at Mills Street, West Monroe, at 11 a.m. today. Rev. Hugh E. Bradshaw, pastor, announced that services will be at 7 p.m. daily Sunday through Thursday and at 7 every morning beginning with the Monday schedule.

The general subject for the Sunday morning worship and succeeding evening hours of worship will be "Men Who Did Follow Christ's Command." The 7 a.m. worship, Monday through Thursday, will be a 30-minute fellowship devotional. The subject of this series is "Doers of the Word."

Rev. White graduated from Southwestern College in Memphis with its 1959 class with the B. A. degree. Entering Austin Presbyterian Seminary in the Fall of 1959, he graduated with the 1962 class with the B. D. degree. He has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, since June, 1962. He is married to the former Sue Grower, and has one daughter.

Dr. Bradshaw, host pastor at Memorial, states that the public is cordially invited to all the services. Monday evening has been designated as Men-of-the-Church Night; Tuesday, Women - of - the Church; Wednesday, Community Night; and Thursday is set aside to honor Boy Scouts and their parents as special guests.

REV. MILLARD R. Perkins of Minden will serve as evangelist at a series of revival services starting today and extending through the following Sunday, it was announced by the Rev. Filer J. Seal, pastor. Sunday services will be held at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. and daily services Monday through Saturday will be held at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Every evening the choir will provide singing under the direction of church music director, Benny Owens.

Commission Will Install Rev. Faires

A Red River Presbytery commission will install the Rev. Archie B. Faires as associate minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe at 7:30 worship services this evening.

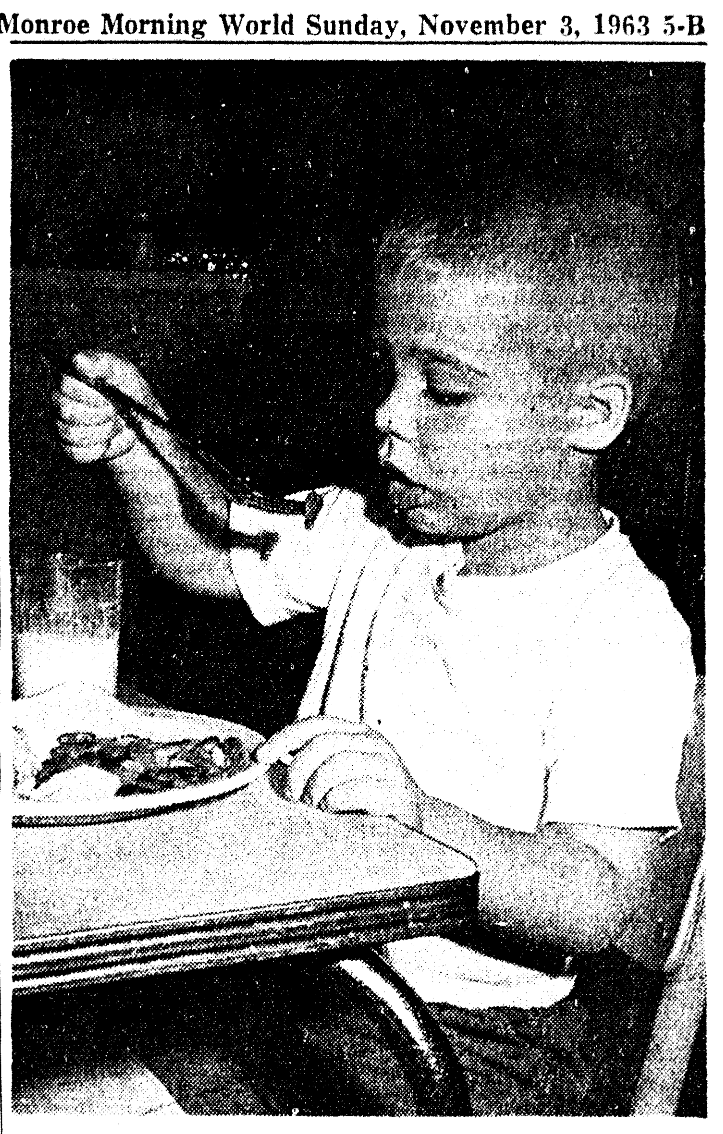
In this capacity, he also will have the responsibilities of being minister of education.

Dr. W. H. McFadden, pastor of the church will preside and propound the constitutional questions.

Rev. F. Clark Williams, pastor of Alabama Presbyterian Church, Choudrant, will preach the sermon and Rev. William W. Hatcher, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Monroe, will charge Rev. Faires.

Charles B. Griffis, elder of Rayville Presbyterian Church, Rayville, will charge the congregation. Other members of the commission are Carl R. Odom, elder, Highland Presbyterian Church, West Monroe, and Jesse R. McDonald, elder, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Monroe.

Special music will be provided by the Chancel, Chapel and Carol Choirs under the direction of Davis Bingham. Immediately following the installation worship service, a reception will be held for Rev. and Mrs. Faires in the youth room of the church.



"A FELLOW HAS TO EAT, You Know," is the slogan for the annual Fall Food Round-Up now in progress in churches throughout the state for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe. Allen, this year's "poster boy", gets the idea across pretty well. (Children's Home Photo)

GREGORY WALCOTT

Movie Star Speaker At Service Here

A star of movies and television, Gregory Walcott, will be featured speaker at a special 10:30 a.m. worship service today at the First Baptist Church of West Monroe.

Known to some of his filmland co-workers as "the Billy Graham of Hollywood," he has made many appearances around the country as a church lay speaker. He is a charter member of the Beverly Hills (Southern) Baptist Church, serves as a deacon, Sunday school teacher, member of the finance committee, and member of the pulpit committee.

ANOTHER APPEARANCE

In addition to appearing at the special service, he also will speak to junior laymen and deacons of the church.

In describing his work, Walcott said, "I am a layman. I make my living in the motion picture business, but I am essentially in the business of winning men to Jesus Christ."

He has appeared in such films as "Battle Cry," and "Mr. Roberts," and in television on "Wagon Train," "Perry Mason," and other shows.

Christ The King Rally Arranged

The annual Christ the King Rally will be held in St. Matthew's Cemetery today at 3 p.m. Father George Martinez, pastor of Our Lady of Fatima Parish, will give the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, assisted by Fathers Earl Beaulieu and Edward Deevy.

The sermon will be delivered by Father William Allen, pastor of St. Joseph Church. The St. Matthew's choir will be under the direction of Sister Mary Michael, D.C.

The rally will conclude with the blessing of the graves by Rt. Rev. Msgr. John C. Marsh, pastor of St. Matthew's Parish. The master of ceremonies for the event will be Father Warren Larroque.

Rev. E. Mercer Is Pulpit Guest

Rev. Earl D. Mercer, public relations director for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, will be pulpit guest at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. today at Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe.

Rev. Mercer, a graduate of Louisiana College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, will be preaching in the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. L. Sampson, who will be concluding a revival at Lakeshore Baptist Church in Monroe.

Home Starts Annual Fall Food Drive

The annual Fall Food Round Up in progress through December 5 in churches throughout the state is vital to the operation of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe.

The undertaking is sponsored by the churches in an effort to help provide canned goods and staple groceries to be used in feeding about 150 dependent boys and girls who live in the Home.

FOOD NEEDS

At the Home, 45 average-sized cans of a vegetable are required for one meal. Part of one breakfast may consist of 30-dozen eggs, 300 biscuits, 4 sides of sugar cured bacon and 12 tall cans of fruit juice. In one week, 150 pounds of flour and 75 pounds of corn meal are consumed.

Sixteen scheduled trips by the Home truck are being made to church members and other friends. The first trip was made October 22 and response thus far has been good,, acording to Wade B. East, Home superintendent.

In addition to foodstuffs, many miscellaneous items needed by the Home are contributed. All items are unloaded in a storeroom supervised by Walter Ray Weeks, a cottage parent. Boys in the Home assist him in sorting items which are given.

REMAINING TRIPS

Among remaining trips this Fall are the following in North Louisiana:

Monday, November 18: Start, Rayville, Delhi, Wisner, Gilbert, Chase, Winnsboro, Baskin, Mangham, Archibald and Alto.

Friday, November 29: Simsboro, Arcadia, Hurricane, Cross Roads, Athens, Homer, Haynesville, Summerfield, Bernice, Dubach, Vienna, Ruston, Choudrant and Calhoun.

Thursday, December 5: Newellton, St. Joseph, Waterproof, Manifest, Harrisonburg and Sicily Island.

Student Union Head To Help With Services

The Baptist Student Union of Northeast Louisiana State College will have charge of the evening services today at the Emmanuel Baptist Church of Monroe. The pastor, Rev. Fred Doolittle, is in Minnesota conducting a revival in the First Baptist Church of Owatonna.

Jerry Johnston, director of the Baptist Student Union work at Northeast, will have charge of the Training Union Assembly program which begins at 6 P.M. At the evening worship, he will bring the special music, and David Perkins, a medical missions volunteer, will bring the evening message.

The Baptist Student Union serves as a spiritual center for Baptist students enrolled at Northeast and also serves students of other denominations. The center serves about 2,000 students on the Northeast campus. These college young people conduct religious services each day and plan weekly programs of activities to help dormitory students to have christian fellowship while away from home.

REV. JAMES W. WHITE JR.

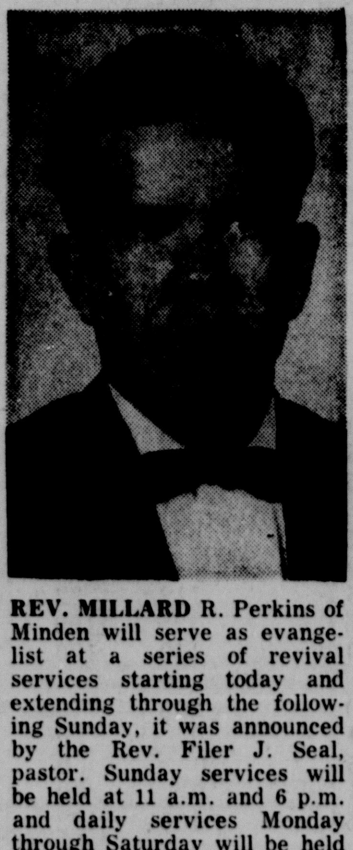
Rev. J. White Speaker At Revival Meet

Rev. James W. White, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, will begin a series of evangelistic services at the Memorial Presbyterian Church, North 4th at Mills Street, West Monroe, at 11 a.m. today. Rev. Hugh E. Bradshaw, pastor, announced that services will be at 7 p.m. daily Sunday through Thursday and at 7 every morning beginning with the Monday schedule.

The general subject for the Sunday morning worship and succeeding evening hours of worship will be "Men Who Did Follow Christ's Command." The 7 a.m. worship, Monday through Thursday, will be a 30-minute fellowship devotional. The subject of this series is "Doers of the Word."

Rev. White graduated from Southwestern College in Memphis with its 1959 class with the B. A. degree. Entering Austin Presbyterian Seminary in the Fall of 1959, he graduated with the 1962 class with the B. D. degree. He has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Haynesville, since June, 1962. He is married to the former Sue Grower, and has one daughter.

Dr. Bradshaw, host pastor at Memorial, states that the public is cordially invited to all the services. Monday evening has been designated as Men-of-the-Church Night; Tuesday, Women - of - the Church; Wednesday, Community Night; and Thursday is set aside to honor Boy Scouts and their parents as special guests.



REV. MILLARD R. Perkins of Minden will serve as evangelist at a series of revival services starting today and extending through the following Sunday, it was announced by the Rev. Filer J. Seal, pastor. Sunday services will be held at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. and daily services Monday through Saturday will be held at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Every evening the choir will provide singing under the direction of church music director, Benny Owens.

Commission Will Install Rev. Faires

A Red River Presbytery commission will install the Rev. Archie B. Faires as associate minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe at 7:30 worship services this evening.

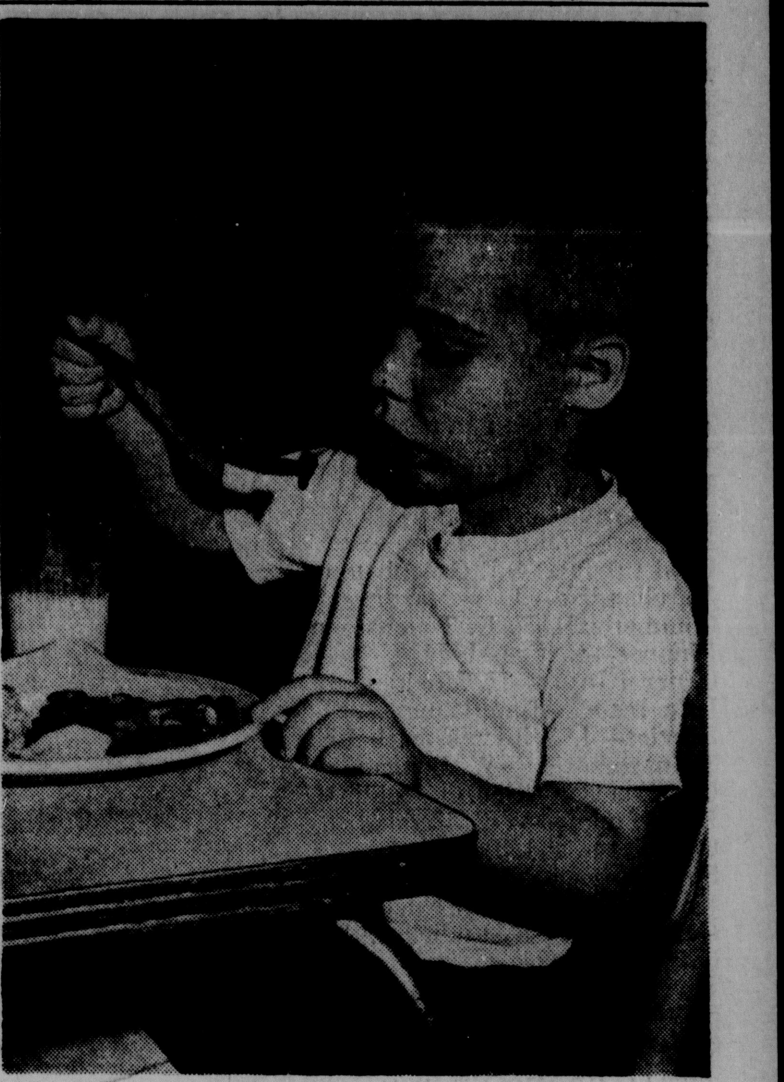
In this capacity, he also will have the responsibilities of being minister of education.

Dr. W. H. McFadden, pastor of the church will preside and propound the constitutional questions.

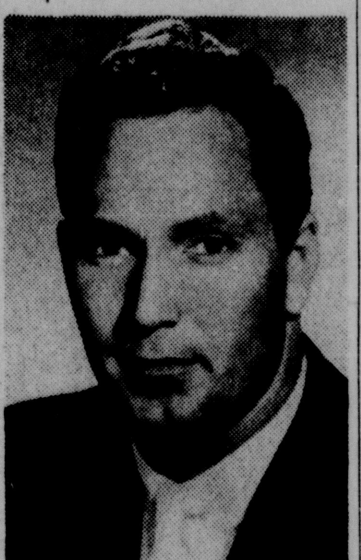
Rev. F. Clark Williams, pastor of Alabama Presbyterian Church, Choudrant, will preach the sermon and Rev. William W. Hatcher, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Monroe, will charge Rev. Faires.

Charles B. Griffis, elder of Rayville Presbyterian Church, Rayville, will charge the congregation. Other members of the commission are Carl R. Odom, elder, Highland Presbyterian Church, West Monroe, and Jesse R. McDonald, elder, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Monroe.

Special music will be provided by the Chancel, Chapel and Carol Choirs under the direction of Davis Bingham. Immediately following the installation worship service, a reception will be held for Rev. and Mrs. Faires in the youth room of the church.



"A FELLOW HAS TO EAT, You Know," is the slogan for the annual Fall Food Round-Up now in progress in churches throughout the state for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe. Allen, this year's "poster boy", gets the idea across pretty well. (Children's Home Photo)



GREGORY WALCOTT

Movie Star Speaker At Service Here

A star of movies and television, Gregory Walcott, will be featured speaker at a special 10:30 a.m. worship service today at the First Baptist Church of West Monroe.

Known to some of his filmland co-workers as "the Billy Graham of Hollywood," he has made many appearances around the country as a church lay speaker. He is a charter member of the Beverly Hills (Southern) Baptist Church, serves as a deacon, Sunday school teacher, member of the finance committee, and member of the pulpit committee.

ANOTHER APPEARANCE

In addition to appearing at the special service, he also will speak to junior laymen and deacons of the church.

In describing his work, Walcott said, "I am a layman. I make my living in the motion picture business, but I am essentially in the business of winning men to Jesus Christ."

He has appeared in such films as "Battle Cry," and "Mr. Roberts," and in television on "Wagon Train," "Perry Mason," and other shows.

Christ The King Rally Arranged

The annual Christ the King Rally will be held in St. Matthew's Cemetery today at 3 p.m. Father George Martinez, pastor of Our Lady of Fatima Parish, will give the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, assisted by Fathers Earl Beaulieu and Edward Deevy.

The sermon will be delivered by Father William Allen, pastor of St. Joseph Church. The St. Matthew's choir will be under the direction of Sister Mary Michael, D.C.

The rally will conclude with the blessing of the graves by Rt. Rev. Msgr. John C. Marsh, pastor of St. Matthew's Parish. The master of ceremonies for the event will be Father Warren Larroque.

Rev. E. Mercer Is Pulpit Guest

Rev. Earl D. Mercer, public relations director for the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, will be pulpit guest at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. today at Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe.

Rev. Mercer, a graduate of Louisiana College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, will be preaching in the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. L. Sampson, who will be concluding a revival at Lakeshore Baptist Church in Monroe.

Home Starts Annual Fall Food Drive

The annual Fall Food Round Up in progress through December 5 in churches throughout the state is vital to the operation of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe.

The undertaking is sponsored by the churches in an effort to help provide canned goods and staple groceries to be used in feeding about 150 dependent boys and girls who live in the Home.

FOOD NEEDS

At the Home, 45 average-sized cans of a vegetable are required for one meal. Part of one breakfast may consist of 30-dozen eggs, 300 biscuits, 4 sides of sugar cured bacon and 12 tall cans of fruit juice. In one week, 150 pounds of flour and 75 pounds of corn meal are consumed.

Sixteen scheduled trips by the Home truck are being made to church members and other friends. The first trip was made October 22 and response thus far has been good,, acording to Wade B. East, Home superintendent.

In addition to foodstuffs, many miscellaneous items needed by the Home are contributed. All items are unloaded in a storeroom supervised by Walter Ray Weeks, a cottage parent. Boys in the Home assist him in sorting items which are given.

REMAINING TRIPS

Among remaining trips this Fall are the following in North Louisiana:

Monday, November 18: Start, Rayville, Delhi, Wisner, Gilbert, Chase, Winnsboro, Baskin, Mangham, Archibald and Alto.

Friday, November 29: Simsboro, Arcadia, Hurricane, Cross Roads, Athens, Homer, Haynesville, Summerfield, Bernice, Dubach, Vienna, Ruston, Choudrant and Calhoun.

Thursday, December 5: Newellton, St. Joseph, Waterproof, Manifest, Harrisonburg and Sicily Island.

Student Union Head To Help With Services

The Baptist Student Union of Northeast Louisiana State College will have charge of the evening services today at the Emmanuel Baptist Church of Monroe. The pastor, Rev. Fred Doolittle, is in Minnesota conducting a revival in the First Baptist Church of Owatonna.

Jerry Johnston, director of the Baptist Student Union work at Northeast, will have charge of the Training Union Assembly program which begins at 6 P.M. At the evening worship, he will bring the special music, and David Perkins, a medical missions volunteer, will bring the evening message.

The Baptist Student Union serves as a spiritual center for Baptist students enrolled at Northeast and also serves students of other denominations. The center serves about 2,000 students on the Northeast campus. These college young people conduct religious services each day and plan weekly programs of activities to help dormitory students to have christian fellowship while away from home.

Motor Scooting Pair Bump-Bump 7,000 Miles

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Steve Brown plunked his dog on a motor scooter and took him for a ride—7,000 miles of bumpity-bumping through Mexico, then to St. Petersburg, Fla.

Brown and Nikki, a French poodle, have the travel bug. And if 10,000 miles of putting along in a motor scooter isn't enough, Brown, 43, has more plans. He hopes to get a job in St. Petersburg and build a tri-maran, a three-hulled sailboat, and cruise to the Virgin Islands.

Brown, a jack-of-many trades, planned the scooter trip for three years. The past eight months he's been figuring how to squeeze everything he and Nikki need into the special homemade trailer he's tugging behind the scooter.

Brown, a Navy photographer in World War II, will see the countryside, do some skindiving, paint, fish and say hello to folks along the way.

"I know about two dozen words of Spanish," he says, "but I have a tremendous vocabulary in sign language."

Brown and Nikki headed southwest from Reno on Thursday for Phoenix, Ariz., and the west coast of Mexico. They plan to cross Mexico at Tehuantepec, southwest of Mexico City, putt-putt up the east coast and then across the Gulf coast to the United States to Florida.

Ten Arrested In Lafayette With Marijuana

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP)—Ten persons were arrested and a large amount of marijuana and central nervous system drugs were seized Saturday in what officers described as the biggest narcotics raid in the state recently.

The series of raids began late Friday and ended Saturday morning. The 10 prisoners were charged with one or both charges of possession of marijuana and central nervous system drugs.

State, parish and city officers said the residence of 26-year-old Leon Isiadus and 28-year-old Julia Myers at Duson, Lafayette Parish, also yielded a collection of loaded weapons, and the couple were charged with possession of concealed weapons. Officers described the place as "beatnik joint with bongo drums, all kinds of weapons, and pipes."

Motor Scooting Pair Bump-Bump 7,000 Miles

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Steve Brown plunked his dog on a motor scooter and took him for a ride—7,000 miles of bumpity-bumping through Mexico, then to St. Petersburg, Fla.

Brown and Nikki, a French poodle, have the travel bug. And if 10,000 miles of putting along in a motor scooter isn't enough, Brown, 43, has more plans. He hopes to get a job in St. Petersburg and build a tri-maran, a three-hulled sailboat, and cruise to the Virgin Islands.

Brown, a jack-of-many trades, planned the scooter trip for three years. The past eight months he's been figuring how to squeeze everything he and Nikki need into the special homemade trailer he's tugging behind the scooter.

Brown, a Navy photographer in World War II, will see the countryside, do some skindiving, paint, fish and say hello to folks along the way.

"I know about two dozen words of Spanish," he says, "but I have a tremendous vocabulary in sign language."

Brown and Nikki headed southwest from Reno on Thursday for Phoenix, Ariz., and the west coast of Mexico. They plan to cross Mexico at Tehuantepec, southwest of Mexico City, putt-putt up the east coast and then across the Gulf coast to the United States to Florida.

Ten Arrested In Lafayette With Marijuana

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP)—Ten persons were arrested and a large amount of marijuana and central nervous system drugs were seized Saturday in what officers described as the biggest narcotics raid in the state recently.

The series of raids began late Friday and ended Saturday morning. The 10 prisoners were charged with one or both charges of possession of marijuana and central nervous system drugs.

State, parish and city officers said the residence of 26-year-old Leon Isiadus and 28-year-old Julia Myers at Duson, Lafayette Parish, also yielded a collection of loaded weapons, and the couple were charged with possession of concealed weapons. Officers described the place as "beatnik joint with bongo drums, all kinds of weapons, and pipes."

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Fall Publishing Season Is Now On

BY FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

The fall publishing season is in full swing and the Ouachita Parish Public Library is adding numbers of new books each week to it's book collection. This week is especially strong in the field of fiction and there are books to interest every type of reader. An interesting historical novel with a setting at the court of Louis IXV is "The Marquis" by Joan Sanders. It is an intriguing and well - written story and will interest many readers. "Tears Are For the Living" is a quiet family story written by Margaret Bannister. The setting is a small Virginia town and the book will be popular with women. "The White Cockade" by Vincent O'Brien has it's setting in Canada in the period when France and England were struggling for the possession of the Continent. It is an interesting book with a sound view of history. "The Blue Sapphire" by D. E. Stevenson is a good romance, which will appeal to her loyal readers. "Indo" by Emily Hahn has its locale in the Netherlands East Indies. The setting is interesting and the story provides some exciting moments. "A Few Painted Fethers" by Stephen Longstreet is an exceptionally good novel about the American Revolution. The setting is in the Southern colonies and the leading character is an Indian, Peter Blue Feather, who has been educated at Oxford and is now back with his tribe. This is an unusual book and many readers will enjoy it. "Dragon In Paradise" by John McNally has it's setting in Thailand and is a romance with a counterpoint of military activity. It is a book which will appeal to both men and women. "The Backward Road" by Edevain Park is a story about a family on an Irish estate just before World War II. It gives a clear picture of a way of life which is now gone and is a good story as well.

A superior novel dealing with the early period of our country and with the setting in Pittsburgh is "The King's Orchard" by Agnes Sligh Turnbull. Reading this book will give one much information about the early history of Pittsburgh and there is also a good live story included. "Old Red and Other Stories" is an excellent collection of short stories by Caroline Gordon. "Shadow of A Hawk" is a good western story written by Michael Bonner. "Delilah's Mountain" by Gloria Jahoda is another very fine book with a pioneer background. A mystery story by Mignon Eberhart is always welcome. Her latest one is "Run Scared" and will be in great demand. Another interesting mystery story is "The 12th Of Never" written by Douglas Heyes and for Science fiction addicts, there is a thrilling book called "All The Colors of Darkness" written by Lloyd F. Biggle.

Factual books also offer a variety of interesting information. "The Cultivated Mind" by Edward Hodnett is a very well - written and provocative title. "What I Believe" is the title of Francois Mauriac's statement of his Christian beliefs. "Too Grave A Risk" is a discussion of the Connally Amendment issue written by Denison Kitchel. Everyone interested in the field of education should read "The Miseducation of American Teachers" written by James D. Koerner. A perfectly lovely book is "The Royal Birds" by Lillian Grace Paca and is a study of the swan. "Escape; from the Air and From the Sea" is a very exciting account of thrilling escapes written by Eloise Engle. "The Best American Short Stories of 1963" edited by Martha Foley is a welcome addition to the literature collection.

Main Street, Italy" by Irving R. Levine is a very well done discussion of life in Italy today and the social conditions of the country. "Peachtree Street, U.S.A." by Celestine Sibley is an affectionate portrait of Atlanta and will be enjoyed by all who know this city. "The Generals Wear Cork Hats" by Ben Lucian Burman is another personal account of the African phase of World War II and contains many interesting reminiscences.

Another phase of World War II is discussed in "They Fought Alone" by John Keats. This author discusses the underground movement in the Phillipines and the people who took part in it. "Mandate for Change" by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower is an account of his first time in office and of the problems which confronted him from the very beginning. It is a well written and fact filled volume and makes a real contribution to the history of our times.

Running the Scales

". . . Heard they crowded the floor." You heard correctly. That line from the old pop tune that said something about "missing a Saturday dance" hit the nail on the head for Guy Lombardo's appearance at La. Tech last Tuesday.

With the Lombardos on the bandstand in the Memorial Gym, there was a big turnout of old and younger Lombardo fans crowding both the dance floor and the seating space.

Following an hour - long concert, a smoothly flowing sequence of the band's choice numbers over a 30-odd year period, the gym floor turned into a sea of twisters, cha-cha-cha'ers, or waltzers — join in as you will.

The point is this: the Lombardo band, which began its career in 1925 or thereabouts in Cleveland, is still very much a going concern on the American musical scene.

Many of the younger Techsters on the dance floor last week were just about being born when the Royal Canadians used to win the annual "King of Corn" award from Downbeat Magazine, a somewhat dubious honor which seemed to contrast with the "King of Jive" nomination of the day. They didn't mind a bit in those days, and mention of the title today brings a nostalgic chuckle from the four Lombardo brothers, Guy, Victor, Lebert and Carmen.

As for quality, the band sounds pretty much as it did back in radio days. The product is melodic, appealing and danceable. The vibrato reeds still occupy the front row, and therea re brasses in pairs with the big recording bass right behind. Twin pianos, drums and an all - purpose guitar, baritone hornist and singer, Bill Flannigan, round out the instrumentalists. Kenny Gardner handles the bulk of the vocals and a young couple, Jack and Sally Jenkins, handle some musical comedy excerpts. Cliff Grass added some minstrel tunes.

UP TO DATE

Actually, the band has made subtle changes over the years to keep up with the times. For example, the Lambardo treatment of the recent Academy Award winner, "Moon River," featuring Flannigan on a keyed harmonica, is a far richer piece of musical substance than the older aquatic favorites, "Sailboat in the moonlight," and "Harbor Lights," though the Lombardo style remains unmistakable.

Kenny Gardner has come up with some fine understatement in his recitation of "Dangerous Dan McGrew," which is about as close to opera as the Royal Canadians will ever go. Jack Jenkins' vocal on "Goodnight My Someone," from "The Music Man" brings out the best in his baritone, and there's real life in his and Sally's treatment of "76 Trombones" from the same score.

Back in the war years, some of used to supply some rather unpoetic lines to the Lombardo version of "Love, Love, Love," a sort of bumpity - bump rhumba of the times. So when Carmen led the Lombardo Trio in "Boo-Hoo" the other night, a ditty of that same period, the writer felt old times had come back.

During intermission, the trombone player lined me up with one of the brothers, Victor, who in turn, helped me seek out Guy, Lebert and Carmen. I asked Carmen if he was the composer of the once-famous "Lombardo Ending," a somewhat ragged tag the band used to apply at the conclusion of many of its numbers.

"Yes," spoke up Guy, who was greeting a group of fans, "he's the one who did it."

"We used that to end all of our fast numbers, once," Carmen said.

"Things change. You might not notice it, but we've had to change even in keeping our style the way people want it to sound. Chords that used to sound harsh to people's ears are now considered nothing unusual. Ever so often, we take our standard numbers and rewrite the arrangements in order to keep then from sounding outdated. Not long ago, we tried our original version of "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree." All the fellows lauhged at the old phrasing and chords."

Carmen, who used to sing a breathless tenor with the band both as a soloist and along with the Lombardo Trio, also wrote a number of songs: "Sailboat in the Moonlight," "Boo - Hoo," and others. He sticks pretty much to playing in the reed section of the band now except for special requests for "old timers."

As for the passing from the scene of the big bands of former days who used to kid mercilessly, Carmen has nothing but fond words. He seems genuinely concerned about the lack of younger bands and places for them to enter the field.

"We used to have hotels and radio stations all over the country where we could get started," he said. "Now, he noted, "who's going to book a band for a motel?"

Looking for his own answer, Carmen stopped pretty Sally Jenkins and began asking her questions about her act: where she was born and how her sister in the Icecapades learned to ice skate in Tampa, Florida — questions a less pensive reporter should have been ready with.

But this scale runner was caught somewhere in between "Moon River," and "Star Dust," wondering how this group of musical gentlemen could stay so alert and entertaining after close to 40 years in the dance band business. Maybe they've got the blueprint for survival.

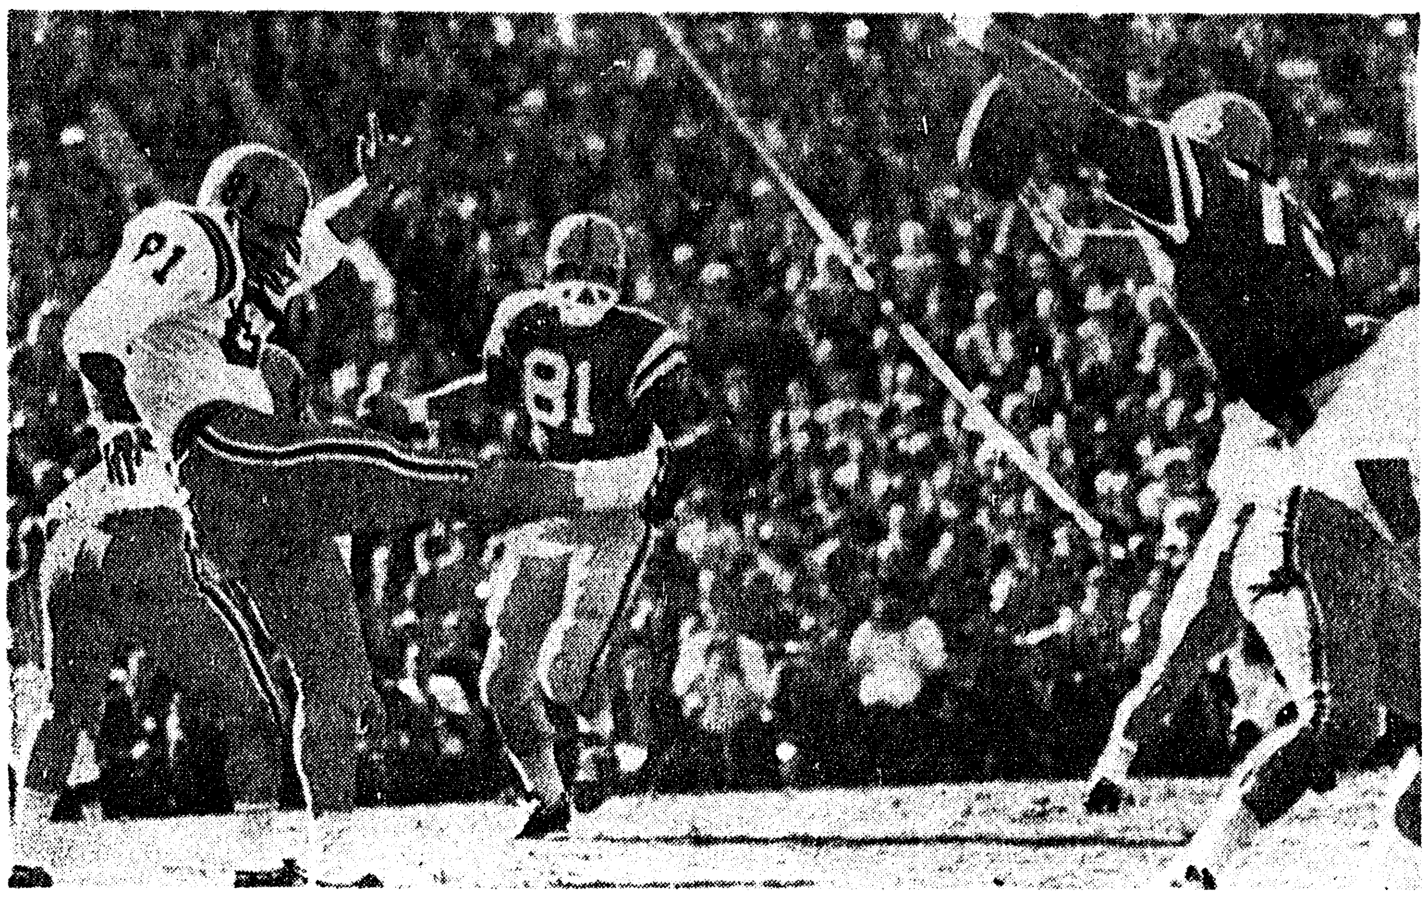
Ole Miss Rebels Crush Tigers, 37-3



OLE MISS tackle Whaley Hall (73) leaps through LSU Tiger linemen to block Danny Neumann's punt early in the opening minutes of the game today at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge. Ole Miss recovered and moments later pushed across the first of five touchdowns in handing the Tigers a 37-3 defeat. (AP Wirephoto)

Surprising Setback Worst Since 1956

By RICK BRYAN
World Sports Editor

TIGER STADIUM, Baton Rouge — Louisiana State's sophomore bubble burst here Saturday afternoon. Mississippi's incredible Rebels, doing nothing wrong and capitalizing on virtually all of their many opportunities, rolled to a crushing 37-3 victory over the young Tigers while 68,000 spectators looked on in disbelief.

It was the worst defeat suffered by an LSU team since 1956 when the same Ole Miss team dumped the Tigers, 40-17.

The Rebels, looking like the most perfect football machine imaginable moved on the ground with ease behind the rollouts of quarterbacks Perry Lee Dunn and Jim Weatherly, plus the slicing runs of fullback Fred Roberts. Ole Miss went to the air when it was necessary with equally effective results.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Statistics of the Mississippi-Louisiana State football game:

	MISS	LSU
First downs	19	11
Rushing yardage	233	78
Passing yardage	110	66
Passes	8-12	5-11
Passes Intercepted by	2	0
Punts	4-40.5	4-27.5
Fumbles lost	1	4
Yards penalized	58	8

At the same time Coach Johnny Vaught's red shirted stalwarts threw up a hardnosed defensive line which kept the Tigers bottled up through most of the crystal clear autumn afternoon. It was apparent why they are number 1 in the nation on rushing defense.

Perhaps nothing so clearly empahsized the Rebels superiority as what happened in the third quarter after LSU halfback Joe Labruzzo fielded a punt on his own 18, slipped away from one tackler then tore 81 yards down the sideline before being hauled down from behind by guard Stan Hindman on the one with a first down and goal to go at the one. LSU tried four running plays and wound up with Rebels taking over at the five. Roberts' who scored three touchdowns in a brilliant day paced the Rebels' ground game with 69 yards on 13 carries. Dunn, who has been ineffective to the outside in the Rebels' other games gained 47 yards on 11 carries, most of them rollouts behind crushing downfield blocking.

Weatherly, the second of five Ole Miss quarterbacks used, completed seven of seven passes for 105 yards.

Quarterback Billy Ezell was LSU's best rusher with 35 yards on 13 tries. He was followed by halfback Danny LeBlanc who gained 19 on eight carries.

Sophomore quarterback Ed Greer, who made his first varsity appearance when Ezell was hurt late in the game, gave the Tigers a few aerial fireworks, completing four of eight passes for 47 yards. He had two intercepted, however, by the Rebels' alert defense.

Labruzzo returned the opening kickoff to the Tiger 24, two running plays gained nothing and on third down Danny Neumann tried a quick kick.

Dunn carried to the two on a pair of rollouts and Roberts blasted up the middle for the score with 11:56 remianing in the first period. It was the preface of what was to come. After an exchange of punts, the Bengals took over on their own 11 and rolled all the way down to the Ole Miss 24 where Doug Moreau boomed a 41-yard field goal which cut the Rebels' lead to 7-3 with 1:09 left in the quarter.

Ezell was the key figure in the Tigers drive, keeping for 12 on a crucial third down play at the Bengal 34 and exploding up the right side behind some good blocking for 38-yards to the Rebel 24 on another third down situation.

Seemingly unconcerned, the Rebels took the following kickoff and marched 72 yards on 13 plays and scored on Roberts three yard blast with 9:57 before the half.

Irwin added the point and it was 14-3, Ole Miss. Dunn rolled 20 yards to the Tiger 43, LSU's Ruffin Rodrigue, who had a fine day defensively, spilled halfback Mike Dennis for a loss on the draw play.

White Graves' diving effort thwarted a Dunn pass to Brown around the five but Weatherly hit end Allen Brown on a 12-yarder to the five and two plays later Roberts churned over.

A few minutes later Labruzzo fumbled at the LSU 32 and guard Rodney Mattina recovered for the Rebels. It took Ole Miss just three plays to add another score.

Weatherly rolled from the 17 to the 23, then hit Irwin in the end zone for the score. Rodrigue blasted in to block Irwin's extra point try and it was 30-3 with 5:46 remaining in the half.

LSU's George Haynes ran the kickoff out of the end zone to the four. The Tigers kicked from the 10 and Dunn returned it from the Tiger 49 to the 33.

In 10 plays the Bengals sailed down to the five where Irwin kicked a 22-yard field goal with 15 seconds left before the half.

Labruzzo got his tremendous punt return early in the third quarter, but the Tigers inability to score from there may have killed any chances they had of getting back in the game.

Midway through the period, Haynes fumbled at midfield and Rebel center Robert Upchurch recovered to set off another Ole Miss drive.

Weatherly passed to Irwin for eight and a first down at the LSU 30 then fullback Frank Kinard roared up the middle for 18 yards. Four plays gained to the one and Roberts cracked over left guard for his third touchdown of the day. Irwin's kick with 2:08 to go in the third quarter made it 30-3.

Greer came on the field in the fourth period and set up the Rebels last touchdown by fumbling on the first play. Guard Rollo Moses recovered for Ole Miss at the Tiger 48 and the Rebs scored in five plays.

Weatherly, almost reaped for a loss trying to pass on the second play from scrimmage, maneuvered around until he spotted Kinard all alone downfield and hit him with a pass good for 28 yards to the Tiger 35.

Two plays later, Weatherly shot one straight up the middle to halfback Dave Wells at the LSU three. This one was also good for 28-yards. Weatherly rolled to his right on the next play and went into the end zone untouched. Irwin's upped it to 37-3 with 8:39 to go in the game.

Twice Greer got the Tigers started with his passes late in the game, but both times the Rebels picked off his aerials after a number of completions. Center Robert Harrison nabbed one and reserve quarterback Jimmy Heidell grabbed the other.

Vaught's pleasure was apparent when it was over. "We played the perfect game," he said. "This was the finest Ole Miss team effort in many a day and certainly the finest of the year. "The blocked punt in the early stages of the game was obviously to our advantage and we took command of the game at that time. I think that the team is maturing and coming into shape real well."

LSU Coach Charley McClendon said, "It was obvious by the score that the better team won today. Their line outcharged our line. We are a bruised and battered football team and it finally caught up with us."

Fired Up Indians Roar To Victory Over Rebs

ARLINGTON, Tex. — Ignited by Alton Thomas' 69-yard touchdown gallop with a punt in the first quarter, Northeast State rolled to a 21-12 victory over Arlington State here Saturday night.

With Northeast trailing, 6-0, late in the first stanza, Thomas fielded an Arlington boot on his 31 and dashed all the way untouched to tie the game. Ken Newton went 58 yards from scrimmage in the fourth to clinch the victory.

After Willie Ragan's kick was wide on the PAT attempt after Thomas' TD, the Indians came back with a touchdown early in the second quarter and led the rest of the way.

The victory spoiled the Arlington homecoming, evened the series between the two teams at 2-2, pushed the Rebels' record to 1-6 and boosted the Tribe's sagging morale considerably. Northeast is now 2-5 for the season with three games left, one of them a Gulf States Conference date with Southwestern in Monroe Saturday night.

In the second half, Arlington narrowed Northeast's lead to 13-12 but early in the fourth Newton put the game on ice with a beautiful 58-yard touchdown spring. The brilliant Delhi senior, hobbled by injuries most of the year, had a great night. He led all rushers with 155 yards and almost went all the way on two other occasions, once reeling off a 32-yard run and later a 39-yard dash.

Quarterback Mike Cooper scored the second Indian touchdown with a one-yard sneak in the second. Ragan converted after that TD and a Cooper pass was incomplete on a two-point try after Newton's gallop.

Northeast had two chances with the ball and Arlington one before the Rebels moved for the game's first touchdown. The drive began on the Arlington 39 after Steve Ragan's second punt of the night.

Two passes from quarterback Ed Noble to halfback Ken Vaughn, one for 37 yards and another for 15, stoked the drive, the 15-yarder putting the ball on the five. Al Smith rammed to the two, then fullback Ken Bowman smacked over and the Rebs had a 6-0 lead with 5:44 left in the first period.

After an offside penalty against the Indians, Arlington decided to run over the PAT but Noble was pulled down short.

Northeast took the resulting kickoff and failed to move. Regan punted and four plays later Odie Dollins booted for Arlington from his 33.

Thomas took the punt in the middle of the field at the 31, moved straight ahead through a gaping hole, cut slightly to his right, then back up the center and the ball game was tied. He was not touched.

Shortly thereafter, before the period ended, the Indians were on their way to touchdown no. 2. Dollins punted out of bounds on the Arlington 49. Ronnie Graham gained seven, then five, then seven again as the period ended.

In the second quarter, the Tribe punched as far as the 19 before two runs gained nothing. On fourth and three, Cooper hit Wilson at the 10. R. F. wrestled the ball away from a Rebel defender and the Indians had a first and goal at the 10.

Cooper got six on a keeper, Graham managed two, Wilson went wide for one and the Indians faced fourth down again. Cooper was again equal to the challenge, sneaking over with 10:22 left in the half.

This time Ragan's kick was true and Northeast led, 13-6.

Northeast missed a golden opportunity to stretch its lead a few moments later. Don King chased Noble down for a big loss on the Rebel 25 and Jim Lowe recovered a resulting fumble for the tribe.

Thomas got two, Ragan six and six again for a first. Newton went wide to the eight but Ragan got only one and then zero. On fourth and one at the two, Bowman snaked through to throw Thomas for a four-yard loss and Arlington took over.

Arlington threatened just before the half ended, going to the Indians 32, but Sherrel Smith intercepted a Doug Wilson pass in the end zone to end that.

After Arlington took the second half kickoff and picked up one first down before stalling, the Indians took over after the punt on their 24. Newton, on the next play, swept wide, got a block from Ragan, and went 32 yards to the Arlington 44.

Ragan picked up eight but Shillcutt fumbled and Bowman recovered for the Rebs at the 37.

Midway of the third, Arlington moved 78 yards for its second TD. A third-string quarterback, Roger Fanning, sparked the drive with his left-handed passes. He hit on five tosses in the drive, the final one a six-yarder for the score to Phil Ford. Al Smith's pass for the PAT was incomplete and Northeast still led, 13-12.

Late in the third, Regan punted to the 10 and Jimmy Campbell returned to the 14. The Rebs picked up only four in three tries and Dollins went back to punt in the fourth period.

Kirkendall burst through and blocked the boot. The ball bouncd out of the end zone just ahead of Kirk and Northeast's lead was increased by two, 15-12. Only 48 seconds had elapsed in the quarter.

Dollins punted from the 20 out of bounds on the Indian 38. Ragan gained four, then Newton went wide right, cut back diagonally acorss the field and outraced the secondary for a touchdown. Cooper's pass to Regan bounced out of the end's hand and Northeast's lead was 21-12 with 13:02 left.

With Fanning again moving the club, the Rebs traveled to the Indians 45 before punting. Later they went to the Tribe 35 before Thomas intercepted a pass on the six.

On the first play after the interception, Newton scooted 39 yards. He slowed down waiting for a block and was caught from behind.

However, three more plays gained only seven and Regan punted. With Fanning giving his left arm another workout, the Rebels moved 44 yards to the Tribe 26 before the Indians took over on downs. Graham ran once before Cooper ate up the rest of the time with sneaks.

Newton's total of 155 yards was gained on only 11 carries. His total was the highest by an Indian runner this season by far. He had gained only 96 yards in the six previous games and his longest run had been only 12 yards.

Ragan followed with 43 yards and Graham had 28. Thomas, except for his punt return, was fairly ineffective offensively, netting only a yard in seven trips.

Arlington won the statistical battle, collecting 14 first downs, 131 yards rushing and 181 passing for a 312 total. The Northeast figures were nine firsts 246 on the ground and 40 passing for 286.

The Indian defense did a good job. Redskins intercepted three passes, their first steals since the McMurry game, and several linesmen played outstanding games.

Ends Jim Love, Sherrel Smith and Regan were outstanding as was tackle Alden Fontenot, another bogeyman for passers.

WIN 20-7, AT LAST

Greenies Snap Football Drouth

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UPI) — Tulane snapped the longest current losing streak in major college football at 17 games Saturday with an impressive 20-7 victory over fumble-hampered South Carolina.

Tulane quarterback Al Burguieres, whose passing and running sparked his team to its best performance of the season, engineered the Green Wave's 20 points-more than it has scored since 1962.

South Carolina went into the game as the favorite but slippery fingers in the backfield brought on two Tulane touchdowns and let the Southeastern Conference team control the football much of the afternoon.

It was a big moral victory for Coach Tommy O'Boyle, whose team had scored only 13 points all year. It was his first win since going to the university in New Orleans last season.

Tulane's first touchdown midway in the opening quarter came 11 plays after end Larry Nicholas picked up a fumble by halfback Larry Gill on the South Carolina 40. Burgeieres, an 180-pounder, ran 31 yards on the ground before fullback George Smith bucked into the end zone from a yard out. Don Bright's extra point kick missed.

Tulane scored again late in the quarter when right half Ron Chapoton scampered almost untouched down the sidelines 23 yards for the touchdown after guard Dave Landry picked up a South Carolina fumble one play earlier. Chapoton had been out two weeks with injuries.

This time, Bright's kick was true.

South Carolina's only touchdown came in the second quarter when quarterback Dan Reeves passed to end J. R. Wilburn at the 2. Wilburn dragged a tackler into the end zone and quarterback Jack McCathern booted the extra point.

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss. (AP) — James Jenson passed for two touchdowns and ran for two more to lead Mississippi Vocational College to a 40-0 victory over Rust Saturday.

Jenson tossed scoring aerials of 14 yards to Roosevelt Walton and 1 yard to Rodney Beaufort. He tallied on runs of 2 and 3 yards.

Surprising Setback Worst Since 1956

TIGER STADIUM, Baton Rouge — Louisiana State's sophomore bubble burst here Saturday afternoon. Mississippi's incredible Rebels, doing nothing wrong and capitalizing on virtually all of their many opportunities, rolled to a crushing 37-3 victory over the young Tigers while 68,000 spectators looked on in disbelief.

It was the worst defeat suffered by an LSU team since 1956 when the same Ole Miss team dumped the Tigers, 40-17.

The Rebels, looking like the most perfect football machine imaginable moved on the ground with ease behind the rollouts of quarterbacks Perry Lee Dunn and Jim Weatherly, plus the slicing runs of fullback Fred Roberts. Ole Miss went to the air when it was necessary with equally effective results.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Statistics of the Mississippi-Louisiana State football game:

	MISS	LSU
First downs	19	11
Rushing yardage	233	78
Passing yardage	110	66
Passes	8-12	5-11
Passes intercepted by	2	0
Punts	4-40.5	4-27.5
Fumbles lost	1	4
Yards penalized	58	8

At the same time Coach Johnny Vaught's red shirted stalwarts threw up a hardnosed defensive line which kept the Tigers bottled up through most of the crystal clear autumn afternoon. It was apparent why they are number 1 in the nation on rushing defense.

Perhaps nothing so clearly empahsized the Rebels superiority as what happened in the third quarter after LSU halfback Joe Labruzzo fielded a punt on his own 18, slipped away from one tackler then tore 81 yards down the sideline before being hauled down from behind by guard Stan Hindman on the one with a first down and goal to go at the one. LSU tried four running plays and wound up with Rebels taking over at the five. Roberts' who scored three touchdowns in a brilliant day paced the Rebels' ground game with 69 yards on 13 carries. Dunn, who has been ineffective to the outside in the Rebels' other games gained 47 yards on 11 carries, most of them rollouts behind crushing downfield blocking.

Weatherly, the second of five Ole Miss quarterbacks used, completed seven of seven passes for 105 yards.

Quarterback Billy Ezell was LSU's best rusher with 35 yards on 13 tries. He was followed by halfback Danny LeBlanc who gained 19 on eight carries.

Sophomore quarterback Ed Greer, who made his first varsity appearance when Ezell was hurt late in the game, gave the Tigers a few aerial fireworks, completing four of eight passes for 47 yards. He had two intercepted, however, by the Rebels' alert defense.

Labruzzo returned the opening kickoff to the Tiger 24, two running plays gained nothing and on third down Danny Neumann tried a quick kick.

Dunn carried to the two on a pair of rollouts and Roberts blasted up the middle for the score with 11:56 remianing in the first period. It was the preface of what was to come. After an exchange of punts, the Bengals took over on their own 11 and rolled all the way down to the Ole Miss 24 where Doug Moreau boomed a 41-yard field goal which cut the Rebels' lead to 7-3 with 1:09 left in the quarter.

Ezell was the key figure in the Tigers drive, keeping for 12 on a crucial third down play at the Bengal 34 and exploding up the right side behind some good blocking for 38-yards to the Rebel 24 on another third down situation.

Seemingly unconcerned, the Rebels took the following kickoff and marched 72 yards on 13 plays and scored on Roberts three yard blast with 9:57 before the half.

Irwin added the point and it was 14-3, Ole Miss. Dunn rolled 20 yards to the Tiger 43. LSU's Ruffin Rodrigue, who had a fine day defensively, spilled halfback Mike Dennis for a loss on the draw play.

White Graves' diving effort thwarted a Dunn pass to Brown around the five but Weatherly hit end Allen Brown on a 12-yarder to the five and two plays later Roberts churned over.

A few minutes later Labruzzo fumbled at the LSU 32 and guard Rodney Mattina recovered for the Rebels. It took Ole Miss just three plays to add another score.

Weatherly rolled from the 17 to the 23, then hit Irwin in the end zone for the score. Rodrigue blasted in to block Irwin's extra point try and it was 30-3 with 5:46 remaining in the half.

LSU's George Haynes ran the kickoff out of the end zone to the four. The Tigers kicked from the 10 and Dunn returned it from the Tiger 49 to the 33.

In 10 plays the Bengals sailed down to the five where Irwin kicked a 22-yard field goal with 15 seconds left before the half.

Labruzzo got his tremendous punt return early in the third quarter, but the Tigers inability to score from there may have killed any chances they had of getting back in the game.

Midway through the period, Haynes fumbled at midfield and Rebel center Robert Upchurch recovered to set off another Ole Miss drive.

Weatherly passed to Irwin for eight and a first down at the LSU 30 then fullback Frank Kinard roared up the middle for 18 yards. Four plays gained to the one and Roberts cracked over left guard for his third touchdown of the day. Irwin's kick with 2:08 to go in the third quarter made it 30-3.

Greer came on the field in the fourth period and set up the Rebels last touchdown by fumbling on the first play. Guard Rollo Moses recovered for Ole Miss at the Tiger 48 and the Rebs scored in five plays.

Weatherly, almost reaped for a loss trying to pass on the second play from scrimmage, maneuvered around until he spotted Kinard all alone downfield and hit him with a pass good for 28 yards to the Tiger 35.

Two plays later, Weatherly shot one straight up the middle to halfback Dave Wells at the LSU three. This one was also good for 28-yards. Weatherly rolled to his right on the next play and went into the end zone untouched. Irwin's upped it to 37-3 with 8:39 to go in the game.

Twice Greer got the Tigers started with his passes late in the game, but both times the Rebels picked off his aerials after a number of completions. Center Robert Harrison nabbed one and reserve quarterback Jimmy Heidell grabbed the other.

Vaught's pleasure was apparent when it was over, "We played the perfect game," he said. "This was the finest Ole Miss team effort in many a day and certainly the finest of the year. "The blocked punt in the early stages of the game was obviously to our advantage and we took command of the game at that time. I think that the team is maturing and coming into shape real well."

LSU Coach Charley McClendon said, "It was obvious by the score that the better team won today. Their line outcharged our line. We are a bruised and battered football team and it finally caught up with us."

YMCA Football

The Bengals kept their record spotless with a 12-0 win in YMCA flag football, the Vikings won their first with a 7-0 victory over the Steelers and the Rams and Bandits played to a 0-0 tie.

In Blue league action the Cowboys stay undefeated with a 3-0 win over the Giants, the Cards smashed the Bears 39-0 to stay in contention for the pennant, and the Indians pasted the Colts 41-0.

The Tigers held 1st place in the Red League with a 25-12 victory over the stubborn Packers.

Fired Up Indians Roar To Victory Over Rebs

ARLINGTON, Tex. — Ignited by Alton Thomas' 69-yard touchdown gallop with a punt in the first quarter, Northeast State rolled to a 21-12 victory over Arlington State here Saturday night.

With Northeast trailing, 6-0, late in the first stanza, Thomas fielded an Arlington boot on his 31 and dashed all the way untouched to tie the game. Ken Newton went 58 yards from scrimmage in the fourth to clinch the victory.

After Willie Ragan's kick was wide on the PAT attempt after Thomas' TD, the Indians came back with a touchdown early in the second quarter and led the rest of the way.

The victory spoiled the Arlington homecoming, evened the series between the two teams at 2-2, pushed the Rebels' record to 1-6 and boosted the Tribe's sagging morale considerably. Northeast is now 2-5 for the season with three games left, one of them a Gulf States Conference date with Southwestern in Monroe Saturday night.

In the second half, Arlington narrowed Northeast's lead to 13-12 but early in the fourth Newton put the game on ice with a beautiful 58-yard touchdown spring. The brilliant Delhi senior, hobbled by injuries most of the year, had a great night. He led all rushers with 155 yards and almost went all the way on two other occasions, once reeling off a 32-yard run and later a 39-yard dash.

Quarterback Mike Cooper scored the second Indian touchdown with a one-yard sneak in the second. Ragan converted after that TD and a Cooper pass was incomplete on a two-point try after Newton's gallop.

Northeast had two chances with the ball and Arlington one before the Rebels moved for the game's first touchdown. The drive began on the Arlington 39 after Steve Ragan's second punt of the night.

Two passes from quarterback Ed Noble to halfback Ken Vaughn, one for 37 yards and another for 15, stoked the drive, the 15-yarder putting the ball on the five. Al Smith rammed to the two, then fullback Ken Bowman smacked over and the Rebs had a 6-0 lead with 5:44 left in the first period.

After an offside penalty against the Indians, Arlington decided to run over the PAT but Noble was pulled down short.

Northeast took the resulting kickoff and failed to move. Regan punted and four plays later Odie Dollins booted for Arlington from his 33.

Thomas took the punt in the middle of the field at the 31, moved straight ahead through a gaping hole, cut slightly to his right, then back up the center and the ball game was tied. He was not touched.

Shortly thereafter, before the period ended, the Indians were on their way to touchdown no. 2. Dollins punted out of bounds on the Arlington 49. Ronnie Graham gained seven, then five, then seven again as the period ended.

In the second quarter, the Tribe punched as far as the 19 before two runs gained nothing. On fourth and three, Cooper hit Wilson at the 10. R. F. wrestled the ball away from a Rebel defender and the Indians had a first and goal at the 10.

Cooper got six on a keeper, Graham managed two, Wilson went wide for one and the Indians faced fourth down again. Cooper was again equal to the challenge, sneaking over with 10:22 left in the half.

This time Ragan's kick was true and Northeast led, 13-6.

Northeast missed a golden opportunity to stretch its lead a few moments later. Don King chased Noble down for a big loss on the Rebel 25 and Jim Lowe recovered a resulting fumble for the tribe.

Thomas got two, Ragan six and six again for a first. Newton went wide to the eight but Ragan got only one and then zero. On fourth and one at the two, Bowman snaked through to throw Thomas for a four-yard loss and Arlington took over.

Arlington threatened just before the half ended, going to the Indians 32, but Sherrel Smith intercepted a Doug Wilson pass in the end zone to end that.

After Arlington took the second half kickoff and picked up one first down before stalling, the Indians took over after the punt on their 24. Newton, on the next play, swept wide, got a block from Ragan, and went 32 yards to the Arlington 44.

Ragan picked up eight but Shillcutt fumbled and Bowman recovered for the Rebs at the 37.

Midway of the third, Arlington moved 78 yards for its second TD. A third-string quarterback, Roger Fanning, sparked the drive with his left-handed passes. He hit on five tosses in the drive, the final one a six-yarder for the score to Phil Ford. Al Smith's pass for the PAT was incomplete and Northeast still led, 13-12.

Late in the third, Regan punted to the 10 and Jimmy Campbell returned to the 14. The Rebs picked up only four in three tries and Dollins went back to punt in the fourth period.

Kirkendall burst through and blocked the boot. The ball boucned out of the end zone just ahead of Kirk and Northeast's lead was increased by two, 15-12. Only 48 seconds had elapsed in the quarter.

Dollins punted from the 20 out of bounds on the Indian 38. Ragan gained four, then Newton went wide right, cut back diagonally acorss the field and outraced the secondary for a touchdown. Cooper's pass to Regan bounced out of the end's hand and Northeast's lead was 21-12 with 13:02 left.

With Fanning again moving the club, the Rebs traveled to the Indians 45 before punting. Later they went to the Tribe 35 before Thomas intercepted a pass on the six.

On the first play after the interception, Newton scooted 39 yards. He slowed down waiting for a block and was caught from behind.

However, three more plays gained only seven and Regan punted. With Fanning giving his left arm another workout, the Rebels moved 44 yards to the Tribe 26 before the Indians took over on downs. Graham ran once before Cooper ate up the rest of the time with sneaks.

Newton's total of 155 yards was gained on only 11 carries. His total was the highest by an Indian runner this season by far. He had gained only 96 yards in the six previous games and his longest run had been only 12 yards.

Ragan followed with 43 yards and Graham had 28. Thomas, except for his punt return, was fairly ineffective offensively, netting only a yard in seven trips.

Arlington won the statistical battle, collecting 14 first downs, 131 yards rushing and 181 passing for a 312 total. The Northeast figures were nine firsts 246 on the ground and 40 passing for 286.

The Indian defense did a good job. Redskins intercepted three passes, their first steals since the McMurry game, and several linesmen played outstanding games.

Ends Jim Love, Sherrel Smith and Regan were outstanding as was tackle Alden Fontenot, another bogeyman for passers.

WIN 20-7, AT LAST

Greenies Snap Football Drouth

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UPI) — Tulane snapped the longest current losing streak in major college football at 17 games Saturday with an impressive 20-7 victory over fumble-hampered South Carolina.

Tulane quarterback Al Curguieres, whose passing and running sparked his team to its best performance of the season, engineered the Green Wave's 20 points-more than it has scored since 1962.

South Carolina went into the game as the favorite but slippery fingers in the backfield brought on two Tulane touchdowns and let the Southeastern Conference team control the football much of the afternoon.

It was a big moral victory for Coach Tommy O'Boyle, whose team had scored only 13 points all year. It was his first win since going to the university in New Orleans last season.

Tulane's first touchdown midway in the opening quarter came 11 plays after end Larry Nicholas picked up a fumble by halfback Larry Gill on the South Carolina 40. Burgeieres, an 180-pounder, ran 31 yards on the ground before fullback George Smith bucked into the end zone from a yard out. Don Bright's extra point kick missed.

Tulane scored again late in the quarter when right half Ron Chapoton scampered almost untouched down the sidelines 23 yards for the touchdown after guard Dave Landry picked up a South Carolina fumble one play earlier. Chapoton had been out two weeks with injuries.

This time, Bright's kick was true.

South Carolina's only touchdown came in the second quarter when quarterback Dan Reeves passed to end J. R. Wilburn at the 2. Wilburn dragged a tackler into the end zone and quarterback Jack McCathern booted the extra point.

Tennessee Club Halts Louisiana Tech Rally

COOKEVILLE, Tenn. (Special) — Tennesse Tech built up an early 21-0 lead and withstood a Louisiana Tech second half rally for a 21-19 victory.

The Golden Eagles took the opening kickoff 76 yards in 12 plays, with Jim Whaley going over from the eight for the score. Bob Rogerson's kick made it 7-0 with 10 minutes remaining in the first quarter.

The Bulldogs were forced to punt later in the quarter and the Ealges ran the ball to the Tech five before the drive stalled.

On the La. Tech first play from scrimmage, Wayne Nolan fumbled and Tennessee recovered.

Midway in the second quarter, Eagle fullback Ron Reeves burst off tackle for a 51 yard touchdown. Roberson, again added the extra point.

Louisiana Tech came back to drive 68 yards in 9 plays with quarterback Billy Liard sparking the drive. Laird hit Larry Stephens in the end-zone as the horn scounded ending the half. C. T. Campbell's kick was no good.

Gray hit Brasuell on a 13-yard scoring toss after a fumble recovery in the first quarter, then found him again on an 11-yarder with 11 seconds left in the first half. Gray climaxed a 58-yard drive late in the fourth period with a one-yard touchdown lunge.

The Aggies scored in the second period on a one-yard sneak by sophomore quarterback Charles LaGrange after the Razorbacks lost 26 yards on a punt attempt. The snap from center sailed through punter Bobby Nix's hands and he chased it into the end zone and ran it out to the one.

Under LaGrange's sharp passing, the Aggies took the opening kickoff 56 yards to the Arkansas 12 before Razorback halfback Tommy Moore intercepted a LaGrange pass on the one.

Moore got Arkansas out of trouble with a 58-yard punt, then on A&M's second play from scrimmage, Arkansas end Jim Finch rammed LaGrange and jarred the ball loose, and Jim Williams recovered for Arkansas. The Razorbacks moved for their first touchdown in four plays.

The Aggies tied the score after the punting mishap, and it stood 7-7 until Arkansas made a 79-yard drive late in the second period.

Buckeyes Rally For Narrow 7-3 Win Over Iowa

The Bucks, who had scored only one touchdown in their last two games, had only one first down in the first eight tries with the ball and were behind 3-0 when Barrington was sent in late in the third period.

On his first try, he faked a pass and raced 13 yards and Ohio was off on a 73-yard touchdown march.

Fullback Matt Snell bulled his way three yards for the counter.

The loss was third straight for Iowa, during which the Hawks have scored but one touchdown. Their lone score came on 34-yard field goal by Jay Roberts at the start of the third period. Roberts had missed from 42 yards earlier, while Dick Van Raaphorst, who has booted eight three-pointers for Ohio this year was short on tries from 51 and 52 yards.

Rote Passes 3 TD's To Guide Charger Sweep

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran quarterback Tobin Rote, making effective use of flanker back Lance Alworth, passed for three touchdowns and scored once as the Western Division leading San Diego Chargers overwhelmed the New York Jets 53-7 Saturday night in an American Football League game.

The Chargers' easy triumph was marred by a fist fight late in the fourth quarter with San Diego linemen Ernie Ladd and Joe Schmidt trading punches and wrestling with New York guard Dan Ficca.

Ladd, a 6-foot-9, 317-pounder, was ejected along with Schmidt and the Jets' Dick Guesman later was thrown out for roughing.

Rote used Alworth mostly as a decoy, but hit the fleet flanker with five passes that gained 180 yards. One went for a touchdown, on a 28-yard pass play in the third period after the Chargers had charged to a 24-0 halftime lead.

Rote completed 11 of 18 passes for 221 yards and two touchdowns in the first half as the Chargers rolled while almost completely stopping the Jets. New York's deepest penetration was to the San Diego 35, late in the second quarter.

Memphis Men Slug Cards For 25-0 Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Unbeaten Memphis State offered fresh bait for bowl promoters Saturday with a 25-0 football triumph over the University of Louisville, spoiling the Cardinals' home-coming.

Coach Billy (Spok) Murphy's Tigers combined the line-smashing of fullback Dave Casinelli with the deft quarterbacking of of Russ Vollmee to make Louisville their sixth consecutive victim this season.

Tied for Scoring Lead

Casinelli, who was tied for the NCAA scoring lead with Toledo's Jim Gray entering the game, scored a touchdown to run his season total to 54 points.

The 200-pound workhorse from Follansbee, W. Va., barreled eight yards around right end for the score. He was the leading ground-gainer for the game with 89 yards in 21 carries.

Villmer collected nine points on a one-yard touchdown run, an extra point place kick, and a pair of runs for two-point conversions. That boosted his season's scoring to 49 points.

Nine-Point Margin

Vollmer's touchdown and a safety gave Memphis a 9-0 lead at the half. Casinelli's touchdown and a 57-yard scoring scamper by halfback Butch Travis, both in the fourth quarter, put the finishing touches on the Memphis victory.

The visitors' aggressive line smothered the Cardinals, allowing only 13 yards net rushing, 91 yards passing, and seven first downs. Louisville made its deepest penetration in the third quarter when it reached the Memphis eight before relinquishing the ball on downs.

Southern Drops Southwestern By 28-0 Count

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Sophomore Harmon Brannon's hard charges at key points and his two touchdown smashes propelled Southern Mississippi to a 28-0 victory over Southwestern Louisiana Saturday night.

Brannon, a 190-pound fullback, crashed the USL line 19 times for 142 yards and a 7.5 average. His consistent drives on third down situations kept Southern's marches rolling.

Brannon went over from the 1 and the 7-yard line in the first half to put the Mississippians ahead 14-0. Dooney Lippincott scored on a 1-yard buck and Bill Gorney got the final TD on a 20-yard run with a pass interception.

Southern, the nation's third team in total defense, held USL to 158 yards while piling up 377.

Southern Mississippi is now 3-2-1. USL has a 3-3 record.

yard drive, a 50-yard dash getting it moving and an 18-yard run setting up the score on the 1.

Then Texas cashed in on a break as John Roderick, the SMU safety, touched a punt and Texas recovered on the SMU 6. Ford hammered over from two yards out.

Later in the second period Crosby, after first missing a field goal from the SMU 33 when the ball hit the crossbar, booted his field goal that, along with his two points after touchdown, proved the difference.

The Methodists fought back with everything they had. They scored late in the second period on a 60-yard drive with Danny Thomas passing for 33 and running for 13 and Billy Gannon keeping it moving with a 14-yard run.

Thomas' 11-yard run got to the Texas 22 and from here he pitched to Gannon in the end zone for the touchdown. But John Richey missed the try for point and Texas led 17-6 at the half.

The other SMU touchdown came in the fourth quarter as the Methodists threw fear into the Longhorns with a dazzling passing game. The second score also was a 22-yard pass — to Gannon again. But Mac White threw it this time.

Texas tied with Baylor for the Southwest Conference lead and these two teams meet at Austin next Saturday.

Yale Upsets

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Fighting Yale moved for a score the first time it got the football and went on to upset stubborn Dartmouth, the pre-season Ivy League title favorite, 10-6, Saturday on a slierry field.

Fair Park Tops Jonesboro-Hodge

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Halfback Steve Schmidt raced 90 yards with the game's opening touchdown and scored another one in the third quarter on an eight yard run to lead triple-A Fair Park to a 20-0 victory over double-A Jonesboro-Hodge Saturday night.

Schmidt's long gallop came with only 13 seconds ticked off on the scoreboard clock. The other touchdown came in the second quarter on a five-yard keeper by quarterback Tommy Roberts. Lynk Carpenter converted after the first two touchdowns.

Penn Upsets

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Penn stunned a fumbling Harvard team with a third period touchdown that stood up for a 7-2 Ivy League football victory Saturday, ending the crimson's string of nine games without a defeat.

With 11 minutes remaining, quarterback Joe Namath got 20 yards through the middle and tossed to end Charlie Stephens for 19 more, putting the ball on the 1. Namath went through the middle for the score. Tim Davis put Alabama ahead 20-19, with his placement.

Namath completed 10 of 16 passes for 142 yards and a score. His deceptive faking to halfbacks Benny Nelson and Ray Ogden and fullbacks Mike Fracchia and Eddie Versprille added to the State defense's confusion.

Namath gave the ball to Nelson 14 times for 59 big yards mostly off tackle and around the ends.

The sterling performances of quarterbacks Sonny Fisher and Don Edwards and halfbacks Larry Swearengen and Don Bland put the homecoming invaders ahead 12-10 at halftime.

Alabama kicker Davis finished the first half scoring with 30 seconds left with a 21-yard field goal, his 16th in his three-year career. Needing one more field goal to tie the NCAA career mark, Davis had a third period attempt blocked.

Auburn Tigers Crush Florida At Homecoming

AUBURN, Ala. (AP)—Jimmy Sidle put on a dazzling exhibition of ball handling and Woody Woodall equaled an Auburn field goal record Saturday in leading the fifth-ranked Tigers to a 19-0 football victory over Florida.

A homecoming crowd of 47,000, largest in Auburn's history, howled with glee as Sidle, one of the nation's leading rushers, put the undefeated, untied Tigers deep into Gator teritory time and again.

It was the running and passing of the 21-year-old junior quarterback which put the ball close enough for Woodall to kick two field goals and raise his collegiate total to 17. That equaled the school record established in 1961 by Ed Dyas.

It was Sidle who gave the partisan fans their greatest thrill with a 25-yard touchdown run as the third quarter ended. Then, for good measure, he made the extra point after linebacker Bill Cody intercepted one of Tom Shannon's passes and ran 42 yards for a touchdown with three minutes left in the game.

Texas Southern Drops Grambling By 27-13 Margin

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Carl Zenn passed for two touchdowns and ran for another to lead Texas Southern to a 27-13 victory over Grambling Saturday night.

Zenn scored from one yard out to open the scoring, then tossed passes of 40 and 15 yards to Arren Wells for two more tallies. Charles Parker got the fourth marker for TSU on a one-yard run.

Memphis Men Slug Cards For 25-0 Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Unbeaten Memphis State offered fresh bait for bowl promoters Saturday with a 25-0 football triumph over the University of Louisville, spoiling the Cardinals' home-coming.

Coach Billy (Spok) Murphy's Tigers combined the line-smashing of fullback Dave Casinelli with the deft quarterbacking of of Russ Vollmec to make Louisville their sixth consecutive victim this season.

Tied for Scoring Lead

Casinelli, who was tied for the NCAA scoring lead with Toledo's Jim Gray entering the game, scored a touchdown to run his season total to 54 points.

The 200-pound workhorse from Follansbee, W. Va., barreled eight yards around right end for the score. He was the leading ground-gainer for the game with 89 yards in 21 carries.

Villmer collected nine points on a one-yard touchdown run, an extra point place kick, and a pair of runs for two-point conversions. That boosted his season's scoring to 49 points.

Nine-Point Margin

Vollmer's touchdown and a safety gave Memphis a 9-0 lead at the half. Casinelli's touchdown and a 57-yard scoring scamper by halfback Butch Travis, both in the fourth quarter, put the finishing touches on the Memphis victory.

The visitors' aggressive line smothered the Cardinals, allowing only 13 yards net rushing, 91 yards passing, and seven first downs. Louisville made its deepest penetration in the third quarter when it reached the Memphis eight before relinquishing the ball on downs.

Southern Drops Southwestern By 28-0 Count

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Sophomore Harmon Brannon's hard charges at key points and his two touchdown smashes propelled Southern Mississippi to a 28-0 victory over Southwestern Louisiana Saturday night.

Brannon, a 190-pound fullback, crashed the USL line 19 times for 142 yards and a 7.5 average. His consistent drives on third down situations kept Southern's marches rolling.

Brannon went over from the 1 and the 7-yard line in the first half to put the Mississippians ahead 14-0. Dooney Lippincott scored on a 1-yard buck and Bill Gorney got the final TD on a 20-yard run with a pass interception.

Southern, the nation's third team in total defense, held USL to 158 yards while piling up 377.

Southern Mississippi is now 3-2-1. USL has a 3-3 record.

Shoeless Kicking Proves Texans' Salvation Again

DALLAS (AP) — The toe of shoeless Tony Crosby won for Texas the third week in a row Saturday as his extra points and 34-yard field goal proved the difference in a 17-12 victory over Southern Methodist to keep the nation's No. 1 team undefeated and untied through seven games.

yard drive, a 50-yard dash getting it moving and an 18-yard run setting up the score on the 1.

Then Texas cashed in on a break as John Roderick, the SMU safety, touched a punt and Texas recovered on the SMU 6. Ford hammered over from two yards out.

Later in the second period Crosby, after first missing a field goal from the SMU 33 when the ball hit the crossbar, booted his field goal that, along with his two points after touchdown, proved the difference.

The Methodists fought back with everything they had. They scored late in the second period on a 60-yard drive with Danny Thomas passing for 33 and running for 13 and Billy Gannon keeping it moving with a 14-yard run.

Thomas' 11-yard run got to the Texas 22 and from here he pitched to Gannon in the end zone for the touchdown. But John Richey missed the try for point and Texas led 17-6 at the half.

The other SMU touchdown came in the fourth quarter as the Methodists threw fear into the Longhorns with a dazzling passing game. The second score also was a 22-yard pass — to Gannon again. But Mac White threw it this time.

Texas tied with Baylor for the Southwest Conference lead and these two teams meet at Austin next Saturday.

Fair Park Tops Jonesboro-Hodge

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Halfback Steve Schmidt raced 90 yards with the game's opening touchdown and scored another one in the third quarter on an eight yard run to lead triple-A Fair Park to a 20-0 victory over double-A Jonesboro-Hodge Saturday night.

Schmidt's long gallop came with only 13 seconds ticked off on the scoreboard clock. The other touchdown came in the second quarter on a five-yard keeper by quarterback Tommy Roberts. Lynk Carpenter converted after the first two touchdowns.

Penn Upsets

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Penn stunned a fumbling Harvard team with a third period touchdown that stood up for a 7-2 Ivy League football victory Saturday, ending the crimson's string of nine games without a defeat.

With 11 minutes remaining, quarterback Joe Namath got 20 yards through the middle and tossed to end Charlie Stephens for 19 more, putting the ball on the 1. Namath went through the middle for the score. Tim Davis put Alabama ahead 20-19, with his placement.

Namath completed 10 of 16 passes for 142 yards and a score. His deceptive faking to halfbacks Benny Nelson and Ray Ogden and fullbacks Mike Fracchia and Eddie Versprille added to the State defense's confusion.

Namath gave the ball to Nelson 14 times for 59 big yards mostly off tackle and around the ends.

The sterling performances of quarterbacks Sonny Fisher and Don Edwards and halfbacks Larry Swearengen and Don Bland put the homecoming invaders ahead 12-10 at halftime.

Alabama kicker Davis finished the first half scoring with 30 seconds left with a 21-yard field goal, his 16th in his three-year career. Needing one more field goal to tie the NCAA career mark, Davis had a third period attempt blocked.

Auburn Tigers Crush Florida At Homecoming

AUBURN, Ala. (AP)—Jimmy Sidle put on a dazzling exhibition of ball handling and Woody Woodall equaled an Auburn field goal record Saturday in leading the fifth-ranked Tigers to a 19-0 football victory over Florida.

A homecoming crowd of 47,000, largest in Auburn's history, howled with glee as Sidle, one of the nation's leading rushers, put the undefeated, untied Tigers deep into Gator teritory time and again.

It was the running and passing of the 21-year-old junior quarterback which put the ball close enough for Woodall to kick two field goals and raise his collegiate total to 17. That equaled the school record established in 1961 by Ed Dyas.

It was Sidle who gave the partisan fans their greatest thrill with a 25-yard touchdown run as the third quarter ended. Then, for good measure, he made the extra point after linebacker Bill Cody intercepted one of Tom Shannon's passes and ran 42 yards for a touchdown with three minutes left in the game.

Virginia Tech Tops Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Virginia Tech's Southern Conference football leaders outlived their tendency to fumble Saturday and rode performances by Bob Schweickert and Sonny Utz to a 14-13 victory over Richmond.

Texas Southern Drops Grambling By 27-13 Margin

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Carl Zenn passed for two touchdowns and ran for another to lead Texas Southern to a 27-13 victory over Grambling Saturday night.

Zenn scored from one yard out to open the scoring, then tossed passes of 40 and 15 yards to Arren Wells for two more tallies. Charles Parker got the fourth marker for TSU on a one-yard run.

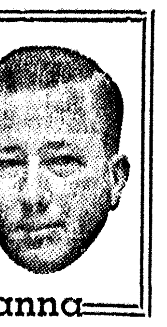
COMIN' UP AFIELD

Duck Program In Lafourche



With Sam Hanna

Russell Sage Area

A squirrel scampered across the trail.

The Scout came to a quick halt, but it was too late. The squirrel had disappeared into the thick cover of the Russell Safe Wildlife Management Area.

So we bounced on — for three hours as the Colonel chewed on a cigar, talking about the state's plans for the 14,000 - acre public hunting area in Lafourche Swamp near Monroe.

We stopped at an old abandoned oil well back there in the swamp where a water hole has been inpounded for wildlife. The Colonel said once when he rounded the curve at the well clearing a big buck was posted on top of the impoundment bank.

"He looked like that buck in the whiskey ad," explained Jack Rushing, supervisor of Russell Sage. His friends call him "Colonel."

We kept on going in the Scout through slough bottoms and a dry bayou, beneath towering oaks, and past dense stands of saplings until we reached a flat where Jack stopped the Scout.

"This is it," he said, pointing to temporary impoundment levees that will keep the water from draining out of the swamp into the big drainage canal that splits Lafourche in half.

"This is where we'll have some green-tree hunting if we get some rain," said the Colonel.

"Green - tree hunting" if a phrase that's come of age when you talk about shooting mallards in the flooded woods. That's when you need about a foot and a half of water in acrons to attract the greenheads.

An area covering about 2,000 acres has been set up for "green - tree" hunting in Russell Sage. It took the state about five days to build the temporary levees to hold the water.

But of course the biggest item at the moment that's needed is water. A lot of rains like the one early Firday will be needed before the country around Gourd Bayou in Lafourche will be attractive to ducks.

Located about four miles down the canal from U.S. 80, this "green - tree" area is ready for rainfall and then the ducks.

The Colonel pointed all this out to us as we admired the work that's been done on Russell Sage since the state began several months ago.

"This road was cut out just recently," Jack said, explaining that most of the woods trails had been cleared enough so that a fellow in an old car or a truck could drive back there in the dry weather and kill a mess of squirrels.

Acess routes are a prime need on any game management area and Russel Sage is no exception. As it stands now, the average hunter can get to just about any spot in Lafourche without too much trouble.

Chewing hard on his cigar, the Colonel also pointed to clearings here and there in the swamp where he had planted green stuff for deer in areas cleaned up so the turkeys can come and scratch around.

"I'd rather see an old hen with a few small ones than all the deer in the woods," said the Colonel.

Over a dozen wild turkeys were released in Russell Sage a few months ago to get the turkey population on the go. Jack said we'll have turkeys if the hunters will cooperate.

The shadows of the late afternoon had begun to creep through the swamp as we headed out in the Scout. Up the trail, about 50 yards, a deer, then another one, slipped through the brush.

We stopped and the Colonel squinted.

"There goes a buck," he said.

His eyes are better than ours.

Rain Helps Out

It wasn't a big rain, but it helped.

The rain that fell throughout the Monroe area early Friday morning led the East Carroll Parish Police Jury to re-open its hunting seasons.

West Carroll, Madison and Tensas are still closed for the present time, according to our latest reports. However, that could change, since the police juries will be meteing soon.

Of course, the big season that most of the hunters are pointing to is the deer season for gun hunters. That opens the day after Thanksgiving.

By then we should have enough rain to warrant the opening of the seasons in all the areas.

Besides the deer hunter, the drought could hurt the duck season, opening also November 29th, and the quail season, which opens November 28th.

Incidentially, the goose season opens November 7th or this Thursday. As of now, there aren't many geese if any in this section, but South Louisiana has lots of them.

The outdoor activity should be picking up within the next several weeks.

Dove Survey Results

Over 337,500 doves were killed in Louisiana during the first split of the season last September, according to a survey conducted by the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission.

Results also indicate an estimated 54,900 persons hunted doves and these hunters made an estimated 126,400 trips during the hunting season of September 2-16th.

But Director L. D. Young Jr. said these figures are conservative. A telephone survey was conducted to arrive at these results and of course they aren't fool-proof.

Information from telephone subscribers will be gathered after the second and third segments of the dove hunting season. In fact, the second survey will begin tomorrow.

The current second split of the season ends today.

This survey is being conducted to provide more information for the establishment and regulation of the seasons in the future. Louisiana is the first state to use this system.

Little Man's Corner

Suddenly it rained and turned cold and the little men made news afield.

Of course the big sport afield is the bow and arrow season on deer. It runs through November 24th and from all indications the state may surpass its total kill of about 15 deer last year.

A local hunter, Sonny Day, was the first archer to report a deer kill. He bagged a 110-pound doe in the Russell Sage area in Lafourche Swamp.

Jack Bell, president of the Tupawek Bowmen, killed an 85-pound doe on the Chicago Mills Game Management Area near Winnsboro. That portion of the area in Farnklin Parish is open.

But the hunters who had the most success were Clarence Sikes and Denon Jones, both of Winnsboro. They hunted together on the Chicago Mills area.

Sikes killed a doe on Tuesday afternoon while Jones came back on Thursday with a 6-point buck.

Those are all of the deer that we have had reported so far.

Meantime, the fishing has been pretty good. Clev Taylor of West Monroe landed the limit of bass in Lake St. John. Mr. and Mrs. George Whitley of Monroe got the limit of white perch in the Blue Hole.

From Winnsboro, Mack and Annie Rogillio had a good fishing trip on specs in Bayou Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Garraway of Ferriday got the limit of bass fishing with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bailey in Lake Concordia. The Baileys got the limit too. Stan Koch got the limit of bass in the lake also.

Fishing the Vidalia barpits, Bill Strickland got the limit of bream. Percy May got the limit of bass and so did Willie Goss and Ben Goss of Vidalia.

From Lake Providence, W. P. Rushing got seven nice bass in a barpit near his home on a Cobra. Leonard Kennedy has been catching bass in Lake Providence.

Other Lake Providence bass fishermen catching a few include Dr. W. A. Harris and Vacel Razer.

Just back from a successful goose hunt at Sumner, Missouri are W. C. Martin, Kirby Tillotson and Bill Allen Butler of Winnsboro. They bagged the limit on a two-day hunt. The limit is two daily.

Bill Allen said there were 85,000 Canadian geese on Swan Lake on opening day. He said it's a sight to see.

SECOND DEER killed by these two Franklin Parish hunters with bow and arrow is seen here. The 6-point buck was bagged by Denon Jones (left) of Winnsboro on a hunting trip with Clarence Sikes, also of Winnsboro, in the Chicago Mills Game Management Area. Sikes killed a doe earlier in the current bow season that will last until November 24th.

Rice Owls Tag Texas Tech, 17-3

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Rice unveiled a varied offensive in the second half Saturday and swept to a 17-3 decision over Texas Tech.

With quarterbacks Benny Hollingsworth and Walter McReynolds directing, the Owls sent a half-dozen backs skirting the Tech defense.

Rice, whose only loss in Southwest Conference warfare was to top-ranked Texas, never trailed the outclassed Red Raiders and remained in the thick of the conference race.

Defensive specialist Ronnie Cervenka sealed Texas Tech's fate with 5:35 left in the third period when he picked off a pass by quarterback Ben Elledge and returned it 28 yards for a touchdown.

Larry Rice kicked the extra point to push the Owls into a 10-0 lead. Sophomore wingback Don Elsik added a clinching touchdown on a one-yard thrust with less than five minutes remaining.

Rice, a sophomore, had given the visitors a three-point edge with a 29-yard field goal in the second period.

Unbeaten Celts Whip Detroit In NBA Contest

BOSTON (AP)—The undefeated Boston Celtics made it six victories in a row Saturday night as they whipped the Detroit Pistons 117-109 in a National Basketball Association game.

It was Boston's 11th consecutive triumph over Detroit stretching over a two-year period.

Jack Concannon Guides Boston

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—Quarterback Jack Concannon guided a crisp offense and Boston College made the most of Vanderbilt mistakes for a 19-6 intersectional football victory Saturday.

The versatile Concannon passed nine yards to sophomore kBob Budzinski for one touchdown, ran a yard for another and pulled a slick handoff to Jim McGowan which resulted in a 30-yard scoring jaunt.

DAVIS CUP INTERZONE

United States Netters Take Easy Victories

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Mckinley and Dennis Ralston scored crushing straight-set victories in the opening singles Saturday which sent the United States into a 2-0 lead over India in the Davis Cup Interzone tennis finals.

First, McKinley, the bounding, rocket-hitting Wimbledon champion, blasted Premjit Lall off the court 6-4, 6-3, 6-0. Then Ralston, resorting to trick drop shots and lobs, completely confused India's world-ranking ace, Ramanathan Krishnan, 6-4, 6-1, 13-11.

Now the Americans need only to win Sunday's doubles match to clinch a challenge round berth against Australia Dec. 26-28—the first for the United States since 1960.

U.S. hopes for recapturing the symbol of world tennis supremacy are the brightest in years.

In the doubles, McKinley and Ralston, who hold the U.S. National championship, play Lall and Jaidip Mukerjea, with an American victory regarded as a foregone conclusion. The two young Yanks are now rated the best doubles combination in amateur tennis.

India apparently conceded defeat when it benched its best player, Krishnan, for the doubles and decided to play Mukerjea for the sake of giving the latter additional experience.

The final two singles are scheduled Monday, with Ralston opposing Lall and McKinley meeting Krishnan. If the United States should win the doubles, as expected, then these matches would become little more than exhibitions. The tie is a best-of-five match series.

The challenge round is scheduled at Adelaide, Australia. The American team, led by non-playing captain Bob Kelleher of Los Angeles, plans to leave for the Down Under continent immediately and play in at least two of the preliminary stated tournaments.

Kelleher was pleased with the Americans' opening day performance.

"McKinley was really sharp and he got better as he went along," the captain said. "Ralston played Krishnan's own gam —a game of touch tennis with delicate placements and drop shots. It was a bit of conceit, but it worked."

The crowd of 5,300, jamming the Cricket Club of India stadium for the matches on slow clay courts, got its only thrill when Krishnan, down 3-5 and only one game from defeat, rallied to break Ralston's service at love in the ninth game of the third set and then turn that set into a bitter marathon battle which lasted 1¼ hours.

Ralston, 20-year-old University of Southern California junior from Bakersfield, Calif., dominated the first two sets by wrecking the rhythm of Krishnan's formidable game. He kept the big, slow-moving Indian off-balance with an assortment of drop shots, stop volleys and occasional lobs.

foe. This was the only encouragement Krishnan needed.

Leading 5-3, Ralston failed to win a point on service in the ninth game and before he knew it the third set was knotted 5-5.

In the 11th game, Krishnan had four advantages on Ralston's service but couldn't put over the break-clinching points. Finally, Ralston pulled out the game with a beautiful cross-court backhand.

The 26-year-old Indian, rated one of the best five amateurs in the world, fought off three match points in the 14th game and finally held on to carry the set into a see-saw battle of broken services.

STAUBACH SHOW

Irish No Match For Navy Goats

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Roger Staubach set a Navy season total offense record and, with an Irishman named Pat Donnelly helping, led the Middies to their biggest football tally over Notre Dame 35-14 Saturday.

When Staubach hit fullback Donnelly with a 30-yard pass in the third period, he broke the Middie total offense mark of 1,348 yards set by George Welsh in 1955.

Four plays later, Staubach shot an eight-yard scoring pass to Donnelly, breaking a 7-7 deadlock and igniting a 21-point third period tally.

The biggest previous Navy score in 37 meetings with the Irish was a 33-7 victory in 1956.

Staubach had his worst afternoon of a brilliant season, but still produced 9 of 15 pass hits for 91 yards and two touchdowns and 23 yards rushing on 19 carries for a 114 total.

This gave the junior quarterback from Cincinnati a season total offense total of 1,420 yards in Navy's parade to a 5-1 record.

Donnelly rolled up 127 of Navy's 191 rushing yardage on 14 carries. Donnelly outrushed the entire Irish ball - carrying corps, which netted only 109 yards.

Donnelly scored Navy's fifth touchdown with a 41-yard scamper early in the fourth period. It was Donnelly, too, who set up Navy's touchdown for a 21-7 lead in the third period when he scooted 21 and 20 yards in a 53-yard drive capped by John Sai's one-yard dive over center.

Navy end Gary Kellner also scored two touchdowns. The first came on a three-yard shot from Staubach on the opening play of the second quarter for a 7-0 lead. The second came on an eight-yard scamper with an errant pass by Notre Dame's Frank Budka late in the third period.

The irish were in the game against fifth-ranked Navy only in the first half and enjoyed a 7-7 halftime score after an impressive 65-yard drive in the second period, with Budka slipping across from the 2 for the touchdown.

The other Notre Dame score came with the Irish down 35-7 in the fourth period. After Notre Dame recovered a Middie fumble, Joe Kantor went 10 yards for a touchdown.

Michigan Hands Northwestern 27-6 Stomping

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan exploded for three second-half touchdowns and scored a 27-6 Big Ten victory over Northwestern Saturday.

Michigan quarterback Bob Timberlake passed for three scores and end John Henderson got the other touchdown after intercepting a pass on the Northwestern 23.

The Wolverines, who had not won since an opening victory over Southern Methodist, dominated play and allowed the Wildcats past the mid-field stripe only once in the second half.

Timberlake directed a second-quarter drive of 76 yards and capped it with a 33-yard pass to back Jack Clancy. The touchdown came with two minutes remaining before intermission.

Later in the third quarter, Michigan marched 50 yards on eight plays with Henderson grabbing a pass and scoring on a 24-yard play.

Conley scored Michigan's final touchdown in the fourth quarter when he leaped high at the 12-yard line to grab a Timberlake pass and raced along the sideline to complete a 33-yard play.

COMIN' UP AFIELD

Duck Program In Lafourche

With Sam Hanna

Russell Sage Area

A squirrel scampered across the trail.

The Scout came to a quick halt, but it was too late. The squirrel had disappeared into the thick cover of the Russell Safe Wildlife Management Area.

So we bounced on — for three hours as the Colonel chewed on a cigar, talking about the state's plans for the 14,000 - acre public hunting area in Lafourche Swamp near Monroe.

We stopped at an old abandoned oil well back there in the swamp where a water hole has been inpounded for wildlife. The Colonel said once when he rounded the curve at the well clearing a big buck was posted on top of the impoundment bank.

"He looked like that buck in the whiskey ad," explained Jack Rushing, supervisor of Russell Sage. His friends call him "Colonel."

We kept on going in the Scout through slough bottoms and a dry bayou, beneath towering oaks, and past dense stands of saplings until we reached a flat where Jack stopped the Scout.

"This is it," he said, pointing to temporary impoundment levees that will keep the water from draining out of the swamp into the big drainage canal that splits Lafourche in half.

"This is where we'll have some green-tree hunting if we get some rain," said the Colonel.

"Green - tree hunting" if a phrase that's come of age when you talk about shooting mallards in the flooded woods. That's when you need about a foot and a half of water in acrons to attract the greenheads.

An area covering about 2,000 acres has been set up for "green - tree" hunting in Russell Sage. It took the state about five days to build the temporary levees to hold the water.

But of course the biggest item at the moment that's needed is water. A lot of rains like the one early Firday will be needed before the country around Gourd Bayou in Lafourche will be attractive to ducks.

Located about four miles down the canal from U.S. 80, this "green - tree" area is ready for rainfall and then the ducks.

The Colonel pointed all this out to us as we admired the work that's been done on Russell Sage since the state began several months ago.

"This road was cut out just recently," Jack said, explaining that most of the woods trails had been cleared enough so that a fellow in an old car or a truck could drive back there in the dry weather and kill a mess of squirrels.

Acess routes are a prime need on any game management area and Russel Sage is no exception. As it stands now, the average hunter can get to just about any spot in Lafourche without too much trouble.

Chewing hard on his cigar, the Colonel also pointed to clearings here and there in the swamp where he had planted green stuff for deer in areas cleaned up so the turkeys can come and scratch around.

"I'd rather see an old hen with a few small ones than all the deer in the woods," said the Colonel.

Over a dozen wild turkeys were released in Russell Sage a few months ago to get the turkey population on the go. Jack said we'll have turkeys if the hunters will cooperate.

The shadows of the late afternoon had begun to creep through the swamp as we headed out in the Scout. Up the trail, about 50 yards, a deer, then another one, slipped through the brush.

We stopped and the Colonel squinted.

"There goes a buck," he said.

His eyes are better than ours.

Rain Helps Out

It wasn't a big rain, but it helped.

The rain that fell throughout the Monroe area early Friday morning led the East Carroll Parish Police Jury to re-open its hunting seasons.

West Carroll, Madison and Tensas are still closed for the present time, according to our latest reports. However, that could change, since the police juries will be meteing soon.

Of course, the big season that most of the hunters are pointing to is the deer season for gun hunters. That opens the day after Thanksgiving.

By then we should have enough rain to warrant the opening of the seasons in all the areas.

Besides the deer hunter, the drought could hurt the duck season, opening also November 29th, and the quail season, which opens November 28th.

Incidentially, the goose season opens November 7th or this Thursday. As of now, there aren't many geese if any in this section, but South Louisiana has lots of them.

The outdoor activity should be picking up within the next several weeks.

Dove Survey Results

Over 337,500 doves were killed in Louisiana during the first split of the season last September, according to a survey conducted by the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission.

Results also indicate an estimated 54,900 persons hunted doves and these hunters made an estimated 126,400 trips during the hunting season of September 2-16th.

But Director L. D. Young Jr. said these figures are conservative. A telephone survey was conducted to arrive at these results and of course they aren't fool-proof.

Information from telephone subscribers will be gathered after the second and third segments of the dove hunting season. In fact, the second survey will begin tomorrow.

The current second split of the season ends today.

This survey is being conducted to provide more information for the establishment and regulation of the seasons in the future. Louisiana is the first state to use this system.

Little Man's Corner

Suddenly it rained and turned cold and the little men made news afield.

Of course the big sport afield is the bow and arrow season on deer. It runs through November 24th and from all indications the state may surpass its total kill of about 15 deer last year.

A local hunter, Sonny Day, was the first archer to report a deer kill. He bagged a 110-pound doe in the Russell Sage area in Lafourche Swamp.

Jack Bell, president of the Tupawek Bowmen, killed an 85-pound doe on the Chicago Mills Game Management Area near Winnsboro. That portion of the area in Farnklin Parish is open.

But the hunters who had the most success were Clarence Sikes and Denon Jones, both of Winnsboro. They hunted together on the Chicago Mills area.

Sikes killed a doe on Tuesday afternoon while Jones came back on Thursday with a 6-point buck.

Those are all of the deer that we have had reported so far.

Meantime, the fishing has been pretty good. Clev Taylor of West Monroe landed the limit of bass in Lake St. John. Mr. and Mrs George Whitley of Monroe got the limit of white perch in the Blue Hole.

From Winnsboro, Mack and Annie Rogillio had a good fishing trip on specs in Bayou Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Garraway of Ferriday got the limit of bass fishing with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bailey in Lake Concordia. The Baileys got the limit too. Stan Koch got the limit of bass in the lake also.

Fishing the Vidalia barpits, Bill Strickland got the limit of bream. Percy May got the limit of bass and so did Willie Goss and Ben Goss of Vidalia.

From Lake Providence, W. P. Rushing got seven nice bass in a barpit near his home on a Cobra. Leonard Kennedy has been catching bass in Lake Providence.

Just back from a successful goose hunt at Sumner, Missouri are W. C. Martin, Kirby Tillotson and Bill Allen Butler of Winnsboro. They bagged the limit on a two-day hunt. The limit is two daily.

Bill Allen said there were 85,000 Canadian geese on Swan Lake on opening day. He said it's a sight to see.

SECOND DEER killed by these two Franklin Parish hunters with bow and arrow is seen here. The 6-point buck was bagged by Denon Jones (left) of Winnsboro on a hunting trip with Clarence Sikes, also of Winnsboro, in the Chicago Mills Game Management Area. Sikes killed a doe earlier in the current bow season that will last until November 24th.

Rice Owls Tag Texas Tech, 17-3

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Rice unveiled a varied offensive in the second half Saturday and swept to a 17-3 decision over Texas Tech.

With quarterbacks Benny Hollingsworth and Walter McReynolds directing, the Owls sent a half-dozen backs skirting the Tech defense.

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP)—Statistics of the Rice-Texas Tech football game:

Passes	8-17	7-17
Passes intercepted by	2	0
Punts	5-33	4-37
Fumbles lost	0	1
Yards penalized	40	31

Rice, whose only loss in Southwest Conference warfare was to top-ranked Texas, never trailed the outclassed Red Raiders and remained in the thick of the conference race.

Defensive specialist Ronnie Cervenka sealed Texas Tech's fate with 5:35 left in the third period when he picked off a pass by quarterback Ben Elledge and returned it 28 yards for a touchdown.

Larry Rice kicked the extra point to push the Owls into a 10-0 lead. Sophomore wingback Don Elsik added a clinching touchdown on a one-yard thrust with less than five minutes remaining.

Rice, a sophomore, had given the visitors a three-point edge with a 29-yard field goal in the second period.

Unbeaten Celts Whip Detroit In NBA Contest

BOSTON (AP)—The undefeated Boston Celtics made it six victories in a row Saturday night as they whipped the Detroit Pistons 117-109 in a National Basketball Association game.

It was Boston's 11th consecutive triumph over Detroit stretching over a two-year period.

Jack Concannon Guides Boston

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—Quarterback Jack Concannon guided a crisp offense and Boston College made the most of Vanderbilt mistakes for a 19-6 intersectional football victory Saturday.

The versatile Concannon passed nine yards to sophomore kBob Budzinski for one touchdown, ran a yard for another and pulled a slick handoff to Jim McGowan which resulted in a 30-yard scoring jaunt.

DAVIS CUP INTERZONE

United States Netters Take Easy Victories

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Mckinley and Dennis Ralston scored crushing straight-set victories in the opening singles Saturday which sent the United States into a 2-0 lead over India in the Davis Cup Interzone tennis finals.

First, McKinley, the bounding, rocket-hitting Wimbledon champion, blasted Premjit Lall off the court 6-4, 6-3, 6-0. Then Ralston, resorting to trick drop shots and lobs, completely confused India's world-ranking ace, Ramanathan Krishnan, 6-4, 6-1, 13-11.

Now the Americans need only to win Sunday's doubles match to clinch a challenge round berth against Australia Dec. 26-28—the first for the United States since 1960.

U.S. hopes for recapturing the symbol of world tennis supremacy are the brightest in years.

In the doubles, McKinley and Ralston, who hold the U.S. National championship, play Lall and Jaidip Mukerjea, with an American victory regarded as a foregone conclusion. The two young Yanks are now rated the best doubles combination in amateur tennis.

India apparently conceded defeat when it benched its best player, Krishnan, for the doubles and decided to play Mukerjea for the sake of giving the latter additional experience.

The final two singles are scheduled Monday, with Ralston opposing Lall and McKinley meeting Krishnan. If the United States should win the doubles, as expected, then these matches would become little more than exhibitions. The tie is a best-of-five match series.

The challenge round is scheduled at Adelaide, Australia. The American team, led by non-playing captain Bob Kelleher of Los Angeles, plans to leave for the Down Under continent immediately and play in at least two of the preliminary stated tournaments.

Kelleher was pleased with the Americans' opening day performance.

"McKinley was really sharp and he got better as he went along," the captain said. "Ralston played Krishnan's own gam—a game of touch tennis with delicate placements and drop shots. It was a bit of conceit, but it worked."

The crowd of 5,300, jamming the Cricket Club of India stadium for the matches on slow clay courts, got its only thrill when Krishnan, down 3-5 and only one game from defeat, rallied to break Ralston's service at love in the ninth game of the third set and then turn that set into a bitter marathon battle which lasted 1¼ hours.

Ralston, 20-year-old University of Southern California junior from Bakersfield, Calif., dominated the first two sets by wrecking the rhythm of Krishnan's formidable game. He kept the big, slow-moving Indian off-balance with an assortment of drop shots, stop volleys and occasional lobs.

foe. This was the only encouragement Krishnan needed.

Leading 5-3, Ralston failed to win a point on service in the ninth game and before he knew it the third set was knotted 5-5.

In the 11th game, Krishnan had four advantages on Ralston's service but couldn't put over the break-clinching points. Finally, Ralston pulled out the game with a beautiful cross-court backhand.

The 26-year-old Indian, rated one of the best five amateurs in the world, fought off three match points in the 14th game and finally held on to carry the set into a see-saw battle of broken services.

STAUBACH SHOW

Irish No Match For Navy Goats

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Roger Staubach set a Navy season total offense record and, with an Irishman named Pat Donnelly helping, led the Middies to their biggest football tally over Notre Dame 35-14 Saturday.

When Staubach hit fullback Donnelly with a 30-yard pass in the third period, he broke the Middie total offense mark of 1,348 yards set by George Welsh in 1955.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—Statistics of the Navy-Notre Dame football game:

	NAVY	NOTRE DAME
First downs	16	11
Rushing yardage	191	172
Passing yardage	91	28
Passes	9-15	2-18
Passes intercepted by	3	0
Punts	5-30	6-36
Fumbles lost	3	0
Yards penalized	46	73

Four plays later, Staubach shot an eight-yard scoring pass to Donnelly, breaking a 7-7 deadlock and igniting a 21-point third period tally.

The biggest previous Navy score in 37 meetings with the Irish was a 33-7 victory in 1956.

Staubach had his worst afternoon of a brilliant season, but still produced 9 of 15 pass hits for 91 yards and two touchdowns and 23 yards rushing on 19 carries for a 114 total.

This gave the junior quarterback from Cincinnati a season total offense total of 1,420 yards in Navy's parade to a 5-1 record.

Donnelly rolled up 127 of Navy's 191 rushing yardage on 14 carries. Donnelly outrushed the entire Irish ball - carrying corps, which netted only 109 yards.

Donnelly scored Navy's fifth touchdown with a 41-yard scamper early in the fourth period. It was Donnelly, too, who set up Navy's touchdown for a 21-7 lead in the third period when he scooted 21 and 20 yards in a 53-yard drive capped by John Sai's one-yard dive over center.

Navy end Gary Kellner also scored two touchdowns. The first came on a three-yard shot from Staubach on the opening play of the second quarter for a 7-0 lead. The second came on an eight-yard scamper with an errant pass by Notre Dame's Frank Budka late in the third period.

The irish were in the game against fifth-ranked Navy only in the first half and enjoyed a 7-7 halftime score after an impressive 65-yard drive in the second period, with Budka slipping across from the 2 for the touchdown.

The other Notre Dame score came with the Irish down 35-7 in the fourth period. After Notre Dame recovered a Middie fumble, Joe Kantor went 10 yards for a touchdown.

Michigan Hands Northwestern 27-6 Stomping

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan exploded for three second-half touchdowns and scored a 27-6 Big Ten victory over Northwestern Saturday.

Michigan quarterback Bob Timberlake passed for three scores and end John Henderson got the other touchdown after intercepting a pass on the Northwestern 23.

The Wolverines, who had not won since an opening victory over Southern Methodist, dominated play and allowed the Wildcats past the mid-field stripe only once in the second half.

Timberlake directed a second-quarter drive of 76 yards and capped it with a 33-yard pass to back Jack Clancy. The touchdown came with two minutes remaining before intermission.

Later in the third quarter, Michigan marched 50 yards on eight plays with Henderson grabbing a pass and scoring on a 24-yard play.

Conley scored Michigan's final touchdown in the fourth quarter when he leaped high at the 12-yard line to grab a Timberlake pass and raced along the sideline to complete a 33-yard play.

MR. EVERYTHING'S DAY

Lothridge Leads Tech To Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Quarterback Billy Lothridge, Georgia Tech's "Mr. Everything," ran, kicked and passed the Yellow Jackets to a 30-6 victory over the Duke Blue Devils Saturday.

Lothridge broke the national NCAA career record for field goals, formerly held by Ed Dyas of Auburn, in kicking a 38-yarder against the wind in the last second of the first half. It was the 18th of his career and second of the game.

Lothridge threw two touchdown passes, kicked three field goals and three extra points, and harassed Duke on the run or pass option play. He averaged 46 yards punting and added a 61-yard quick kick.

Tech got off to a sluggish start and Duke scored first in the opening period. Quarterback Scotty Glacken sparked the 64-yard drive. Halfback John Lucas scored the touchdown on a four-yard end sweep.

Halfback Johnny Gresham got Tech started with a 38-yard run in the second quarter. Lothridge set up the touchdown with a 12-yard pass to end Billy Martin and fullback Ray Mendheim swept around right end for five yards and the score. Lothridge kicked the point.

Lothridge tied Dyas' record with a 21-yard field goal in the second quarter after Duke attempted to make a first down with a fine kick on fourth and 23. He broke the record on the last play of the half after fullback Jimmy Barber intercepted a pass and returned it 30 yards. Tech led at halftime 13-6.

The Yellow Jackets broke the game wide open in the third quarter as Lothridge opened up a pass attack.

He passed 27 yards to Gresham for one touchdown and threw 22 yards to end Dave Sexton for another.

The 6-1, 184-pound senior climaxed his best day of the season with a 33-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

North Carolina Shocks Georgia With 28-7 Win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Quarterback Junior Edge scored two touchdowns and passed for another as North Carolina shocked Georgia and ace passer Larry Rakestraw 28-7 before a chilled crowd of 34,000 Saturday.

Edge turned in perhaps the greatest game of his career as he riddled Georgia's defense with passes. He scored one touchdown from the Georgia 1, went over from the 8 for another and fired a 15-yard scoring pass to halfback Ronnie Jackson.

The Tar Heels, beaten only by Michigan State in seven games, rolled 57 yards in 10 plays for their opening touchdown in the first period. Fullback Eddie Kesler plunged over from the 2. Dave Braine kicked the first of four extra points.

Georgia, aided by penalties, came back to tie it 7-7 with fullback Marvin Hurst slashing over from the Tar Heel 2 on the opening play of the second period. The drive carried 65 yards.

The touchdown was set up on the 10 when interference was called on a pass from Rakestraw to end Pat Hodgson.

It was Georgia's second defeat compared with four victories and one tie.

Rakestraw, one of the country's top passers, could do little against the Tar Heels, who lead the nation in pass defense. He completed only seven of 18 for 58 yards. He had two intercepted.

Kentucky Bows To Miami 20-14 As Mira Fires

Miami scored its winning touchdown five minutes after the start of the fourth quarter after Kentucky halfback Darrell Cox fumbled on the Wildcat 24 and Miami tackle Tom Conners recovered.

Two plays later a pass interference call on a Kentucky player in the end zone gave Miami a first down on the Wildcat 1. One play later, Mira leaped over the top of the Kentucky line to give Miami its 20-14 margin.

Kentucky, which trailed 7-0 at halftime, came to life early in the second half and scoed two touchdowns on its first four offensive plays.

The first time Kentucky had the ball in the third quarter Cox went 53 yards for a touchdown with 13:30 to go. John Andrighetti made the extra point to tie it up.

Mira completed 21 of 36 passes for 223 yards. The win made Miami's season record 3-3. Kentucky is now 2-5.

Demons Defeat Appalachian 11

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — Northwestern Louisiana moved over land and in the air to down Appalachian (N.C.) State 33-20 Saturday night.

Glenn Talbert, NSC's leading rusher with 98 yards on six carries, caught two touchdown passes and broke away on a 62-yard run to spearhead the victory.

Larry Lawing was the key ma for Appalachian as he scored twice on runs of 6 and 1 yard. Lawing, Appalachian's top ball carrier, picked up 39 yards on 10 carries.

NSC held Appalachian to 71 yards rushing and 100 yards passing.

Tupawek Club Shows Movies In Public Meet

Tupawek Bowmen will present two motion pictures as a feature of their regular meeting Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at the First National Bank of West Monroe.

The other, "Bowhunter's Safari," features Fred Bear, internationally known archer, hunting antelope in Africa and an archery contest with pygmies of the Congo.

The meeting is open to the public.

AT SOLDIER FIELD

Ken Waldrop Spurs Army To 14-10 Win Over Cadets

CHICAGO (AP) — Ken Waldrop returned a punt 78 yards and set up one touchodwn, then smashed 17 yards for the winning touchdown with 1½ minutes left giving Army a 14-10 victory over the Air Force Saturday before a Soldier Field crowd of 76,660.

The senior halfback pounded across from the one-yard line in the third quarter, putting the Cadets ahead 7-3, after returning a punt 78 yards.

Then, after Terry Isaacson had directed a 70-yard touchdown march in the fourth quarter for the Air Force, Waldrop led the Cadets in a 65-yard do-or-die drive for the stirring triumph.

President Kennedy had to cancel his plans to attend the spectacle because of pressing duties in Washington, but a corps of 5,000 Cadets — 2,500 from each academy — put on a colorful show for the huge crowd before the game and at half time.

Army captured its sixth victory against one loss while Air Force suffered its third loss against four victories.

Until the second half explosion by Waldrop, Army had spent a frustrating first half, in which the Air Force took a 3-0 lead although held to only 43 yards gained, all on the ground.

BAYLOR-TEXAS NEXT

Trull And Company Win In Final Period

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Baylor's Don Trull picked Texas Christian to pieces Saturday in one of his typical fourth-quarter finishes that left Baylor the winner 32-13.

The Baylor victory, combined with a Texas win over Southern Methodist, makes next week's Baylor-Texas game at Austin one that can be labelled the battle for the Southwest Conference championship and a Cotton Bowl bid on New Year's.

Texas Christian led 13-12 at the end of the third period after Baylor gambled on a go-for-broke conversion for two points that failed.

Then Trull brought the Bears from behind by engineering three touchdowns in the final quarter.

The play that brought the crowd to its feet with less than three minutes remaining was a pass interception by Lawrence Elkins on the Baylor 26.

He ran the ball back 69 yards to the Texas Christian 5, where Kent Nix knocked him out of bounds. It was an anti-climax when Trull skirted the Baylor line to score on the next play.

Trull ran for three touchdowns and passed for another to shake the sound TCU team to its foundations. His passing yardage totaled 273 yards.

Elkins, the No. 1 target of the Baylor hurler's passes, caught 10 for 116 yards.

Texas Christian showed a flash of brilliance when Marvin Chipman ran 54 yards for one tally. Larry Bulaich took a pass from Gray Mills for the other Horned Frog score.

MR. EVERYTHING'S DAY

Lothridge Leads Tech To Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Quarterback Billy Lothridge, Georgia Tech's "Mr. Everything," ran, kicked and passed the Yellow Jackets to a 30-6 victory over the Duke Blue Devils Saturday.

Lothridge broke the national NCAA career record for field goals, formerly held by Ed Dyas of Auburn, in kicking a 38-yarder against the wind in the last second of the first half. It was the 18th of his career and second of the game.

Lothridge threw two touchdown passes, kicked three field goals and three extra points, and harassed Duke on the run or pass option play. He averaged 46 yards punting and added a 61-yard quick kick.

Tech got off to a sluggish start and Duke scored first in the opening period. Quarterback Scotty Glacken sparked the 64-yard drive. Halfback John Lucas scored the touchdown on a four-yard end sweep.

Halfback Johnny Gresham got Tech started with a 38-yard run in the second quarter. Lothridge set up the touchdown with a 12-yard pass to end Billy Martin and fullback Ray Mendheim swept around right end for five yards and the score. Lothridge kicked the point.

Lothridge tied Dyas' record with a 21-yard field goal in the second quarter after Duke attempted to make a first down with a fine kick on fourth and 23. He broke the record on the last play of the half after fullback Jimmy Barber intercepted a pass and returned it 30 yards. Tech led at halftime 13-6.

The Yellow Jackets broke the game wide open in the third quarter as Lothridge opened up a pass attack.

He passed 27 yards to Gresham for one touchdown and threw 22 yards to end Dave Sexton for another.

The 6-1, 184-pound senior climaxed his best day of the season with a 33-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

North Carolina Shocks Georgia With 28-7 Win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Quarterback Junior Edge scored two touchdowns and passed for another as North Carolina shocked Georgia and ace passer Larry Rakestraw 28-7 before a chilled crowd of 34,000 Saturday.

Edge turned in perhaps the greatest game of his career as he riddled Georgia's defense with passes. He scored one touchdown from the Georgia 1, went over from the 8 for another and fired a 15-yard scoring pass to halfback Ronnie Jackson.

The Tar Heels, beaten only by Michigan State in seven games, rolled 57 yards in 10 plays for their opening touchdown in the first period. Fullback Eddie Kesler plunged over from the 2. Dave Braine kicked the first of four extra points.

Georgia, aided by penalties, came back to tie it 7-7 with fullback Marvin Hurst slashing over from the Tar Heel 2 on the opening play of the second period. The drive carried 65 yards.

The touchdown was set up on the 10 when interference was called on a pass from Rakestraw to end Pat Hodgson.

It was Georgia's second defeat compared with four victories and one tie.

Rakestraw, one of the country's top passers, could do little against the Tar Heels, who lead the nation in pass defense. He completed only seven of 18 for 58 yards. He had two intercepted.

Demons Defeat Appalachian 11

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — Northwestern Louisiana moved over land and in the air to down Appalachian (N.C.) State 33-20 Saturday night.

Glenn Talbert, NSC's leading rusher with 98 yards on six carries, caught two touchdown passes and broke away on a 62-yard run to spearhead the victory.

Larry Lawing was the key ma for Appalachian as he scored twice on runs of 6 and 1 yard. Lawing, Appalachian's top ball carrier, picked up 39 yards on 10 carries.

NSC held Appalachian to 71 yards rushing and 100 yards passing.

Kentucky Bows To Miami 20-14 As Mira Fires

Miami scored its winning touchdown five minutes after the start of the fourth quarter after Kentucky halfback Darrell Cox fumbled on the Wildcat 24 and Miami tackle Tom Conners recovered.

Two plays later a pass interference call on a Kentucky player in the end zone gave Miami a first down on the Wildcat 1. One play later, Mira leaped over the top of the Kentucky line to give Miami its 20-14 margin.

Kentucky, which trailed 7-0 at halftime, came to life early in the second half and scoed two touchdowns on its first four offensive plays.

The first time Kentucky had the ball in the third quarter Cox went 53 yards for a touchdown with 13:30 to go. John Andrighetti made the extra point to tie it up.

Mira completed 21 of 36 passes for 223 yards. The win made Miami's season record 3-3. Kentucky is now 2-5.

Tupawek Club Shows Movies In Public Meet

Tupawek Bowmen will present two motion pictures as a feature of their regular meeting Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at the First National Bank of West Monroe.

The other, "Bowhunter's Safari," features Fred Bear, internationally known archer, hunting antelope in Africa and an archery contest with pygmies of the Congo.

The meeting is open to the public.

Ken Waldrop Spurs Army To 14-10 Win Over Cadets

CHICAGO (AP) — Ken Waldrop returned a punt 78 yards and set up one touchodwn, then smashed 17 yards for the winning touchdown with 1½ minutes left giving Army a 14-10 victory over the Air Force Saturday before a Soldier Field crowd of 76,660.

The senior halfback pounded across from the one-yard line in the third quarter, putting the Cadets ahead 7-3, after returning a punt 78 yards.

Then, after Terry Isaacson had directed a 70-yard touchdown march in the fourth quarter for the Air Force, Waldrop led the Cadets in a 65-yard do-or-die drive for the stirring triumph.

President Kennedy had to cancel his plans to attend the spectacle because of pressing duties in Washington, but a corps of 5,000 Cadets — 2,500 from each academy — put on a colorful show for the huge crowd before the game and at half time.

Army captured its sixth victory against one loss while Air Force suffered its third loss against four victories.

Until the second half explosion by Waldrop, Army had spent a frustrating first half, in which the Air Force took a 3-0 lead although held to only 43 yards gained, all on the ground.

Bart Holaday booted a 36-yard field goal for the lead after Joe O'Gorman had intercepted one of Carl Stichweh's passes. A pass interference penalty helped the Falcons get the ball to the Army 21 before Holaday's field goal.

U.S. Tax Cut To Influence Future Economic Policies

WASHINGTON — The succuss or failure of the Kennedy Administration's tax reduction program will exert a major influence of future government methods of economic stabilization.

If the public accepts the principle of reducing taxes to promote economic growth — the principle embodied in the tax bill now in a Senate committee — it could provide government officials with a new method of countering recessions. Moreover, should a major economic stimulus result from enactment of the tax bill, it would be used as an argument for further innovation with tax policy to smooth fluctuations in the nation's economy.

These implications of the $11.1 billion tax reduction bill have been little discussed, partly because the implications would not be evident in the immediate future and partly because the Administration apparently fears a hostile public reaction to such an economic role for the Federal Government.

But the principle reason for overlooking the issue appears to be that the battle over the tax bill has been joined on the immediate and practical grounds of economic prosperity.

ECONOMIC GROWTH

Administration spokesmen have repeatedly argued that tax reduction is necessary to free the economy from five years of inadequate growth. They also assert that a recession in the near future is more likely than not in the absence of tax cuts.

Opponents reply with an equally practical theme: taxes must not be lowered with a corresponding cut in Government expenditures. The opposition to rising expenditures has been the principle hinderance to quick passage of the bill.

PLANNED DEFICITS

Some opponents, particularly Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.), also challenge the Administration on other grounds. Curtis asserts that President Kennedy "is advancing a new and untried fiscal theory for the United States, the theory of deficit financing, the theory of planned deficits."

Curtis chides the Administration for refusing to talk about planned deficits despite Mr. Kennedy's June 1962 speech at Yale University in which he called for a national debate — free from political cliches — about the Federal Government's size and fiscal policies.

Although the Administration has not chosen to debate the tax and spending issues on the grounds that Curtis would like, it is obvious that the fiscal 1964 budget contains a planned deficit. When Mr. Kennedy submitted the budget to Congress last January, he made no pretense that revenues would be sufficient to equal the expenditures he considered necessary in fiscal 1964.

STIMULATION

The Administration's fiscal policies have been aimed at expanding economic activity. Essentially, the federal budget deficit means the Government seeks to stimulate demand in the economy by spending more than it is taking out in tax revenues.

Government spending to stimulate lagging private demand has attained increasing public acceptance since New Deal days. But in the postwar era, Administrations have not deliberately undertaken deficit spending plans as an expansionary device for the economy.

In this regard, history probably will credit the Kennedy Administration with breaking new economic ground.

The Kennedy economists must also take the responsibility for deliberately adding tax policy to the Government's chest of tools for tinkering with the nation's economic mechanism. The burden of responsibility is made all the greater by combining deficit spending with tax reduction.

TAX REDUCTIONS

The U.S. has had postwar experiences with tax reductions (1948 and 1954), but they were viewed as tax reforms and not as economic stabilization measures. Nevertheless, many economists credit those tax reductions with softening recessions in 1949 and 1953 - 54.

The use of tax policy to influence the nation's economy was discussed in the Eisenhower Administration and in Congress at the time of the 1957-58 recession. Again in the summer of 1962, when it was feared the recovery from the 1960 - 61 recession was slowing, there was talk of a "quickie" tax cut. No action was proposed at either time.

FUTURE POLICIES

Public acceptance of the tax reduction principle contained in the bill now before Congress would increase the likelihood of fiscal policy being used more in the future to reduce fluctuations in the economy.

The economy already has a number of automatic stabilizers that work without the need for policy decisions by officials. The most important ones are the personal and corporate income taxes and unemployment compensation.

If, as in the past, the nation moves toward more sophisticated methods of stabilization, the next step may be in the direction of temporary fluctations in the tax level in response to changing economic conditions.

President Kennedy already has advanced one proposal. He asked Congress in 1962 for standby discretionary authority to cut personal income taxes a maximum of 5 percentage points for six months, with the right to extend the cut another six months. Congress would have the right to veto any such reduction.

Congress, jealous of its tax-writing authority, did not even consider the proposal.

What has been called the "puritan ethic" opposition of many Americans to cutting taxes while the federal budget is unbalanced suggests that the economists who favor new innovations with economic stabilization have yet to win general acceptance for their views.

For this reason, the success or failure of the Kennedy Administration tax program in achieving economic growth undoubtedly will have an important influence when new economic stabilization policies are debated in future years.

Columbia Negro Hurt In Mishap

A 59-year-old Columbia Negro sustained minor injuries Saturday when he collided with an auto while crossing DeSiard Street.

E. P. Partman, of P. O. Box 277, was rushed to St. Francis hospital for emergency treatment after he reportedly ran in to the left front fender of a car driven east on DeSiard Street.

Monroe police said Partman ran from behind a car which was stopped for a red light on DeSiard Street, 50 feet north of the Rose Oil Service Station, and hit a vehicle driven by Joseph Jones Jr., 28, Negro, of 1206 Rogers St., Monroe. Jones attempted to stop and avoid hitting Partman, and police did not file charges against him. The accident occurred at 12:41 p.m.

Air Force Band To Open Tech Concert Season

The colorful United States Air Force Band and Singing Sergeants open the 1963-64 season for the Louisiana Tech Concert Association Monday.

Previously in 1956 and in 1959 this fine service organization appeared with great success on the LTCA series. Its highly diversified program has been so popular with the Louisiana Tech student body that it is necessary to present the 2:45 o'clock matinee in Memorial Gymnasium. The public membership concert will be held in Howard Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Both programs will run the gamut from stirring classical and military band music, through impressive glee club numbers, to varied instrumental and vocal solos. The great variety is emphasized by the fact tistthat Sergeant Robert Barlow, artist on the harp which is rarely associated with band music, will present solos at both performances.

Because the LTCA series was completely sold out weeks ago on a season basis, no single admission tickets will be sold at the box office.

Monroe CPA's To Host Area Bankers Nov. 7

The Monroe Chapter of the Louisiana Society of Certified Public Accountants will be host to Bankers in Northeast Louisiana at their monthly meeting Thursday November 7, at 6:30 p.m. at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club according to Harry G. Frazer, Sr. chairman of the meeting.

The program will consist of a panel discussion. The speaker representing the bankers will be Roy Post, statement analyst, Central Savings Bank and Trust Company of Monroe. Arthur Hollins, III, C. P. A. from Lake Charles, state chairman of the committee on Cooperation with Bankers will be speaker for the CPA's.

The meeting is an annual affair and has attracted as many as seventy-five bankers. The program has all indication of being very intersting as both men are considered experts in their field. Any banker who has not made reservations should contact Frazer.

New Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Now—Chevy spirit in a new kind of car!

We built this one to do a lot more than just stand around looking beautiful. Held its weight down in the 3,000-pound range. Then built four lusty engines for it—two sixes and two V8's—with output all the way up to 220 horses*!

And if that combination of modest weight and potent power gives you the idea that this is one frisky car indeed, you've got the right idea.

You've also got a roomy car with a generous amount of space for legs, hips, shoulders, hats and luggage. Yet its 115-inch wheelbase keeps it highly maneuverable in traffic and very easy to park.

With its Full Coil suspension, it's got a ride that reminds you of the Jet-smooth kind the way it muffles noise and cushions bumps.

And the fine hand of Body by Fisher craftsmen shows up beneath this one's suave good looks, too. Just listen to the solid thunk of a door closing or look at the neat seams and smooth metalwork. You'll see what we mean.

Sound good so far? There's more. Like the fact that Chevelle comes in three series with eleven models—convertibles, sport coupes, sedans, wagons, even Super Sport models with front bucket seats. Like the fact that (and see if this doesn't strike you as one of the nicest surprises of all) the new Chevelle comes at an easy-to-take price!

U.S. Tax Cut To Influence Future Economic Policies

WASHINGTON — The success or failure of the Kennedy Administration's tax reduction program will exert a major influence of future government methods of economic stabilization.

If the public accepts the principle of reducing taxes to promote economic growth — the principle embodied in the tax bill now in a Senate committee — it could provide government officials with a new method of countering recessions. Moreover, should a major economic stimulus result from enactment of the tax bill, it would be used as an argument for further innovation with tax policy to smooth fluctuations in the nation's economy.

These implications of the $11.1 billion tax reduction bill have been little discussed, partly because the implications would not be evident in the immediate future and partly because the Administration apparently fears a hostile public reaction to such an economic role for the Federal Government.

But the principle reason for overlooking the issue appears to be that the battle over the tax bill has been joined on the immediate and practical grounds of economic prosperity.

ECONOMIC GROWTH

Administration spokesmen have repeatedly argued that tax reduction is necessary to free the economy from five years of inadequate growth. They also assert that a recession in the near future is more likely than not in the absence of tax cuts.

Opponents reply with an equally practical theme: taxes must not be lowered with a corresponding cut in Government expenditures. The opposition to rising expenditures has been the principle hinderance to quick passage of the bill.

PLANNED DEFICITS

Some opponents, particularly Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.), also challenge the Administration on other grounds. Curtis asserts that President Kennedy "is advancing a new and untried fiscal theory for the United States, the theory of deficit financing, the theory of planned deficits."

Curtis chides the Administration for refusing to talk about planned deficits despite Mr. Kennedy's June 1962 speech at Yale University in which he called for a national debate — free from political cliches — about the Federal Government's size and fiscal policies.

Although the Administration has not chosen to debate the tax and spending issues on the grounds that Curtis would like, it is obvious that the fiscal 1964 budget contains a planned deficit. When Mr. Kennedy submitted the budget to Congress last January, he made no pretense that revenues would be sufficient to equal the expenditures he considered necessary in fiscal 1964.

STIMULATION

The Administration's fiscal policies have been aimed at expanding economic activity. Essentially, the federal budget deficit means the Government seeks to stimulate demand in the economy by spending more than it is taking out in tax revenues.

Government spending to stimulate lagging private demand has attained increasing public acceptance since New Deal days. But in the postwar era, Administrations have not deliberately undertaken deficit spending plans as an expansionary device for the economy.

In this regard, history probably will credit the Kennedy Administration with breaking new economic ground.

The Kennedy economists must also take the responsibility for deliberately adding tax policy to the Government's chest of tools for tinkering with the nation's economic mechanism. The burden of responsibility is made all the greater by combining deficit spending with tax reduction.

TAX REDUCTIONS

The U.S. has had postwar experiences with tax reductions (1948 and 1954), but they were viewed as tax reforms and not as economic stabilization measures. Nevertheless, many economists credit those tax reductions with softening recessions in 1949 and 1953 - 54.

The use of tax policy to influence the nation's economy was discussed in the Eisenhower Administration and in Congress at the time of the 1957-58 recession. Again in the summer of 1962, when it was feared the recovery from the 1960 - 61 recession was slowing, there was talk of a "quickie" tax cut. No action was proposed at either time.

FUTURE POLICIES

Public acceptance of the tax reduction principle contained in the bill now before Congress would increase the likelihood of fiscal policy being used more in the future to reduce fluctuations in the economy.

The economy already has a number of automatic stabilizers that work without the need for policy decisions by officials. The most important ones are the personal and corporate income taxes and unemployment compensation.

If, as in the past, the nation moves toward more sophisticated methods of stabilization, the next step may be in the direction of temporary fluctations in the tax level in response to changing economic conditions.

President Kennedy already has advanced one proposal. He asked Congress in 1962 for standby discretionary authority to cut personal income taxes a maximum of 5 percentage points for six months, with the right to extend the cut another six months. Congress would have the right to veto any such reduction.

Congress, jealous of its tax-writing authority, did not even consider the proposal.

What has been called the "puritan ethic" opposition of many Americans to cutting taxes while the federal budget is unbalanced suggests that the economists who favor new innovations with economic stabilization have yet to win general acceptance for their views.

For this reason, the success or failure of the Kennedy Administration tax program in achieving economic growth undoubtedly will have an important influence when new economic stabilization policies are debated in future years.

Columbia Negro Hurt In Mishap

A 59-year-old Columbia Negro sustained minor injuries Saturday when he collided with an auto while crossing DeSiard Street.

E. P. Partman, of P. O. Box 277, was rushed to St. Francis hospital for emergency treatment after he reportedly ran in to the left front fender of a car driven east on DeSiard Street.

Monroe police said Partman ran from behind a car which was stopped for a red light on DeSiard Street, 50 feet north of the Rose Oil Service Station, and hit a vehicle driven by Joseph Jones Jr., 28, Negro, of 1206 Rogers St., Monroe. Jones attempted to stop and avoid hitting Partman, and police did not file charges against him. The accident occurred at 12:41 p.m.

Susybelle Lyons Weds John Michael Gosslee

A wedding of interest throughout the state was that solemnized Saturday, November 2 which united in marriage Miss Susybelle Lyons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Havard Lyons Jr., and John Michael Gosslee, son of Dr. and Mrs. John Mason Gosslee, all of Shreveport.

Vows were exchanged at 7 p.m. in Saint Joseph's Catholic Church, Shreveport. Arrangements of pink Aristocrat roses were used on either side of the altar.

Mr. Lyons gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's long gown of white slipper satin, which terminated in a short train, was designed with a round neckline and self-covered buttons down the front. Her mantilla veil of heirloom Duchess lace fell from a tiny Dutch cap and she carried a bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Attending the bride were Miss Stafford Lyons as maid of honor and Miss Sally Scott Lyons, bridesmaid. Flower girls were Miss Laurie Wilkinson Lyons and Miss Marian Lyons. They wore identical gowns of rose petal pink silk organza over taffeta, with Empire bodices of matching velvet. Designed on princess lines the gowns featured back panels which fell to the hemline. Wreaths of pink elf Sweetheart roses formed their headpieces and they carried bouquets of pink Aristocrat and pink elf roses.

Stephen Marshall Stewart served as best man for Mr. Gosslee. Groomsmen -ushers were John Trichel Smith, William Kemp Brown, Charlton H. Lyons III and James Gosslee.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 7130 Gilbert Drive, which was decorated throughout with pink and red roses. Central decor for the reception table was an arrangement of pink Aristocrat roses and smilax flanked by tapers in silver candelabra.

The couple will be at home at 406 E. State Street in Baton Rouge.

Attending from Monroe were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cummings and Mrs. Flora Potts, who went to Shreveport Thursday to participate in prenuptial courtesies prior to the Saturday vows. The bride is a cousin of Mr. Cummings.

Winter Coats Offer Elegance In Lush Fibers

Viewing the exciting collection of coats this season, all unmistakably Fall '63, women will be hard - put to limit their choice to just one.

Coats range from sportive, colorful mesh tweeds, loops, fleeces and mohairs to full-length evening coats in opulent meltons.

There are cape - coats with military bearing, full coats, oval shapes. On the scene, are sophisticated afternoon coats of crisp - faced worsteds, sometimes with Spanish - influenced braid and passementerie buttons.

Untrimmed or lavishly furred styles are equally fashionable — and for warmth and elegance combined, there are the inside - story coats. Either ample of slender, they are lined with muskrat, opossum, mink, nutria — and even luxurious sable. For the sportive - minded, linings are mink gills, ocelot or red fox.

Textures provide magnificent drama for subtle shaping. Lush furry tweeds in monotone or combinations of amethyst and gold . . . forest green with deep pink. Shetlands, meltons, kid mohairs and all the precious fur fibers are fashionable. Dressy and handsome are the new worsteds and among these, Anglo features a textures worsted with surface interest and body to give fashion a crip, fresh outlook.

Checks range from miniature to checker size — and double coatings star with one weave or color superimposed over another in deep colors and rich textures.

Untrimmed coats are most elegant when they achieve their shape with subtle seaming — sometimes gently indented in front and free in back, oval shaped or low-belted in the manner of the twenties. Seaming is a major fashion note this season, and definitely it is important to watch for it signifies careful tailoring.

Alabama Girl To Wed Herschel Lee Abbott Jr.

Mr. Abbott is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Dred Jones of Arkadelphia, Arkansas and Mrs. Charles Irvin Abbott and the late Mr. Abbott of Hampton, Arkansas. He attended the University of Birmingham, England and is a graduate of Tulane University, New Orleans, and is presently attending the Tulane University School of Law.

The wedding will take place in December in New Orleans.

MISS SYLVIA MARIE MALBROUGH

Sylvia Malbrough, Fiance Announce Wedding Plans

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvest J. Malbrough of Waterproof, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Sylvia Marie Malbrough to Second Lieutenant Charles B. Pickell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pickell of New Orleans.

Miss Malbrough graduated from Waterproof high school and received her degree from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge in January 1963. While at L. S. U. the bride-elect served as president of her social sorority, Alpha Chi Omega, was a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron and Delta Gamma Delta honorary fraternities and was selected outstanding senior in the college of agriculture for 1963.

Mr. Pickell finished Murphy high school in Mobile, Alabama and graduated in January 1963 from Louisiana State University, where he was a member of Acacia social fraternity. He is presently stationed at Laredo Air Force Base, Loredo, Texas.

The wedding will take place in Mid-November at Laredo Air Force Base Chapel.

Area Couple Wed In Vidalia

Miss Gail Patricia Pansano, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Pansano and the late Whitney J. Pansano of Baton Rouge, became the bride of James H. Trindle Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Trindle of Vidalia on October 25.

Vows were exchanged in Vidalia in the presence of the immediate families. Serving as attendants for the couple were Miss Karen Vails of Natchez and Bill Williams of Vidalia.

Mr. and Mrs. Trindle have established a home in Vidalia where both are employed.

GLAMOR CONSCIOUS

Designer Teal Traina says it isn't true that women across the country aren't as fashion conscious as those in New York. He based his say-so on a pulse taken while staging a show in Oklahoma City. "A fashion conscious woman today isn't a mouse," he said. "She visualizes herself as a tender trap — as glamorous as possible."

MISS GWENDOLYN NEWCOMER

Gwendolyn Newcomer To Be December Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Otho L. Newcomer, 1212 Tulane Street, West Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Gwendolyn Newcomer of Shreveport, to Jimmie Nolan Smith, also of Shreveport. The future bridegroom is the son of Floyd Smith of Cotton Valley.

The couple plans to establish a home in Monroe following their marriage.

Susybelle Lyons Weds John Michael Gosslee

A wedding of interest throughout the state was that solemnized Saturday, November 2 which united in marriage Miss Susybelle Lyons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Havard Lyons Jr., and John Michael Gosslee, son of Dr. and Mrs. John Mason Gosslee, all of Shreveport.

Vows were exchanged at 7 p.m. in Saint Joseph's Catholic Church, Shreveport. Arrangements of pink Aristocrat roses were used on either side of the altar.

Mr. Lyons gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's long gown of white slipper satin, which terminated in a short train, was designed with a round neckline and self-covered buttons down the front. Her mantilla veil of heirloom Duchess lace fell from a tiny Dutch cap and she carried a bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Attending the bride were Miss Stafford Lyons as maid of honor and Miss Sally Scott Lyons, bridesmaid. Flower girls were Miss Laurie Wilkinson Lyons and Miss Marian Lyons. They wore identical gowns of rose petal pink silk organza over taffeta, with Empire bodices of matching velvet. Designed on princess lines the gowns featured back panels which fell to the hemline. Wreaths of pink elf Sweetheart roses formed their headpieces and they carried bouquets of pink Aristocrat and pink elf roses.

Stephen Marshall Stewart served as best man for Mr. Gosslee. Groomsmen -ushers were John Trichel Smith, William Kemp Brown, Charlton H. Lyons III and James Gosslee.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 7130 Gilbert Drive, which was decorated throughout with pink and red roses. Central decor for the reception table was an arrangement of pink Aristocrat roses and smilax flanked by tapers in silver candelabra.

The couple will be at home at 406 E. State Street in Baton Rouge.

Attending from Monroe were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cummings and Mrs. Flora Potts, who went to Shreveport Thursday to participate in prenuptial courtesies prior to the Saturday vows. The bride is a cousin of Mr. Cummings.

Winter Coats Offer Elegance In Lush Fibers

Viewing the exciting collection of coats this season, all unmistakably Fall '63, women will be hard - put to limit their choice to just one.

Coats range from sportive, colorful mesh tweeds, loops, fleeces and mohairs to full-length evening coats in opulent meltons.

There are cape - coats with military bearing, full coats, oval shapes. On the scene, are sophisticated afternoon coats of crisp - faced worsteds, sometimes with Spanish - influenced braid and passementerie buttons.

Untrimmed or lavishly furred styles are equally fashionable — and for warmth and elegance combined, there are the inside - story coats. Either ample of slender, they are lined with muskrat, opossum, mink, nutria — and even luxurious sable. For the sportive - minded, linings are mink gills, ocelot or red fox.

Textures provide magnificent drama for subtle shaping. Lush furry tweeds in monotone or combinations of amethyst and gold . . . forest green with deep pink. Shetlands, meltons, kid mohairs and all the precious fur fibers are fashionable. Dressy and handsome are the new worsteds and among these, Anglo features a textures worsted with surface interest and body to give fashion a crip, fresh outlook.

Checks range from miniature to checker size — and double coatings star with one weave or color superimposed over another in deep colors and rich textures.

Untrimmed coats are most elegant when they achieve their shape with subtle seaming — sometimes gently indented in front and free in back, oval shaped or low-belted in the manner of the twenties. Seaming is a major fashion note this season, and definitely it is important to watch for it signifies careful tailoring.

The wedding will take place in Mid-November at Laredo Air Force Base Chapel.

HOT WATER

For cottons and linens which are white or color-fast, the hotter the suds and rinses the better. Warm water is preferable for non-fast colors.

Area Couple Wed In Vidalia

Miss Gail Patricia Pansano, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Pansano and the late Whitney J. Pansano of Baton Rouge, became the bride of James H. Trindle Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Trindle of Vidalia on October 25.

Vows were exchanged in Vidalia in the presence of the immediate families. Serving as attendants for the couple were Miss Karen Vails of Natchez and Bill Williams of Vidalia.

Mr. and Mrs. Trindle have established a home in Vidalia where both are employed.

GLAMOR CONSCIOUS

Designer Teal Traina says it isn't true that women across the country aren't as fashion conscious as those in New York. He based his say-so on a pulse taken while staging a show in Oklahoma City. "A fashion conscious woman today isn't a mouse," he said. "She visualizes herself as a tender trap — as glamorous as possible."

R. G. Mitchell Claims Bride In New Jersey

In a ceremony performed at St. Hedwig Church, Trenton, New Jersey, Miss Rita Sefransky of that city, became the bride of Ronald Gene Mitchell, West Monroe, presently stationed at McGuire Air Force Base in Trenton. Father Casimin Ladzinski performed the double ring vows at 9 a. m. on October 19.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sefransky of Trenton and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Oscar E. Mitchell, 812 North Fifth, West Monroe.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a short gown of white silk taffeta, styled with round neckline and three-quarter sleeves. A modified drape effect defined the belled skirt. Her tiered veil of illusion was attached to a headpiece of pearls and crystals and she carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Frances Sefransky served as maid of honor and only attendant for her sister. She wore a gown of blue silk taffeta, styled with street length belled skirt, and a tiered blue veil caught to a headpiece of blue crystals. Her bouquet was of pink carnations.

Serving as best man for Mr. Mitchell was Frank Buddy Sefransky Jr., brother of the bride.

Mrs. Sefransky chose for her daughter's wedding a gown of royal blue crepe with blue velvet hat, white gloves, black accessories and a white rose corsage. Mrs. Mitchell, mother of the groom, was wearing an aqua wool sheath with white gloves and black accessories. Her hat was a circlet of tiny blue roses and her corsage was of white roses.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception in their home. The bride's table held a central arrangement of carnations and roses with the tiered wedding cake at one end balanced by the punch bowl opposite.

For a wedding trip to Wildwood, New Jersey the bride was wearing a brown tweed suit with brown accessories. The couple has established a home at 905 Genesse Street in Trenton, N.J., where Mr. Mitchell, a graduate of West Monroe high school, is stationed at McGuire Air Force Base as an airman second class.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, parents of the bridegroom, have just returned from attending the wedding and prenuptial festivities.

Tillman-Grubbs Vows Read In Baptist Church

First Baptist Church Chapel, West Monroe was scene of the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Susan Grubbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Grubbs, 800 South Third, West Monroe, and Charles Tillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Tillman, 1112 South Fourth.

Dr. Clifton Tennison performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. Thursday, October 24, following a program of organ music by Tommy Haye. Baskets of white gladioli and branched candelabra holding lighted tapers formed a setting for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a short gown of white nylon with lace bodice and sleeves. A crown of pearls and sequins held her short veil of illusion and white brocade pumps completed her costume. The bride carried a bonquet of white carnations with velvet leaves, heart - shaped pearls and long white streamers, atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Tommy Haye, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a pale pink nylon frock with a brief veiled headdress and a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. Tillman, father of the bridegroom, served as best man and ushers were Floyd Kindell and Ralph Taylor.

The bride's table was covered with a pale pink net overskirt, garlanded with pink ribbons and centered with an arrangement of gladioli. The tiered wedding cake, decorated with pink roses was served with pink punch.

For a short wedding trip to Shreveport the bride wore a beige wool suit with brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The couple is now at home at 4006 DeSiard.

Hallowe'en, that night when goblins walk and witches ride, is fast becoming a major holiday on the Twin Cities social calendar. Several parties, large and small, were planned for various age groups during the week preceding Thursday night itself.

Last Saturday night grown-ups attended a party at Highland Park Country club, with the Hallowe'en theme carried out in decorations and costumes. Traditional motifs in orange and black cutouts of bats and skeletons were used on clubroom walls. Shocks of corn stood in the corners of the ballroom, which was highlighted by dozens of Jack-o-lanterns suspended from the ceiling above the dance floor. Lighted Jack-o-lanterns centered each table around the room.

Decorations were done by FLORA WILKINS, while A. C. WILLIAMS was chairman of the dance. Approximately two hundred danced to the music of Jack Hollingsworth and his band between the hours of eight and midnight.

Best costume prizes were awarded to JEAN and DUKE YOUNG, a pair of werewolves, with second place going to EARLINE and JACK O'NEAL, beatniks . . . Others we noted included ANNA JOYCE and A. C. WILLIAMS, PHYLLIS and BILL EYRE as a group of penguins . . . CHARLES KITCHINGHAM as a gambler, with wife, JANICE, a dance hall girl . . .LOYCE and JOE LAY, who were dressed as clowns, had as their guests LUCILLE and MATT CARROLL of Ruston. Lucille came as a witch, complete with broom; while Matt was costumed as Dracula.

The under-ten age group was invited when Bayou DeSiard country club planned a Hallowe'en party for children of members Thursday afternoon. Decorations in the teen - age young people's room included shucks of corn, lighted Jack-o-lanterns, and seasonal cut-outs. The children bobbed for apples, and went fishing for favors. MICKEY MASUR was winner of the pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey game.

Prizes for best costumes went to SALLY SHAFTO, dressed as The Blob, most unique; and second place, STACY WARDLAW as Peter Pan . . . Stacy's sister KELLY was also outstanding in a court jester's outfit consisting of a red felt tunic worn over black tights bound at the knees with red ball fringe . . . LARE WOODS was a gypsy with a full skirt of floating squares of vari-colored chiffon . . . Another gypsy was CYNTHIA GEISLER, whose little sister LEE ANN was a ballerina in golden tutu. Brother JIM was an astronaut . . . SUE BURKHALTER was a beatnik . . . MARION McHENRY, a skeleton . . . and PAIGE LEDOUX, a pink rabbit . . . HARO WOODS was a stunning pirate in black patent leather suit and three cornered hat . . . A real Spaniard was INDIA CUTLER, whose black suit was covered with white braid . . . LESLIE WORTHEN was a lion, and sister WENDY a scarecrow.

Private parties this week also celebrated Hallowe'en. One of the most lavish of treaters is BLANCHE OLIVER, who invites small goblins and large parents in for refreshments. Blanche's annual open house at her home on Bayou Lane finds the hostess receiving in costume: this year as Queen of Hearts. Walls of glass in living and dining rooms are covered with cutouts and silhouettes of Hallowe'en witches, ghosts, and Harvest moons.

In the dining room, the table is centered with a pumpkin wreathed in pyracantha branches and flanked with burning candles. Young guests are served punch from the bowl at one end of the table. Opposite stands the large popcorn bowl, and around the sides of the table are trays of treats: sticks of gum, cookies, individually wrapped candies. This party is always a highlight of the evening for those lucky enough to go treating here.

Another annual party is planned each year on a block running from Island Drive through to Pargoud boulevard. This year the affair was given by ANN WESTROM and TEE-DEE DIXON in the Westrom home. Tables were set up in the drive, each decorated with a jack-o-lantern. Hot dog supper was served, with cupcakes, to about sixty-five guests, both grown-ups and children.

On his fifth birthday Tuesday, JAY STEPHEN RIVERS celebrated with a Hallowe'en party in the young people's room at Bayou DeSiard country club. Balloons and Hallowe'en cutouts decorated the walls of the room. Various games were played with everyone winning prizes for bowling, target games, go fishing, hobby horse riding. Two pumpkins filled with yellow chrysanthemums and pyracantha branches stood on the refreshment table. The birthday cake, iced in orange and decorated with black cats and witches, was served with ice cream to about forty children.

Visitors from Goshen, Indiana, were honored when HELEN and FOSTER WALLACE entertained with open house Wednesday evening. Honorees were IRMA and ALVIN SCHEIDT, houseguests of the Wallaces. As she greeted her guests, Helen was attired in a brocade dress in shades of blue styled with straight skirt and side drape. Irma wore an after-five dress of eggshell brocaded with gold threads. Her corsage was a green orchid.

White carnations filled the silver and crystal epergne which decorated the dining table. The buffet included turkey, ham, hot tamale dip, liver pate, and clam dip. About two hundred guests called between seven and nine to meet the visitors.

Before the Revelers' dance last Friday night, ELEANOR and BILLY BROWN invited a few friends to drop by their house. Several lovely arrangements of fall foliage were noted in the decorations. On the hearth in the family room was a charcoal bucket filled with leaves: magnolia branches sprayed with copper and natural foliage. The dining table was centered with bronze chrysanthemums used with Indian corn, variegated foliage, and Jack-o-lantern candles.

A surprise housewarming honored the DOYLE HAMILTONS last Thursday evening. Guests descended bearing supper and many lovely house presents. The menu included fresh roast pork, chicken salad, assorted dips and relishes, and other pickup foods, with cookies and chocolate squares for dessert.

COMING EVENTS on the week's calendar include a showing of paintings by artists from the faculties of colleges and universities of Louisiana, to be held at the Art Center, 1504, Riverside Drive. The affair is being sponsored by JUNIOR CHARITY LEAGUE of Monroe and is to be opened at a tea being given by the League this afternoon between two and five, at the Center. The paintings will remain on exhibit for the next two weeks.

Members of Bayou DeSiard Country Club are anticipating the HOOTENANNY planned for this coming Saturday evening, November 9, at the club. A group of musicians from the college will provide the entertainment, and a special a la carte menu is being planned. The fun starts at 8.

New members of Ft. Miro chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will be introduced at the organizations' annual tea, to be held Saturday, November 9. This year's tea is planned at the home of VICKY HILL, 2305 Marie Place, between three and five.

First event of the year for Louisiana Tech Concert association is set for tomorrow, when the U.S. Air Force band will be heard in Howard auditorium, Ruston.

My candle burns at both ends;
It will not last the night;
But, ah, my foes, and oh, my friends—
It gives a lovely light!

Next, her "Midnight Oil":

Cut if you will, with Sleep's dull knife,
Each day to half its length, my friend—
The years that Time takes off my life,
He'll take from off the other end!

And then, at last, her "Grown-up":

Was it for this I uttered prayers.
And sobbed and cursed and kicked the stairs,
That now, domestic as a plate,
I should retire at half - past eight?

Entertaining At Home Is Current Trend

Perhaps in many towns entertaining has never come out of the home, but in larger cities where there are at least several elegant hotels, it has long been customary to hold parties in their ballrooms and smaller suites.

Now the trend is back to the home. By no accident, the trend coincides with the revival of lovely clothes for at-home. How is a woman going to wear those long-skirt outfits if she doesn't give her parties at home?

Guests also get a chance to show off party pajamas, Hongkong cheong-sans and shirt-top evening dresses which would otherwise go unseen amidst their own four walls.

This season in New York, the avant-garde thing for at-home parties is the dinner pajama, revived fetchingly from the Thirties. Bill Blass has a great success with his white crepe pajamas over which goes a sleeveless lazy mohair coat ruffled all around. Donald Brooks did very well with his ruffle-neck pajamas like a clown's costume, with gold taffeta coat.

In fact, the way at-home evening clothes are becoming more striking, it won't be long before everybody goes out to hotels again. Such clothes deserve more public viewing than amongst one's own little crowd.

Tillman-Grubbs Vows Read In Baptist Church

First Baptist Church Chapel, West Monroe was scene of the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Susan Grubbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Grubbs, 800 South Third, West Monroe, and Charles Tillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Tillman, 1112 South Fourth.

Dr. Clifton Tennison performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. Thursday, October 24, following a program of organ music by Tommy Haye. Baskets of white gladioli and branched candelabra holding lighted tapers formed a setting for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a short gown of white nylon with lace bodice and sleeves. A crown of pearls and sequins held her short veil of illusion and white brocade pumps completed her costume. The bride carried a bouquet of white carnations with velvet leaves, heart - shaped pearls and long white streamers, atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Tommy Haye, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a pale pink nylon frock with a brief veiled headdress and a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. Tillman, father of the bridegroom, served as best man and ushers were Floyd Kindell and Ralph Taylor.

The bride's table was covered with a pale pink net overskirt, garlanded with pink ribbons and centered with an arrangement of gladioli. The tiered wedding cake, decorated with pink roses was served with pink punch.

For a short wedding trip to Shreveport the bride wore a beige wool suit with brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The couple is now at home at 4006 DeSiard.

Hallowe'en, that night when goblins walk and witches ride, is fast becoming a major holiday on the Twin Cities social calendar. Several parties, large and small, were planned for various age groups during the week preceding Thursday night itself.

Last Saturday night grown-ups attended a party at Highland Park Country club, with the Hallowe'en theme carried out in decorations and costumes. Traditional motifs in orange and black cutouts of bats and skeletons were used on clubroom walls. Shocks of corn stood in the corners of the ballroom, which was highlighted by dozens of Jack-o-lanterns suspended from the ceiling above the dance floor. Lighted Jack-o-lanterns centered each table around the room.

Decorations were done by FLORA WILKINS, while A. C. WILLIAMS was chairman of the dance. Approximately two hundred danced to the music of Jack Hollingsworth and his band between the hours of eight and midnight.

Best costume prizes were awarded to JEAN and DUKE YOUNG, a pair of werewolves, with second place going to EARLINE and JACK O'NEAL, beatniks . . . Others we noted included ANNA JOYCE and A. C. WILLIAMS, PHYLLIS and BILL EYRE as a group of penguins . . . CHARLES KITCHINGHAM as a gambler, with wife, JANICE, a dance hall girl . . .LOYCE and JOE LAY, who were dressed as clowns, had as their guests LUCILLE and MATT CARROLL of Ruston. Lucille came as a witch, complete with broom; while Matt was costumed as Dracula.

The under-ten age group was invited when Bayou DeSiard country club planned a Hallowe'en party for children of members Thursday afternoon. Decorations in the teen - age young people's room included shucks of corn, lighted Jack-o-lanterns, and seasonal cut-outs. The children bobbed for apples, and went fishing for favors. MICKEY MASUR was winner of the pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey game.

Prizes for best costumes went to SALLY SHAFTO, dressed as The Blob, most unique; and second place, STACY WARDLAW as Peter Pan . . . Stacy's sister KELLY was also outstanding in a court jester's outfit consisting of a red felt tunic worn over black tights bound at the knees with red ball fringe . . . LARE WOODS was a gypsy with a full skirt of floating squares of vari-colored chiffon . . . Another gypsy was CYNTHIA GEISLER, whose little sister LEE ANN was a ballerina in golden tutu. Brother JIM was an astronaut . . . SUE BURKHALTER was a beatnik . . . MARION McHENRY, a skeleton . . . and PAIGE LEDOUX, a pink rabbit . . . HARO WOODS was a stunning pirate in black patent leather suit and three cornered hat . . . A real Spaniard was INDIA CUTLER, whose black suit was covered with white braid . . . LESLIE WORTHEN was a lion, and sister WENDY a scarecrow.

Refreshments were served from a T-shaped table which was covered with a white cloth accented by a black ribbon. On the ribbon stood Jack-o-lanterns and marshmallows decorated with faces. At each place were Trick or Treat bags of popcorn. Other refreshments included ice cream and cupcakes iced with Jack-o-lantern faces.

Private parties this week also celebrated Hallowe'en. One of the most lavish of treaters is BLANCHE OLIVER, who invites small goblins and large parents in for refreshments. Blanche's annual open house at her home on Bayou Lane finds the hostess receiving in costume: this year as Queen of Hearts. Walls of glass in living and dining rooms are covered with cutouts and silhouettes of Hallowe'en witches, ghosts, and Harvest moons.

In the dining room, the table is centered with a pumpkin wreathed in pyracantha branches and flanked with burning candles. Young guests are served punch from the bowl at one end of the table. Opposite stands the large popcorn bowl, and around the sides of the table are trays of treats: sticks of gum, cookies, individually wrapped candies. This party is always a highlight of the evening for those lucky enough to go treating here.

Another annual party is planned each year on a block running from Island Drive through to Pargoud boulevard. This year the affair was given by ANN WESTROM and TEE-DEE DIXON in the Westrom home. Tables were set up in the drive, each decorated with a jack-o-lantern. Hot dog supper was served, with cupcakes, to about sixty-five guests, both grown-ups and children.

On his fifth birthday Tuesday, JAY STEPHEN RIVERS celebrated with a Hallowe'en party in the young people's room at Bayou DeSiard country club. Balloons and Hallowe'en cutouts decorated the walls of the room. Various games were played with everyone winning prizes for bowling, target games, go fishing, hobby horse riding. Two pumpkins filled with yellow chrysanthemums and pyracantha branches stood on the refreshment table. The birthday cake, iced in orange and decorated with black cats and witches, was served with ice cream to about forty children.

Visitors from Goshen, Indiana, were honored when HELEN and FOSTER WALLACE entertained with open house Wednesday evening. Honorees were IRMA and ALVIN SCHEIDT, houseguests of the Wallaces. As she greeted her guests, Helen was attired in a brocade dress in shades of blue styled with straight skirt and side drape. Irma wore an after-five dress of eggshell brocaded with gold threads. Her corsage was a green orchid.

White carnations filled the silver and crystal epergne which decorated the dining table. The buffet included turkey, ham, hot tamale dip, liver pate, and clam dip. About two hundred guests called between seven and nine to meet the visitors.

Before the Revelers' dance last Friday night, ELEANOR and BILLY BROWN invited a few friends to drop by their house. Several lovely arrangements of fall foliage were noted in the decorations. On the hearth in the family room was a charcoal bucket filled with leaves: magnolia branches sprayed with copper and natural foliage. The dining table was centered with bronze chrysanthemums used with Indian corn, variegated foliage, and Jack-o-lantern candles.

A surprise housewarming honored the DOYLE HAMILTONS last Thursday evening. Guests descended bearing supper and many lovely house presents. The menu included fresh roast pork, chicken salad, assorted dips and relishes, and other pick-up foods, with cookies and chocolate squares for dessert.

COMING EVENTS on the week's calendar include a showing of paintings by artists from the faculties of colleges and universities of Louisiana, to be held at the Art Center, 1504, Riverside Drive. The affair is being sponsored by JUNIOR CHARITY LEAGUE of Monroe and is to be opened at a tea being given by the League this afternoon between two and five, at the Center. The paintings will remain on exhibit for the next two weeks.

Members of Bayou DeSiard Country Club are anticipating the HOOTENANNY planned for this coming Saturday evening, November 9, at the club. A group of musicians from the college will provide the entertainment, and a special a la carte menu is being planned. The fun starts at 8.

New members of Ft. Miro chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will be introduced at the organizations' annual tea, to be held Saturday, November 9. This year's tea is planned at the home of VICKY HILL, 2305 Marie Place, between three and five.

First event of the year for Louisiana Tech Concert association is set for tomorrow, when the U.S. Air Force band will be heard in Howard auditorium, Ruston.

My candle burns at both ends;
It will not last the night;
But, ah, my foes, and oh, my friends—
It gives a lovely light!

Next, her "Midnight Oil":

Cut if you will, with Sleep's dull knife,
Each day to half its length, my friend—
The years that Time takes off my life,
He'll take from off the other end!

And then, at last, her "Grown-up":

Was it for this I uttered prayers,
And sobbed and cursed and kicked the stairs,
That now, domestic as a plate,
I should retire at half - past eight?

Cotillion Club Holds Colorful Harvest Dance

Inaugurating a new season, members of the Cotillion Dance Club combined a Halloween and Harvest theme for their first dance of the year. The Redtops from Vicksburg, Miss., provided music for the informal affair held Saturday, October 26 at the Paragon Supper club from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Alternating at the door were the club officers, Mrs. Robert Lee Curry III, president; Mrs. Elton Upshaw Jr., dance chairman; Mrs. Robert Powell, treasurer and Mrs. William Mattison, membership chairman.

Orange and black crepe paper streamers were hung at the entrnce into the ballroom where a three - foot high witch presided near the guest book table. A huge pumpkin filled with chrysanthemums and variegated autumn foliage formed the central decor for the table which was illuminated by hurricane lamps.

Orange candles inside hurricane lamps glowed on tables arranged around the dance floor where members and guests were seated. Centering each table was an arrangement of pine branches, pine cones and marigolds. Cornstalks, bound by orange and black streamers stood at either end of the band stand, beneath which were cornucopias of autumn leaves and foliage. Spotlighted in the background was an oversized shimmering witch.

Members of the club include Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Angelini, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. John Birdsong, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. Armand Breard, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Buffington, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bunn, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chabot, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Cline, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Coon, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Corrent, Mr. and Mrs. Henson Coon Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Jake Coon, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crowe, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cudd, Mr. and Mrs. John Culpepper, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Curry III, Mr. and Mrs. Haydn Cutler, Mr. and Mrs. James Dennis.

Witches, Spooks Stalk At Revelers Club Dance

Lighted jack-o-lanterns in keeping with the Halloween theme prevailed throughout the Paragon Supper Club ballroom last Friday night for the Revelers Dance Club autumn dance. Music for dancing from 8 p.m. to midnight was provided by Phares Corder and his band.

Orange and black crepe paper streamers framed the entrance to the ballroom, to the left of which a member of the entertainment committee, dressed as a "spook," presided over the guest registry. Jack-o-lanterns, surrounded by pyracantha decorated the table. At opposite end of the room was a witch's table centered with a similar grinning pumpkin face and pyracantha, where witch's brew was served from a punch bowl by another member, garbed as a witch. Other members, dressed as witches and goblins greeted arriving guests.

Revelers were seated at long tables, bedecked with lighted jack-o-lanterns and garlands of pyrancantha. Corn stalks, a scarecrow and pumpkins were arranged at one end of the bandstand, with a sign above the scarecrow, labeled "Revelers Head Spook." Streamers of orange and black formed a background for the stage and band platform.

The decorating committee, headed by Mrs. Paul Ransom, was composed of Mrs. Robert Carter, Mrs. Jack Files, Mrs. Richard Pipes, Mrs. Alymer Montgomery Jr., Mrs. Wayne Woods, Mrs. T. O. Bancroft Jr. and Mrs. Ed Miller.

Heading the Revelers Dance club this year are Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Dixon Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ransom and Mr. and Mrs. Hillman Madison Jr.

Members in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Alleman, Mr. and Mrs. Tim Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Kent Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Bagwell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Downing, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Eunson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Files, Mr. and Mrs. Don Giffen, Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Huenefeld, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mabray, Mr. and Mrs. Hillman Madison Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Moore, Mr. and Mrs. John Mullens, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Neel, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Pipes, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pipes, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ransom, Mr. and Mrs. Lavelle Salley, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Shafto, Mr. and Mrs. George Snellings, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Touchstone, Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Touchstone, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wicker, Mr. and Mrs. M. NHU LOOK Possible? A "Nhu look" in spring fashions? Designer Jo Copeland was at the New York Overseas Press Club luncheon recently for Madame Nhu, Viet Nam's "First Lady," and she elbowed her way through photographers and reporters for a closer look at the dress Madame Nhu wore. It was a native dress — a sheath with side-split skirt, calf length, and worn over what looked ike pantaloons. Miss Copeland, as are other trend-setting designers, is putting spring, 1964, together now.

Cotillion Club Holds Colorful Harvest Dance

Inaugurating a new season, members of the Cotillion Dance Club combined a Halloween and Harvest theme for their first dance of the year. The Redtops from Vicksburg, Miss., provided music for the informal affair held Saturday, October 26 at the Paragon Supper club from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Alternating at the door were the club officers, Mrs. Robert Lee Curry III, president; Mrs. Elton Upshaw Jr., dance chairman; Mrs. Robert Powell, treasurer and Mrs. William Mattison, membership chairman.

Orange and black crepe paper streamers were hung at the entrnce into the ballroom where a three - foot high witch presided near the guest book table. A huge pumpkin filled with chrysanthemums and variegated autumn foliage formed the central decor for the table which was illuminated by hurricane lamps.

Orange candles inside hurricane lamps glowed on tables arranged around the dance floor where members and guests were seated. Centering each table was an arrangement of pine branches, pine cones and marigolds. Cornstalks, bound by orange and black streamers stood at either end of the band stand, beneath which were cornucopias of autumn leaves and foliage. Spotlighted in the background was an oversized shimmering witch.

Members of the club include Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Angelini, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. John Birdsong, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. Armand Breard, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hinckley, Mrs. H. F. Wadley, Mrs. E. B. Shaver, Mrs. J. W. Kight, Mrs. M. L. Snapp and Mrs. H. W. Morton.

Members and friends of the church are invited to attend the event to welcome the new family into the community.

Jewelry Gets Total Look

The new idea of having clothes designers do the jewelry to go with their clothes has proved more than a gimmick. For spring several more prominent names have been added to those doing a total look for their clothes.

Luis Esteves works with the House of Rodel so closely that he says he sometimes doesn't know whether the dress or the jewel came first. Betty Carol of Mam'selle collaborates with Sandor Goldberger, emphasizes the total look by also having her own hats made up and perching a jewel on their brims.

Diana Adler is one of the few suit designers besides Bill Blass who has jewelry designed for her collection, uses Miriam Haskell for associate. Reversing the coin, one jeweler, Risa, is working with Anglo Fabrics in order to make up a collection earlier, then uses it with designers employing the fabrics.

TEEN-AGE DIETS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two recent studies published in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association support earlier findings that many teen-agers' diets are low in vitamin C and calcium.

Most Headaches Emotional, Not Physical Caused

NEW YORK — An estimated 90 per cent of all headaches are due to emotional, rather than physical, causes.

Fewer than one per cent of chronic headaches are caused by brain tumors or other life-threatening diseases, and relatively few can be blamed on allergies, eyestrain, sinus trouble, arthritis, or hangovers.

These are the conclusions of medical experts, reported in a survey article.

The two most common types of headaches — migraines and tension headaches—are caused, in the words of neurologist-psychiatrist Arnold P. Friedman, by "an inability to adapt to emotional stress.'

Dr. Friedman, head of the nation's only full-time headache clinic, at Montefiore Hospital in New York, explained that "the most effective treatment is to uncover the underlying problems and then adjust the patient's attitudes and living habits so that the stress is reduced and made more tolerable."

Migraines, the article stated, usually strike driving and ambitious people who are "unusually preoccupied with achieving success in their careers and social relationships. They tend, in general to be intelligent, reckless of their energy stores, demanding perfection in themselves and others, never really satisfied, tense and resentful when things don't go precisely according to plan. They fuss about little things and would rather do chores themselves than delegate them to others."

The commoner, longer-lasting, but was less severe tension headache is also often caused by emotional stress, it was reported, "but they are usually less deep-seated." This type, it said, usually occurs in people who are apprehensive about problems, sensitive, discontented and fearful of making mistakes.

The survey article concluded that the best advise to tension headache sufferers is "get rid of your worries, and relax," and to migraine victims, "get rid of your wrong attitudes, and relax."

Northeast Students Plan Vows

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Ponsell, 200 Sterlington Road, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Dell Ponsell to Ben Savage. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Savage, of Crowville.

Rev. B. O. Smith will perform the ceremony which is planned for November 30 in the home of the bride's parents, at 7:30 p.m.

The bride - elect is a graduate of Ouachita Parish high school and is presently attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

Mr. Savage graduated from Crowville high school and has completed three years in the service in Hawaii. He is also a student at Northeast Louisiana State College.

TOTE N' SERVE

A versatile tote 'n serve end table saves precious time and steps when entertaining. What makes it different from snack trays? Its high style look of elegance. Simply attach handles to the top of a small occasional table, then surface it with a laminate in one of many authentic marble patterns that are today's fashion news in furnishings. The laminate surface gives a rich accent touch to living room decor, and the handled table can be carried readily to and from the serving area as needed.

Presbyterians To Host Reception Tonight For Associate Minister, Wife

The Women of the First Presbyterian Church will honor the new associate minister and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Archie Faires at a reception this evening immediately following the installation ceremony which is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Greeting guests at the entrances to the reception room will be Mrs. Howard Rivers and Mrs. Garland Shell alternating with Mrs. F. L. Renfro and Mrs. avid Hilley.

Receiving will be Mrs. T. ckel, president of the Women of the Church, Dr. W. H. McFadden, minister of the church; Rev. and Mrs. Archie Faires, Earl Tarver, clerk of the session and Roy Q. Cole Jr., chairman of the deacons.

Refreshments will be served from a table centered with a crystal compote holding an arrangement of daisy chrysanthemums and roses in shades of pink, created by Mrs. M. H. Kulcke. Past presidents of the Women of the Church will preside at punch bowls throughout the evening. They include Mrs. D. W. Griffith, Mrs. D. Curtis Smith, Mrs. C. K. Crandall, Mrs. O. C. Roddey and Mrs. A. T. Shotwell.

Arrangements for the affair are under direction of the Social Service committeee headed by Mrs. Sam Wilder, Mrs. Stewart Scott and Mrs. Thomas Breard. Others assisting with preparations have been Mrs. Ralph Law, Mrs. I. T. Landhy, Mrs. D. Curtis Seaman, Mrs. H. C. Wilson, Mrs. A. A. Thoman, Mrs. W. E. Lamb, Mrs. L. A. Shipman, Mrs. G. I. Hemphill, Mrs. N. D. Abell and Mrs. R. W. Cretney.

Assisting with courtesies throughout the evening will be Mrs. M. H. Collet, Mrs. C. S. Foster, Mrs. Lee Hodges, Mrs. Don Bushnell, Mrs. Burg Waddill, Mrs. George Burkett, Mrs. Louis White, Mrs. W. A. Hinckley, Mrs. H. F. Wadley, Mrs. E. B. Shaver, Mrs. J. W. Kight, Mrs. M. L. Snapp and Mrs. H. W. Morton.

Members and friends of the church are invited to attend the event to welcome the new family into the community.

Jewelry Gets Total Look

The new idea of having clothes designers do the jewelry to go with their clothes has proved more than a gimmick. For spring several more prominent names have been added to those doing a total look for their clothes.

Luis Esteves works with the House of Rodel so closely that he says he sometimes doesn't know whether the dress or the jewel came first. Betty Carol of Mam'selle collaborates with Sandor Goldberger, emphasizes the total look by also having her own hats made up and perching a jewel on their brims.

Diana Adler is one of the few suit designers besides Bill Blass who has jewelry designed for her collection, uses Miriam Haskell for associate. Reversing the coin, one jeweler, Risa, is working with Anglo Fabrics in order to make up a collection earlier, then uses it with designers employing the fabrics.

TEEN-AGE DIETS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two recent studies published in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association support earlier findings that many teen-agers' diets are low in vitamin C and calcium.

Most Headaches Emotional, Not Physical Caused

NEW YORK — An estimated 90 per cent of all headaches are due to emotional, rather than physical, causes.

Fewer than one per cent of chronic headaches are caused by brain tumors or other life-threatening diseases, and relatively few can be blamed on allergies, eyestrain, sinus trouble, arthritis, or hangovers.

These are the conclusions of medical experts, reported in a survey article.

The two most common types of headaches — migraines and tension headaches—are caused, in the words of neurologist-psychiatrist Arnold P. Friedman, by "an inability to adapt to emotional stress.'

Dr. Friedman, head of the nation's only full-time headache clinic, at Montefiore Hospital in New York, explained that "the most effective treatment is to uncover the underlying problems and then adjust the patient's attitudes and living habits so that the stress is reduced and made more tolerable."

Migraines, the article stated, usually strike driving and ambitious people who are "unusually preoccupied with achieving success in their careers and social relationships. They tend, in general to be intelligent, reckless of their energy stores, demanding perfection in themselves and others, never really satisfied, tense and resentful when things don't go precisely according to plan. They fuss about little things and would rather do chores themselves than delegate them to others."

The commoner, longer-lasting, but was less severe tension headache is also often caused by emotional stress, it was reported, "but they are usually less deep-seated." This type, it said, usually occurs in people who are apprehensive about problems, sensitive, discontented and fearful of making mistakes.

The survey article concluded that the best advise to tension headache sufferers is "get rid of your worries, and relax," and to migraine victims, "get rid of your wrong attitudes, and relax."

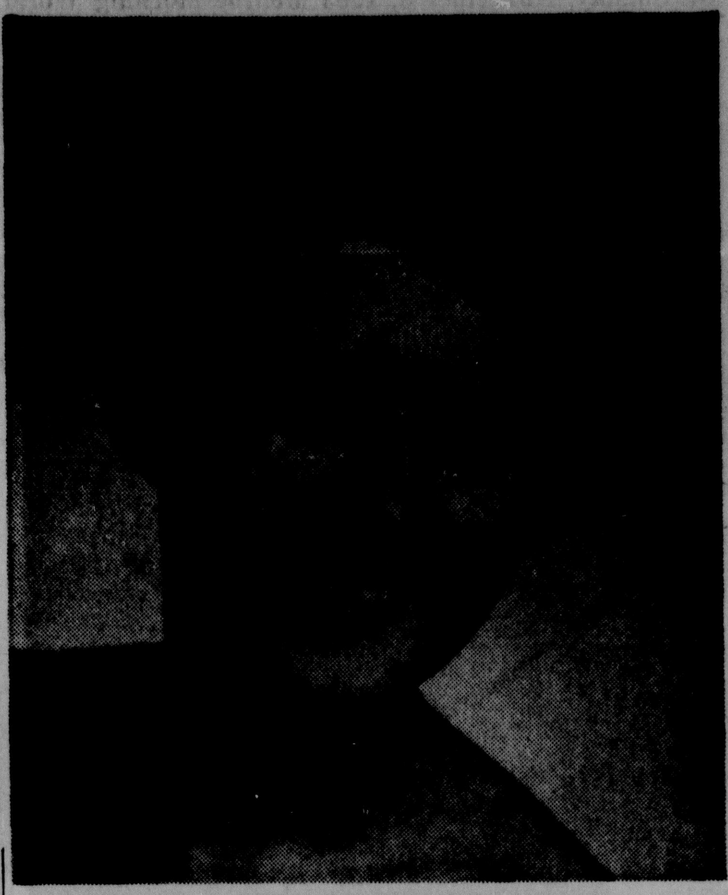
Northeast Students Plan Vows

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Ponsell, 200 Sterlington Road, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Dell Ponsell to Ben Savage. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Savage, of Crowville.

Rev. B. O. Smith will perform the ceremony which is planned for November 30 in the home of the bride's parents, at 7:30 p.m.

The bride - elect is a graduate of Ouachita Parish high school and is presently attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

Mr. Savage graduated from Crowville high school and has completed three years in the service in Hawaii. He is also a student at Northeast Louisiana State College.



MISS DELL PONSELL

TOTE N' SERVE

A versatile tote 'n serve end table saves precious time and steps when entertaining. What makes it different from snack trays? Its high style look of elegance. Simply attach handles to the top of a small occasional table, then surface it with a laminate in one of many authentic marble patterns that are today's fashion news in furnishings. The laminate surface gives a rich accent touch to living room decor, and the handled table can be carried readily to and from the serving area as needed.

MISS NANCY RISHER

Crossett Couple Lists December Wedding Date

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Risher of Crossett, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Nancy to Stephen Sanborn Nason. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Nason, also of Crossett.

The wedding will be an event of December 21 to be solemnized at 4 p.m. in South Crossett Baptist Church.

Miss Risher is a graduate of Arkansas Baptist Hospital School of Nursing. Mr. Nason attended Georgia Institute of Technology where he was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity. He is presently a student at Tulane University School of Medicine in New Orleans.

DECORATED GLOVES

Daytime dressmaker gloves in both leather and fabric reflect the costume mood with clever touches that range from shiny brass buttons, sometimes as many as three in a row up one side of a smooth kid one-buttoner, to perky bows.

The work room at Lena's is "buzzing" in creating new designs. A HAT for ABSOLUTELY EVERYONE! Luxurious velvets, mink, broadtail and veiling for Fall and Holiday custom millinery.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the engagement of Miss Bonita Louise Brannen to Michael David Landrum, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey Landrum, 106 Stix St., West Monroe, is made today by her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Louis A. Brannen, 2502 Georgia, Monroe. The wedding will be solemnized December 28 at 6 p.m. in the Church of God, with the bride's brother, Rev. Fred Brannen officiating.

Red Leads In Current Home Decorating Trend

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

You may be seeing red this year if you follow the current trend in home decorating. Rich reds, vivid orange and vibrant greens will warm hearts and heartside. Even popular white has taken on warm shades of green, pink and red in room settings created by interior designers for the National Decoration and Design 1964 show (Oct. 12-20) in New York.

Clinical white is out because it didn't do anything for furniture or for skin. But new whites are flattering to the complexion and help old and new furniture," points out designer James Amster, who has used them in his Asiatic arts story in fabrics.

Red can be a softening color, he advises, perfect with the rich dark golds and popular vogue for wood panelling.

"People like red because it is the first color we know anything about from churches and pageantry," Amster says. "It was the color of the 14th, 15th and 18th centuries. Everything goes with it — yellow, green, pink and white. It is a stirring color, hot or cool, depending on what you combine with it. There is a shade for every taste."

RASPBERRY MOST POPULAR

One bed - sitting room has walls covered in a rich red-flock paper, creamy white woodwork with gold touches. A red Italian silk love-seat and red and white print fabric is on chairs. Panels at windows have additional red touches.

Joseph Freitag uses red lacquered occasional tables in a Chinese-styled living room. Joseph Braswell and Inman Cook use red as one of 3 low armless chairs upholstered in different shades of Bangkok silk. It and the other colors — blue, beige, brown combine to complement a floor of solid vinyl Repousse tiles that duplicate a medieval pattern. Great vertical white blinds drop from the ceiling over an expanse of glass to produce an elegant, mystical effect.

MOLDINGS BACK

Erica Lemle combines orange with gold and pinkish red with a floor-to-ceiling multi-colored paper designed by Karl Mann for a family-style room. An off-white leather sofa offers a contemporary look and a tall corner furniture piece is lacquered in a reddish-pink color.

Emily Malino uses "Posters of Picasso" print fabric — orange, red, green, bue and yellow — stretched over sliding panel doors. Bright primary colors also go to the upholstery.

Mandarin orange is used also by Patricia Harvey in her 18th century French and English room highlighted by architectural moldings on ceiling and walls.

"Moldings are back. Dados are back. You can't have elegant rooms with the plain walls they are putting in homes. One must put back the missing architectural details," she says.

MISS JUDITH ANN HARRISON

Engagement Announced For Judith Ann Harrison

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Harrison, 3805 Spurgeon Drive, Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Judith Ann Harrison to Paul Richard Rogers of Houma. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Rogers of Kingston, Tennessee.

The wedding will take place Saturday, November 23 at 7 p.m. in Memorial Methodist Church of Monroe. Rev. Loyd E. Williams will perform the ceremony.

Miss Harrison has chosen Miss Carol McKinley to serve as maid of honor and Miss Betty Hines as bridesmaid.

Wiliam Rich has been named by the prospective bridegroom, to serve as best man and groomsman will be Edgar Lavelle Harrison Jr. Chosen as ushers are Ray Barksdale Harrison Jr. and David Mark Harrison.

The bride - elect is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Washburn and Mrs. Virgil Harrison and the late Mr. Harrison. Miss Harrison is a graduate of Neville high school and of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute in Ruston and is a member of Phi Kappa Phi sorority. She is presently teaching at Minnie Ruffin school in Monroe.

Mr. Rogers is the grandson of Mrs. Mary Webb and the late Mr. Webb and Mrs. Arleva Rogers and the late Mr. Rogers. A graduate of Sylvia high school, Sylvia, North Carolina, he completed nine years with the Radar Command in the U.S. Air Force in September and is presently employed in Houma as service manager of an automobile agency.

Carpets, Rugs In Vivid Hues Gain In Favor

When it comes to decorating the floor for fall, wall to wall carpeting and area rugs each have their champions - but on one point both sides are agreed. Wall to wall or area rug, the floor covering must be colorful.

Color on the floor has been steadily gaining in popularity as new fibers and finishes introduce soil and stain resistance and easy cleaning to make colorful carpets practical. This fall color takes the floor in deep, rich tones.

Vibrant reds and blues reflect the Mediterranean influence. Bold greens and blue-green combinations, shades of yellow and orange and even vivid pink make color news for carpeting.

More akin to the nuetral hues but still with richness and depth are smoky charcoals, earthy browns, olive, rust, gold and bronze. Interesting textures add to the opulent air.

Area rugs introduce new shapes and sizes, including ovals, octagons, scalloped circles. Scatter rugs get a design boost with interesting textures and patterns.

TEXTURE IS PASSWORD

Texture is very much the password to fashion flair this year. The smoothness of leather, the nubbiness of mohair, and the heavenly softness of the new synthetic fur fabrics are all part of the picture. Hats in all sorts of fascinating fabrics are going over big for a change, too. Leather hats are important accents for the popular sportive look. Imitation fur toques are jauntily military. Swoopy, dramatic brushed velours give a particular dash to those who can wear them.

MISS LINDA LEE JOHNSTON'S engagement to Edgar Lamar Chase, son of Mrs. Ben Chase of Waterproof and the late Mr. Chase is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Teddy Lee Johnston of Grayson. The wedding will take place December 22 in the Grayson Methodist Church at 2 p.m.

Wild Pop Furs Current Rage

When furriers revived lynx, ocelot and fisher, they called them sports furs, fearful that women wouldn't buy. Now they've had to go much wilder, since the sports furs have rapidly become standard. The new name, from that wild art we've seen lately, is "pop" furs.

A "pop" fur is something like a pink terry bathrobe lined in white mink, or mink coveralls for doing housework. Or it's a hostess robe of chinchilla.

The sleeveless fur sweater is so accepted among circles who can afford furs as others do fabrics, that it can't be classed as "pop" any more. Much more "pop" is a circular cape of sealskin or white broadtail lounging pajamas.

There are cocktail dresses of white mink, and evening dresses of wooly white lamb. Hand-painted calfskin, started in Germany, is now here. Raincoats lined in mink don't count as "pop" because they're standard sportive now.

SEASON FOR WHITE

The perfect little white dress in wool is a must in the fashion wardrobe this season. Often collarless it can accommodate colorful scarves and jewelry to suit any mood for day or evening.

Some People Must Get Lumps The Hard Way

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Last June our son went with the rest of his senior high school class on a trip to Upper Michigan. On the trip Irving met a girl from a Detroit high school.

She gave him a line about how she had fallen in love with him at first sight and that he was the nicest, most attractive, most fascinating fellow she had ever met.

When Irving got home he was in a daze — bumping into doors, not hearing his name called — and so on. He told me he was in love and this was the only girl in the whole world for him.

Irving has since written her twelve letters and she has not answered one. He even wrote to her parents telling them how lovely she is.

Now he wants to go to Detroit to see her. All he has is her address. I'm afraid he will get lost because he has never been out of Flint alone. Should we let him go and get lost or what? He has a job and has saved his own money. Please advise at once. — Beside Myself

Dear Beside: Let him go. Some people must get their lumps the hard way. The girl will probably tell Irving to get lost but a high school graduate should be able to find his way back to Flint from Detroit.

When the boy returns don't ask him a single question. He'll appreciate your leaving him alone.

Dear Ann Landers: My uncle and aunt are both in their middle 60's. Uncle Alf retired two years ago. They are not poor people, Ann, in fact they are better off than most of the family. The first thing they did was sell their home and move into a one - room apartment. They've been at home exactly seven weeks out of the last two years. The rest of the time they have mooched off relatives.

Everyone in the family is sick of their sponging. Their only expenses are gas and oil. They have never bought a pound of hamburger or an orange. Not once have they offered to take anyone to eat in a restaurant. They never bring a gift when they arrive or send a thank you letter when they get home.

We have had them here twice — for six weeks at a time and today we received a letter saying they will be with us for Christmas. I am ready to flip my wig. What can we do? — Bitterly Resentful

Dear Bitterly: If you allow these parasites to invade your home a third time you deserve them.

Write the free -loaders and tell them you are not up to having guests this year and that you will let them know when the situation changes.

Dear Ann Landers: I have had two children out of wedlock. My girl is three and my boy is two. I am now happily married and my husband is a wonderful father to the children. He has never once thrown my past up to me.

We can't afford to have the children's name changed legally right now because we owe a lot of bills and are trying to get our credit rating back in good shape.

The children have never known any father but the one they have now. I would hate to tell them about my life. But what will I say when they ask me why their last name is not the same as mine? Please advise me. — Estella

Dear Estella: Your children's last name should have been changed along with yours the day you married — at least socially. It costs nothing to call your children by your husband's name, and I hope you will begin to do so right now. You can have the legal changes made later.

Parents are people — they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for ANN LANDERS ' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Now Is Time To Move Potted Plants Indoors

In the early days of autumn, house plants that have enjoyed a summer vacation outdoors should be taken indoors so they may adapt to the environment there before artificial heat is turned on in homes, says the Society of American Florists.

Plants that haven't thrived outdoors during the lush days of summer, says SAF, aren't likely to improve indoors. Therefore, these "weak-sister" plants should be replaced, it adds.

House plants that have benefitted from the warm, moist weather outdoors meed a period to become adjusted to the indoor climate again before homes are artificially heated. Otherwise, the abrupt change to hot, dry air of heated homes will be harmful to them, the Society points out.

The Society offers these care suggestions for house plants to be brought indoors:

Plants should be sprayed with an insecticide to rid them of any insect pests, and the outsides of all pots should be scrubbed with a brush and water.

The top soil of plants, still actively growing, should be removed and replaced with a mixture of two parts garden soil, one part thoroughly rotted manure, and bonemeal at the rate of a teaspoonful to each six-inch pot.

Plants should be placed near windows, at either the sunny or shady locations they prefer, and they should be given routine care during winter months.

In replacing discarded potted house plants, SAF suggests that you follow these guidelines which will help you develop a "green thumb":

1. Choose — with the help of a local florist — hardier varieties of flowering and foliage plants that require only moderate adjustments in indoors climate to thrive.
2. Learn the particular needs of the specific varieties selected, as to light, humidity, soil, soil moisture, temperature, and plant food.
3. Learn the proper way of keeping the leaves of these varieties clean of dust, and the plant free of insects and other pests.
4. Learn to recognize the signs that house plants give when they begin to get "sick", and take prompt remedial action.

Popular flowering plants that can be grown indoors include African violets, begonias, gardenias, flowering bulbs, geranium, gloxinia, tuberous rooted begonia, and roses.

There are many hardy foliage plants. Philodendron, for example, says the Society, is extremely hardy and adaptable. The most popular small foliage plants include baby leaf ivy, golden pothos, marble queen pothos, variegated nephthytis, assorted ivies (including grape, ripple, English, geranium, and gold dust), assorted cacti, variegated peperomias, sansevierias (including sansevieria zeylanica, gold striped sansevieria and sansevieria birdsnest or dwarf sansevieria), and white vein fittonias.

Among the most popular large display-type foliage plants are philodendron pertusum, ficus decora (red rubber plant), assorted dieffenbachias, philodendron cordatum totem poles, philodenleaf philodendron such as dubia, dron hastatum, assorted large panduriforme, and selloum.

REMOVE HAIR

One way to remove dog hair from clothes is to moisten a rubber sponge and rub the cloth lightly.

ENGAGEMENT and approaching marriage of Miss Doris Evelyn Roark of Jena, to Jerry Wayne Cruse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cruse of Olla, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Roark of Jena. The wedding will be Friday, November 29 in the Antioch Free Methodist Church at 7:30 p.m. with Rev. Lawrence Poole officiating.

Designer Takes Bare View Of Swimsuits

Every time Rudi Gernreich, California designer, introduces a new line of swimsuits, the reporters are careful not to miss the event.

Within five years, said Rudi last spring, American women will shed the tops and be content with swimming in their trunks. These same bare views were expressed later this summer by Italian sportswear designer Emilio Pucci.

Sure enough, in Rudi's holiday collection the audacious young stylist had whacked away at some of the bodice.

Slim, Sleek Is Look For Lamps

New lamps have a fashionably slim look. Designs are sleek and well - proportioned, rarely taller than 36 to 40 inches, according to the Lamp and Shade Institute of America, in a survey of lamp manufacturers.

As furniture trends move towards larger and heavier pieces often influenced by Spanish styles, the new lamps are a perfect way to provide balance. Shades confirm the move away from clutter. Most are slim, deep drum shapes in plain colors or opaque white. Decoration, where it is used is unobtrusive.

MISS LINDA LEE JOHNSTON'S engagement to Edgar Lamar Chase, son of Mrs. Ben Chase of Waterproof and the late Mr. Chase is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Teddy Lee Johnston of Grayson. The wedding will take place December 22 in the Grayson Methodist Church at 2 p.m.

Wild Pop Furs Current Rage

When furriers revived lynx, ocelot and fisher, they called them sports furs, fearful that women wouldn't buy. Now they've had to go much wilder, since the sports furs have rapidly become standard. The new name, from that wild art we've seen lately, is "pop" furs.

A "pop" fur is something like a pink terry bathrobe lined in white mink, or mink coveralls for doing housework. Or it's a hostess robe of chinchilla.

The sleeveless fur sweater is so accepted among circles who can afford furs as others do fabrics, that it can't be classed as "pop" any more. Much more "pop" is a circular cape of sealskin or white broadtail lounging pajamas.

There are cocktail dresses of white mink, and evening dresses of wooly white lamb. Hand-painted calfskin, started in Germany, is now here. Raincoats lined in mink don't count as "pop" because they're standard sportive now.

SEASON FOR WHITE

The perfect little white dress in wool is a must in the fashion wardrobe this season. Often collarless it can accommodate colorful scarves and jewelry to suit any mood for day or evening.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Eyes have always somewhat dictated the impression we get of others. The eyes and the mouth are the focal points of a face.

If you have beautiful eyes, you are lucky! However, the expression of the eyes, not whether they are large or small, or whatever shape or color makes the difference. If they sparkle with enthusiasm or humor, or are warm with understanding, who cares about what shape they are?

I have been delighted that eye makeup has been played up because I think that clever eye makeup adds charm to the most beautiful eyes and can lift the average eyes and the average face nearer to beauty than have been otherwise possible.

I remember years ago, before eye makeup became the rage, I wondered what had happened to a woman I knew very well. She always had a wonderful personality, but she suddenly looked different. She was better looking. She was suddenly pretty. She didn't have a new hairdo and her lipstick color was the same. I realized that the change was due to the fact that she was using eye makeup for the first time.

However, no matter how clever your makeup or how lovely your eyes, the impact will be lost if you squint or pass your best friends on the street unseeingly or have irritated lids.

Many women neglect their eyes by not wearing glasses as soon as they need them. Also many folks have eye trouble and do not recognize the fact. The following are some of the symptoms of danger given by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness:

Difficulty in reading or other work requiring close work use of the eyes.

Blinking more than usual and squinting eyelids together or frowning.

Blurred or foggy vision and loss of side vision.

Rainbow colored rings around lights and inability to adjust the eyes to dark rooms.

Frequent changes of glasses, none of which are satisfactory.

Double vision or spots in the field of vision.

According to The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, one out of every two cases of blindness could have been prevented by early diagnosis and treatment. Everyone should have a medical eye examination every two years from the age of 40 on according to the Society. Even when afflicted with chronic glaucoma the person may not be aware of the symptoms in the early stages of the disease.

If you would like to have my exercises for the eyes (to rest them) send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet number 8 to Josephine Lowman in care of Monroe Morning World.

Exotic Couture Of Philippines Introduced Here

The Philippine Islands have long been noted as a source of embroideries, particularly for babies' and tots' clothes. Less well known is the distinctive style of Philippine couture, designed and made for the wealthy women of Manila.

This couture has now entered the international fashion picture with a first New York collection, sponsored by the Philippine Government.

The typical Filipino evening gown is a slender column with huge sleeves of gold gauze. For day wear the national men's shirt, called a "barong," and richly embroidered, has been adapted by the women into a tunic to wear over sheath dresses or slacks.

As shown in New York, the fashions seemed immediately adaptable to either informal wear here, or evening wear. Handsome was a gown of Thai silk, a sheath with a short train. Over it goes a simple but embroidered overblouse, done in onyx and coral beads, with wing sleeves called the split butterfly.

The overblouse was of pineapple fabric. This cloth is actually made from pineapple leaves, and is washed in warm tea to set its natural beige color.

JUNGLE PATTERN turns into fashion motif in this handsome Tiger boy coat for fall. A wonderful town and travel coat, it has a double-breasted closing, bracelet sleeves and a collar to wear up or down. Stand-up pockets accent the hipline.

Glamorous Furs For Fall Appear In Sportive Mood

Fantasia Furs celebrates the opening of its tenth season with a collection for Fall 1963 that underlines its never-ending efforts to seek "New Dimensions in Fur." Its reputation, long synonymous with originality and meticulous craftsmanship, is strengthened once more by a varied array of furs. Designed by Charles Meshel, the theme is utter simplicity. . . a feminine look that is adaptable for every figure.

Fantasia spans the fur spectrum in a wide orbit which includes those furs for which the firm is already known such as Canadian beaver, Brazilian river otter, Alaska seal, American broadtail, Indian lamb, leopard, jaguar and ocelot. But on their expanded roster Fantasia registers stone marten, mink chevron, and saga Norwegian blue fox. "Dramatic firsts" are "Oriental marten", baby wildcat, and natural wild beaver. Mink in all shades is used for contrasting trim.

Exciting news is made by furs making their debut on the fashion scene. Natural Beaver in the wild, looking as if it just crept onto the bank of a river, is perhaps one of the most fascinating furs premiering. Strictly for daytime, its innate ability to shed water makes it an excellent candidate for a rough weather coat. More glamourous but equally engaging is another Fantasia surprise. . ."Oriental Marten", Its naturally brilliant yellow tones contrasting dramatically with a wide black leather belt and buttons. Fantasia is probably the only firm to use baby wildcat, a longhaired, spotted fur ideally suited for parkas, and ponchos.

Long a pioneer in the sportive field, Fantasia is greatly responsible for its coming of age. Convinced of its continued success and growing importance in the leisure-time wardrobe, designer Meshel particularly emphasizes the "Fun Look" in sportive furs . . . apres ski, apres play . . . furs that adapt for many occasions.

Silhouettes for the most part are lean and trim with no excesses anywhere. Coats caress the figure with gentle shaping below the bustline creating an aura of femininity and youthful sophistication. Buttons are ingeniously placed high on many of the coats, whether single or double breasted to create a slimmer more "caressed" look. For that matter, double - breasted coats are buttoned on loops to maintain the spare effect. Back gathering and shirring, now and again repeated on a new sleeve treatment accent the variety needed for a well-rounded collection of jackets, three-quarter and full length coats.

The furs are enhanced by a number of dressmaker details, all of which work together to emphasize the shaping. Pockets are flapped, stand-away, or "pillowed". Half belts are contoured or angled, others are sashed or abbreviated to a leather shoestring. Collars are small and mostly all convertible to a notched rever. Buttons, many hand-made, are chosen with great care to coincide with the mood and feeling of the coat.

Mention must be made of the repeated use of knit as a trim. Always hand done, it shows up sometimes as a yoke, a high turtle neck collar, cuffs, pockets or even sleeves. Leather complements the fur as piping or edging.

Other dramatic fashion highlights of the collection include a white mink chevron gaucho's poncho, reversible to its authtic Argentinian underside, a black beaver poncho-cape, a full-length Lynx Wildcat coat with swirling horizontal skins, a reversible Leopard wrap and a super-luxurious Stone Marten evening coat.

Color Hints Given For Mahogany Paneled Room

By BETTY PEPIS

Q: Our living room is paneled in mahogany and the carpet is a warm gold. A sofa and and chair are upholstered in a rough textured fabric in tangerine with flecks of gold. Please suggest color for draperies and two extra chairs.

A: What about gold colored draperies and cover the two chairs in bitter green or avocado.

Q: My bedroom is very sunny. I just had it painted a silver beige, almost an off - white. One wall, however, is in a companion paper. The motif is one of life size asters and the flowers in colors true to the flower such as pink and lavender. What color for carpet, draperies and what about bedspread, throw pillows and lamps?

A: Because of the colorful floral paper everything else should be quiet so that there are no conflicting points of interest. I suggest off-white rugs, cafe curtains and bedspread, also lamps. Toss pillows, however, can be in the various colors of the flowers. Undoubtedly there is green in the wallpaper and green could also be used for rugs and the dust ruffle could be a narrow green and off-white print.

Q: Recently we bought a Danish sofa and two chairs in a dark brown, dark and bright green stripe. Reversible cushions are dark green on one side. Rug is a parchment beige. What color for walls, woodwork, ceiling, draperies, lamps and another chair?

A: Have walls, woodwork and ceiling in a very pale parchment, beige, draperies and lamps too. Cover the other chair in an apple green or citrus yellow.

Q: Help; I feel overwhelmed. We are building a new house and I'd appreciate suggestions for our new living room. Furniture is Early American maple and cherry. Recently, we bought a sofa. The upholstery is a small provincial pattern in brown, creme and a muted pumpkin. We also have a chair and ottoman covered in pumpkin. Please give me color ideas for walls, carpeting, draperies, and slip covers for two other chairs.

A: I suggest painting walls and woodwork white or a pale creme beige. Rug could be braided in creme beige (deeper than walls). Have cafe curtains in the color of the walls. Cover the two chairs in a citrus yellow or in a creme and soft brown plaid or check. A good arrangement of green plants will add interest and a color contrast if you like this sort of atmosphere in your living room.

Blue Blazer Sequined For Resort Wear

If anything were needed to get over the message that sportswear is now high fashion, it is a blue sequin blazer. Navy blue, of course, and worn over a long white crepe dress with a turtleneck collar, it's undoubtably the most status thing to go South.

Bill Blass of Maurice Rentner, whose sporty fall collection won him a Coty Fashion Critics' Award, unveiled the navy sequin blazer at the Awards fashion show. But even the avant - garde Bill wasn't first with sportswear in sequins.

Oleg Cassini did a tennis evening gown all white sequins with red and navy ones making the stripes of the V-neck tennis sweater top.

Resorts this winter may look the way they did in the old days, when sportswear was all that was ever worn. But sequinned sportswear? Well, it's high fashion now.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Eyes have always somewhat dictated the impression we get of others. The eyes and the mouth are the focal points of a face.

If you have beautiful eyes, you are lucky! However, the expression of the eyes, not whether they are large or small, or whatever shape or color makes the difference. If they sparkle with enthusiasm or humor, or are warm with understanding, who cares about what shape they are?

I have been delighted that eye makeup has been played up because I think that clever eye makeup adds charm to the most beautiful eyes and can lift the average eyes and the average face nearer to beauty than have been otherwise possible.

I remember years ago, before eye makeup became the rage, I wondered what had happened to a woman I knew very well. She always had a wonderful personality, but she suddenly looked different. She was better looking. She was suddenly pretty. She didn't have a new hairdo and her lipstick color was the same. I realized that the change was due to the fact that she was using eye makeup for the first time.

However, no matter how clever your makeup or how lovely your eyes, the impact will be lost if you squint or pass your best friends on the street unseeingly or have irritated lids.

Many women neglect their eyes by not wearing glasses as soon as they need them. Also many folks have eye trouble and do not recognize the fact. The following are some of the symptoms of danger given by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness:

Difficulty in reading or other work requiring close work use of the eyes.

Blinking more than usual and squinting eyelids together or frowning.

Blurred or foggy vision and loss of side vision.

Rainbow colored rings around lights and inability to adjust the eyes to dark rooms.

Frequent changes of glasses, none of which are satisfactory.

Double vision or spots in the field of vision.

According to The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, one out of every two cases of blindness could have been prevented by early diagnosis and treatment. Everyone should have a medical eye examination every two years from the age of 40 on according to the Society. Even when afflicted with chronic glaucoma the person may not be aware of the symptoms in the early stages of the disease.

If you would like to have my exercises for the eyes (to rest them) send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet number 8 to Josephine Lowman in care of Monroe Morning World.

Exotic Couture Of Philippines Introduced Here

The Philippine Islands have long been noted as a source of embroideries, particularly for babies' and tots' clothes. Less well known is the distinctive style of Philippine couture, designed and made for the wealthy women of Manila.

This couture has now entered the international fashion picture with a first New York collection, sponsored by the Philippine Government.

The typical Filipino evening gown is a slender column with huge sleeves of gold gauze. For day wear the national men's shirt, called a "barong," and richly embroidered, has been adapted by the women into a tunic to wear over sheath dresses or slacks.

As shown in New York, the fashions seemed immediately adaptable to either informal wear here, or evening wear. Handsome was a gown of Thai silk, a sheath with a short train. Over it goes a simple but embroidered overblouse, done in onyx and coral beads, with wing sleeves called the split butterfly.

The overblouse was of pineapple fabric. This cloth is actually made from pineapple leaves, and is washed in warm tea to set its natural beige color.

213 DeSIARD STREET

JUNGLE PATTERN turns into fashion motif in this handsome Tiger boy coat for fall. A wonderful town and travel coat, it has a double-breasted closing, bracelet sleeves and a collar to wear up or down. Stand-up pockets accent the hipline.

Glamorous Furs For Fall Appear In Sportive Mood

Fantasia Furs celebrates the opening of its tenth season with a collection for Fall 1963 that underlines its never-ending efforts to seek "New Dimensions in Fur." Its reputation, long synonymous with originality and meticulous craftsmanship, is strengthened once more by a varied array of furs. Designed by Charles Meshel, the theme is utter simplicity. . . a feminine look that is adaptable for every figure.

Fantasia spans the fur spectrum in a wide orbit which includes those furs for which the firm is already known such as Canadian beaver, Brazilian river otter, Alaska seal, American broadtail, Indian lamb, leopard, jaguar and ocelot. But on their expanded roster Fantasia registers stone marten, mink chevron, and saga Norwegian blue fox. "Dramatic firsts" are "Oriental marten", baby wildcat, and natural wild beaver. Mink in all shades is used for contrasting trim.

Exciting news is made by furs making their debut on the fashion scene. Natural Beaver in the wild, looking as if it just crept onto the bank of a river, is perhaps one of the most fascinating furs premiering. Strictly for daytime, its innate ability to shed water makes it an excellent candidate for a rough weather coat. More glamourous but equally engaging is another Fantasia surprise. . ."Oriental Marten", its naturally brilliant yellow tones contrasting dramatically with a wide black leather belt and buttons. Fantasia is probably the only firm to use baby wildcat, a longhaired, spotted fur ideally suited for parkas, and ponchos.

Long a pioneer in the sportive field, Fantasia is greatly responsible for its coming of age. Convinced of its continued success and growing importance in the leisure-time wardrobe, designer Meshel particularly emphasizes the "Fun Look" in sportive furs . . . apres ski, apres play . . . furs that adapt for many occasions.

Silhouettes for the most part are lean and trim with no excesses anywhere. Coats caress the figure with gentle shaping below the bustline creating an aura of femininity and youthful sophistication. Buttons are ingeniously placed high on many of the coats, whether single or double breasted to create a slimmer more "caressed" look. For that matter, double - breasted coats are buttoned on loops to maintain the spare effect. Back gathering and shirring, now and again repeated on a new sleeve treatment accent the variety needed for a well-rounded collection of jackets, three-quarter and full length coats.

The furs are enhanced by a number of dressmaker details, all of which work together to emphasize the shaping. Pockets are flapped, stand-away, or "pillowed". Half belts are contoured or angled, others are sashed or abbreviated to a leather shoestring. Collars are small and mostly all convertible to a notched rever. Buttons, many hand-made, are chosen with great care to coincide with the mood and feeling of the coat.

Mention must be made of the repeated use of knit as a trim. Always hand done, it shows up sometimes as a yoke, a high turtle neck collar, cuffs, pockets or even sleeves. Leather complements the fur as piping or edging.

Other dramatic fashion highlights of the collection include a white mink chevron gaucho's poncho, reversible to its authtic Argentinian underside, a black beaver poncho-cape, a full-length Lynx Wildcat coat with swirling horizontal skins, a reversible Leopard wrap and a super-luxurious Stone Marten evening coat.

Color Hints Given For Mahogany Paneled Room

By BETTY PEPIS

Q: Our living room is paneled in mahogany and the carpet is a warm gold. A sofa and and chair are upholstered in a rough textured fabric in tangerine with flecks of gold. Please suggest color for draperies and two extra chairs.

A: What about gold colored draperies and cover the two chairs in bitter green or avocado.

Q: My bedroom is very sunny. I just had it painted a silver beige, almost an off - white. One wall, however, is in a companion paper. The motif is one of life size asters and the flowers in colors true to the flower such as pink and lavender. What color for carpet, draperies and what about bedspread, throw pillows and lamps?

A: Because of the colorful floral paper everything else should be quiet so that there are no conflicting points of interest. I suggest off-white rugs, cafe curtains and bedspread, also lamps. Toss pillows, however, can be in the various colors of the flowers. Undoubtedly there is green in the wallpaper and green could also be used for rugs and the dust ruffle could be a narrow green and off-white print.

Q: Recently we bought a Danish sofa and two chairs in a dark brown, dark and bright green stripe. Reversible cushions are dark green on one side. Rug is a parchment beige. What color for walls, woodwork, ceiling, draperies, lamps and another chair?

A: Have walls, woodwork and ceiling in a very pale parchment, beige, draperies and lamps too. Cover the other chair in an apple green or citrus yellow.

Q: Help; I feel overwhelmed. We are building a new house and I'd appreciate suggestions for our new living room. Furniture is Early American maple and cherry. Recently, we bought a sofa. The upholstery is a small provincial pattern in brown, creme and a muted pumpkin. We also have a chair and ottoman covered in pumpkin. Please give me color ideas for walls, carpeting, draperies, and slip covers for two other chairs.

A: I suggest painting walls and woodwork white or a pale creme beige. Rug could be braided in creme beige (deeper than walls). Have cafe curtains in the color of the walls. Cover the two chairs in a citrus yellow or in a creme and soft brown plaid or check. A good arrangement of green plants will add interest and a color contrast if you like this sort of atmosphere in your living room.

Blue Blazer Sequined For Resort Wear

If anything were needed to get over the message that sportswear is now high fashion, it is a blue sequin blazer. Navy blue, of course, and worn over a long white crepe dress with a turtleneck collar, it's undoubtably the most status thing to go South.

Bill Blass of Maurice Rentner, whose sporty fall collection won him a Coty Fashion Critics' Award, unveiled the navy sequin blazer at the Awards fashion show. But even the avant - garde Bill wasn't first with sportswear in sequins.

Oleg Cassini did a tennis evening gown all white sequins with red and navy ones making the stripes of the V-neck tennis sweater top.

Resorts this winter may look the way they did in the old days, when sportswear was all that was ever worn. But sequinned sportswear? Well, it's high fashion now.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Top Award Designs Seen

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Delhi Garden Club presented top award winning flower arrangements from their recent Home Show, Saturday, Oct. 26, in the Home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cutler of Delhi. The club's president, Mrs. Truman Green, and the Flower show chairman, Mrs. S. T. Bradley, with several other club members brought their Blue Ribbon winners for the T. V. and Fifth District Garden Center Program last Wednesday.

"Les Fleur de la Maison" was the theme for the show. From the "Living Room" section Mrs. Truman Green brought her design, "Double Conversation Piece," twin designs for a pair of end tables. These were small identical designs featuring the Hogarth line made of ivy in exact Cherub containers. The focal interest was a filler of small cerese mums with gold centers. Just the added touch for the conversational pieces on these end tables beside the twin lamps. Won a Blue Ribbon which has to score 90.

The next room was the kitchen—which yielded three blue ribbon winners. This must prove that this is truly the most loved and most popular room in the home. "Kitchen Show - Off" — a design made for the lighted niche above the sink, was made by Mrs. Earline Bruce. This design was just perfect for the alloted space. Baby ivy formed the horizontal line in a small gold tea pot. Yellow mums were massed into a triangular pattern to form the focal interest — simple, well done, very effective, and a blue ribbon winner.

"Brunch Basket," made by Mrs. Betty Coats was a design of fresh fruits placed on a large wicker tray as a container. Starting with two pineapples and an egg plant turned on their sides at one end of the tray followed with Japanese persimmons, lemons and limes placed in a line of green grapes and ivy curving around the inside rim of the tray, finishing with a focal interest or accessory, a ceramic rooster, placed high on a green wooden candle holder as though he was crowing over all the goodies below. All colors blended well, creating a real harmonious and interesting design. It won a blue ribbon, of course.

SAUCY TALK

"Saucy Talk" — a design to be placed in the barbecue corner, was made by Mrs. S. T. Bradley and merited the Award of Distinction, a Blue ribbon design with a score of 95 — highest of all scores in the class featuring other than fresh cut plant materials. Mrs. Bradley used a tall wine bottle, filling it with water (colored red). This bottle was placed in a wicker holder in colors of yellow and red. The line, a Hogarth, showing plenty of rhythm was formed by using the dried leather fern (deep brown color) strengthened with curving dried okra pods and swirling wisteria branch. For focal interest one garlic blossom was used, accented on all sides with bright red peppers and dried dill. Certainly the materials were suitable for a good sauce, and, so cleverly combined to create a real conversational piece.

In the Dressing Room, "Powder Puff Fantasy," was designed by Mrs. C. C. Cutler. This was an arrangement for the dressing table. Mrs. Cutler used bold colors of green and gold to harmonize with the color scheme of the room. Aspidestra leaves, cleverly furled and rolled formed the background for the line of golden marigolds placed in a soft gold compote. For filler and softness added to the boldness of the marigolds, she used clipped pine. This also added contrast which always creates interest. This design was placed in the corner beside the mirror which reflected it's image effectively. The score was 95, which gave it the Tri-Color Award for the section requiring all fresh plant materials.

MANY WINNERS

There were many other blue ribbon winners in this lovely show that could not be transported at this late date. Congratulations to all the arrangers for their contribution to a beautiful show in a beautiful setting.

Another flower show that proved outstanding and educational to the flower lovers was the chrysanthemum show in Ruston, Tech Student Center, Oct. 29-30, "Chrysanthemums —Queen of the Autumn," by The Ruston Chrysanthemum Society.

It was almost unbelievable to see the unusual mum specimens in the horticulture display, as well as in the Design Division. Those who saw the show will agree with me on this. This was an ideal time to write a list of names of these early blooming, hardy varieties, and see first hand what can be done with mums in our own location. For your benefit, Dr. John Wright, horticulture professor at Tech, has given me the names of these early varieties listed as follows:

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Two Plants Delightful

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

It seems strange that a family of plants with as many members from the tropical regions of the world as the Arum Family should have among its genera a species which deliberately waits until just before hard frost to start into growth, but that is exactly what the evergreen Arum italicum does.

This mottled - leaved little arum is one of the most striking evergreen foliage plants we can grow out of doors in Southern gardens. How so many gardeners have missed it is hard to say because your columnist has never seen a gardener who did not say "What on earth is this beautiful thing, and where did you get it?" My reply has to be "Why, I have grown it nearly all my life, and I would not wish to garden through a winter without it. It ought to be on every bulb counter in the Fall."

PLAIN-LEAVES

The Italian arum comes in a plain - leaved form and in many variations as to the mottling, but the best form is the one sold in the horticultural trade in this country Catalogues of the West Coast nurseries dealing in bulbs which were ordered by many inquirers to this column year before last list Arum italicum. We have mentioned it in the column before, but we seldom see it in gardens.

When Spring comes around, the Italian arum sends up a new set of leaves and blooms. The flowers are like small calla - lilies, but they look as if they were made of parchment. How this plant can take such low temperatures without damage is difficult to see. None of the severe weather we have had lately has seemed to damage the leaves. They lie flat on the ground during the coldest weather and then begin to rise slightly as the spring rains come to us. If you grow a plant in the house, the foliage will stand erect in winter.

VIEWPOINT

We think arum italicum is more beautiful than many of its kindred tropical pot plants like aglaonema, alocasia, anthurium, caladium, deliciosa and the legions of different kinds of philodendrons that run all over people's houses. It is a medium-sized pot plant and will, of course, thrive in very cold places since it grows out-of-doors in winter.

HARDY CYCLAMEN

Another out - door plant that is delicate and beautiful in a very cool window without too much direct sunlight is the mottled leaved cyclamen neapolitanum about which we have written so much in the past few years and with which correspondents to the column say they are immensely pleased. The flowers of this cyclamen started to bloom in a pot on your columnist's window sill in the air-cooled house on July 4th. As the last little flowers have just gone, and the handsome ivy-like leaves have taken their place.

Camellia Has Large Following

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles on the selection, growth and proper care of Camellias in the Monroe area. These are prepared by members of the Northeast Camellia Club, and deal with the problems and experiences of those who have raised the plants in northeast Louisiana.)

No flower that blooms in the Southland is more admired or more sought after than is the camellia. Its many varieties now run into the thousands and each variety produces a bloom, characteristic in form and color, only of that particular variety. Among these many varieties now available are early, midseason and late bloomers. Thus camellia growers are able to enjoy these magnificient flowers during the fall, winter and spring months of September through March.

Anyone who enjoys these cold weather bloomers can grow them by observing a few fundamental rules, all of which tend to duplicate the conditions under which they grow in their native habitat, where they flourish in a mild climate, in an acid soil, with rainfall and a moist atmophere.

BUYING TIPS

Nothing will contribute more to success in growing camellias than beginning with strong, healthy, vigorous plants. The health of the plant is far more important than its size. Many new and beautiful varieties are on the market today, some of which are best adapted to greenhouse growing and will not bloom well when planted in the open, so before selecting your plants advise with your nurseryman about the best outdoor varieties.

Once the varieties have been decided upon another problem faces the buyer. How can he know and find the best possible plant of that variety in the nursery? Buying camellias wisely is an important technique that most amateurs learn only after much needless expense and disappointment. Yet, actually, anyone can become a good camellia buyer by learning a few simple rules.

ADVICE

Always buy from a reputable nurseryman. Select your plants personally, if possible, although it is perfectly safe to order by phone or mail from established firms.

Container grown plants are usually preferable to plants dug from the field or beds, as they are easier to handle, plant and establish. The size of the container or ball and the height or caliper of a plant are not accurate criteria for judging the worth of a camellia. A vigorous gallon-can plant is worth more than a poor five-gallon plant; a perfectly healed graft on one - inch stock is far better than a sloppy union on two - inch stock; a fine 18 - inch plant will outstrip a weak four-foot plant in a single season.

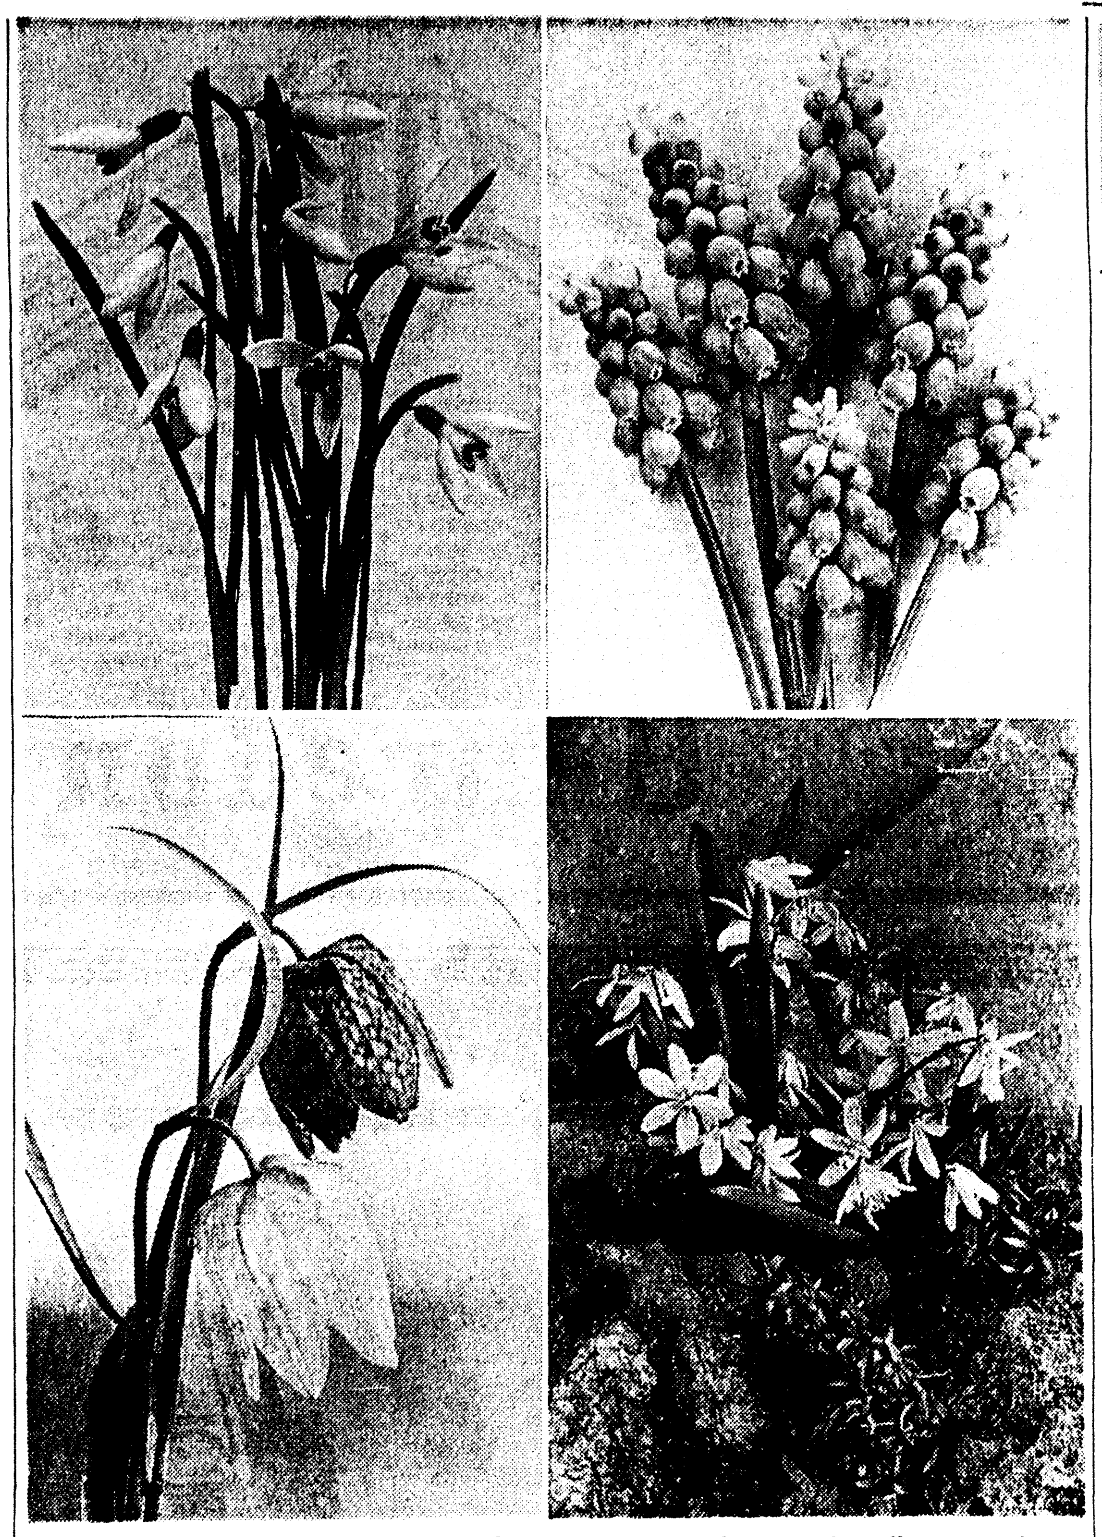
In selecting your plant, judge it against other plants of the same variety and size in the nursery. Camellias vary greatly in growth habit and appearance according the species and variety. Some are naturally lanky like the Sasanquas, spareleafed like the reticulatas, or dwarf, or bushy, or strong. Pick the most normal plant — not the tallest or the most budded or the biggest — but the one which is well-branched from the ground up, with the freshest, greenest foliage and best shape. Actually, if you select the plant with the greatest number of healthy leaves you will probably have the plant with the best root system too, for the quantity and quality of foliage is a very good indication of the quantity and quality of roots in the container below. Needless to say, the plant must be absolutely free of any insect - pests or diseases. Examine the bark and foliage of the plant carefully for scale, which can invade even the best regulated nursery occasionally.

NO ADVANTAGE

There is no particular advantage in buying large specimen camellia plants. For all practical purposes camellias in one-gallon or five-gallon containers, ranging from two to four feet in height, are the best buy for the beginner. These plants are inexpensive, easily transplanted and become established so quickly that they often overtake the larger sizes in a few years.

It is not necessary to wait until the blooming season to buy camellias. They may be purchased and planted from containers safely the year round. Only when one is anxious to get a certain variable strain or coloring in a camellia plant as, for example, "Ward's Daikagura," Adolph Audusson "Special" or "English" Donckelarii is is necessary to see the plant in bloom before buying.

However, even these unpredictable strains may be ordered from reputable nurserymen with assurance, for they always guarantee their plants to be properly labeled. In the last analysis your best guide and insurance in buying camellias is to patronize a reliable camellia grower.



SNOWDROPS (upper left), grape hyacinths (upper right), guinea hen flower (lower left), and scillas or squills (lower right) are among the little gems that bloom in the garden in early spring. All of them grow from bulbs, and must be planted in early autumn. Though one tiny bulb will produce only one tiny flower, a hundred tiny bulbs will create quite a colorful area. Snowdrops are white-flowered, scillas and grape hyacinths have blue blooms, while guinea hen flowers are checkered, usually purple, but sometimes white.

On The House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Loose and crumbling mortar in the joints between bricks should be repaired before a major financial outlay becomes necessary. Aside from the poor appearance and general deterioration of the outside wall, the condition permits the entry of rain and moisture with resultant damage to inside walls and ceilings.

Replacing the loosened mortar, known among professionals as tuck pointing, can be handled by the do-it yourselfer with reasonable efficiency if he follows certain simple fundamentals. The first step involves cleaning out all pieces of the old mortar which have disintegrated. There is no necessity to chip out old mortar which is still in solid condition. The loose mortar can be taken out with a cold chisel, an old screwdriver or some other similar tool. For major overhauls involving hundreds of bricks, there is a special tool for this purpose.

NEXT STEP

The next step is to thoroughly wet the area from which the loose mortar has been moved. This will prevent new mortar from drying too quickly.

You can buy ready-mixed mortar at building supply dealers, lumber yards and some hardware stores. After the mortar ingredients have ben mixed while dry, add water until there is a fairly thick consistency. If you wish to make your own mortar, mix one part of hydrated lime and one part of portland cement with five parts of sand, then add the water.

Apply the mortar to the joints with a pointed trowel, being sure it is packed in well. Keep a damp cloth handy to wipe off instantly any mortar which gets on the face of the bricks. It will come off easily if the wiping is done at once; it will be difficult to remove if you wait until you have completed the job.

Decorating Services Help Budget

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Young married people should investigate decorating services available at their local stores, advises interior designer David Eugene Bell of New York.

"You'll be surprised at savings that can be made this way. A good person can help you plan everything from floor to ceiling so that a room is completely coordinated, and less expensive in the long run than shopping on your own with the risk of making expensive mistakes, and you have the store's good name behind the transaction," he says. This is especially important in areas where decorating services are limited, he says.

COLORFUL

The over-all color scheme was olive, deep orange, blue, white.

"I built the room around the fabric, about the easiest way to choose a color scheme," Bell says.

Garden Jobs Reminders

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

Some garden jobs that need attention in November are: Clean flower beds; clean away dead annuals and cut back perennials that have ceased blooming and remake beds for later planting.

Beds which are not to be replanted right away profit from being worked up and left in the rough. Dead leaves or other vegetable matter worked into the beds help to loosen and lighten the soil for spring planting.

You, Mrs. Gardener, may plant annuals that survive Louisiana winters as the pansy, calendula and sweet pea.

PLANT RYE GRASS

If you among those who want some green grass through the winter, plant rye grass in early November. Over seeding is a common problem that will bring headaches in the spring when it becomes heavy and matted. Your primary lawn grass will get off to a better start in early spring if not crowded by a heavy turf of rye grass.

Before a frost arrives, select plants growing outdoors for indoor enjoyment through the winter. Water well at transplanting and then keep the soil a little on the dry side until plant becomes well established. For large hard to manage speciments prune back severely. This will provide the proper ration of leaf surface to roots, some of which will have been cut at digging time.

STATE MEETING

Your home demonstration agents. Mrs. Fred Riser, Mrs. Ernest Grubbs, Mrs. C. D. Henderson, and Mrs. L. J. Bower, will be in Baton Rouge this week to attend the State Home Demonstration Council meeting. The theme of the meeting will be, "Learn by Living." Highlights of the session will be talks by Mrs. Lillie Mand Alexander, Southern States Program Leader of the Extension Service, Washington, D.C.; Miss Ellen LeNoir, retired state agent of Louisiana, and Mrs. Laurie S. Mobley, chairman of the women's section of the Louisiana Farm Bureau.

A great big thanks to the members of the Ouachita Parish Home Demonstration Council for the lovely tea that they gave for yours truly. Also, thanks to those who took time out of a busy schedule to come and add their congratulations. A great big thanks to the committee members in charge of the event: Mrs. L. J. Bower, chairman: Mrs. Bill Dunn, Mrs. D. E. McGraw, Mrs. E. W. Earl, Mrs. Fred Riser, Mrs. J. G. Haynes, Mrs. A. R. Robinson.

Top Award Designs Seen

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Delhi Garden Club presented top award winning flower arrangements from their recent Home Show, Saturday, Oct. 26, in the Home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cutler of Delhi. The club's president, Mrs. Truman Green, and the Flower show chairman, Mrs. S. T. Bradley, with several other club members brought their Blue Ribbon winners for the T. V. and Fifth District Garden Center Program last Wednesday.

"Les Fleur de la Maison" was the theme for the show. From the "Living Room" section Mrs. Truman Green brought her design, "Double Conversation Piece," twin designs for a pair of end tables. These were small identical designs featuring the Hogarth line made of ivy in exact Cherub containers. The focal interest was a filler of small cerese mums with gold centers. Just the added touch for the conversational pieces on these end tables beside the twin lamps. Won a Blue Ribbon which has to score 90.

The next room was the kitchen—which yielded three blue ribbon winners. This must prove that this is truly the most loved and most popular room in the home. "Kitchen Show - Off" — a design made for the lighted niche above the sink, was made by Mrs. Earline Bruce. This design was just perfect for the alloted space. Baby ivy formed the horizontal line in a small gold tea pot. Yellow mums were massed into a triangular pattern to form the focal interest — simple, well done, very effective, and a blue ribbon winner.

"Brunch Basket," made by Mrs. Betty Coats was a design of fresh fruits placed on a large wicker tray as a container. Starting with two pineapples and an egg plant turned on their sides at one end of the tray followed with Japanese persimmons, lemons and limes placed in a line of green grapes and ivy curving around the inside rim of the tray, finishing with a focal interest or accessory, a ceramic rooster, placed high on a green wooden candle holder as though he was crowing over all the goodies below. All colors blended well, creating a real harmonious and interesting design. It won a blue ribbon, of course.

SAUCY TALK

"Saucy Talk" — a design to be placed in the barbecue corner, was made by Mrs. S. T. Bradley and merited the Award of Distinction, a Blue ribbon design with a score of 95 — highest of all scores in the class featuring other than fresh cut plant materials. Mrs. Bradley used a tall wine bottle, filling it with water (colored red). This bottle was placed in a wicker holder in colors of yellow and red. The line, a Hogarth, showing plenty of rhythm was formed by using the dried leather fern (deep brown color) strengthened with curving dried okra pods and swirling wisteria branch. For focal interest one garlic blossom was used, accented on all sides with bright red peppers and dried dill. Certainly the materials were suitable for a good sauce, and, so cleverly combined to create a real conversational piece.

In the Dressing Room, "Powder Puff Fantasy," was designed by Mrs. C. C. Cutler. This was an arrangement for the dressing table. Mrs. Cutler used bold colors of green and gold to harmonize with the color scheme of the room. Aspidestra leaves, cleverly furled and rolled formed the background for the line of golden marigolds placed in a soft gold compote. For filler and softness added to the boldness of the marigolds, she used clipped pine. This also added contrast which always creates interest. This design was placed in the corner beside the mirror which reflected it's image effectively. The score was 95, which gave it the Tri-Color Award for the section requiring all fresh plant materials.

MANY WINNERS

There were many other blue ribbon winners in this lovely show that could not be transported at this late date. Congratulations to all the arrangers for their contribution to a beautiful show in a beautiful setting.

Another flower show that proved outstanding and educational to the flower lovers was the chrysanthemum show in Ruston, Tech Student Center, Oct. 29-30, "Chrysanthemums —Queen of the Autumn," by The Ruston Chrysanthemum Society.

It was almost unbelievable to see the unusual mum specimens in the horticulture display, as well as in the Design Division. Those who saw the show will agree with me on this. This was an ideal time to write a list of names of these early blooming, hardy varieties, and see first hand what can be done with mums in our own location. For your benefit, Dr. John Wright, horticulture professor at Tech, has given me the names of these early varieties listed as follows:

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Two Plants Delightful

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

It seems strange that a family of plants with as many members from the tropical regions of the world as the Arum Family should have among its genera a species which deliberately waits until just before hard frost to start into growth, but that is exactly what the evergreen Arum italicum does.

This mottled - leaved little arum is one of the most striking evergreen foliage plants we can grow out of doors in Southern gardens. How so many gardeners have missed it is hard to say because your columnist has never seen a gardener who did not say "What on earth is this beautiful thing, and where did you get it?" My reply has to be "Why, I have grown it nearly all my life, and I would not wish to garden through a winter without it. It ought to be on every bulb counter in the Fall."

PLAIN-LEAVES

The Italian arum comes in a plain - leaved form and in many variations as to the mottling, but the best form is the one sold in the horticultural trade in this country Catalogues of the West Coast nurseries dealing in bulbs which were ordered by many inquirers to this column year before last list Arum italicum. We have mentioned it in the column before, but we seldom see it in gardens.

When Spring comes around, the Italian arum sends up a new set of leaves and blooms. The flowers are like small calla - lilies, but they look as if they were made of parchment. How this plant can take such low temperatures without damage is difficult to see. None of the severe weather we have had lately has seemed to damage the leaves. They lie flat on the ground during the coldest weather and then begin to rise slightly as the spring rains come to us. If you grow a plant in the house, the foliage will stand erect in winter.

VIEWPOINT

We think arum italicum is more beautiful than many of its kindred tropical pot plants like aglaonema, alocasia, anthurium, caladium, deliciosa and the legions of different kinds of philodendrons that run all over people's houses. It is a medium-sized pot plant and will, of course, thrive in very cold places since it grows out-of-doors in winter.

HARDY CYCLAMEN

Another out - door plant that is delicate and beautiful in a very cool window without too much direct sunlight is the mottled leaved cyclamen neapolitanum about which we have written so much in the past few years and with which correspondents to the column say they are immensely pleased. The flowers of this cyclamen started to bloom in a pot on your columnist's window sill in the air-cooled house on July 4th. As the last little flowers have just gone, and the handsome ivy-like leaves have taken their place.

Camellia Has Large Following

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles on the selection, growth and proper care of Camellias in the Monroe area. These are prepared by members of the Northeast Camellia Club, and deal with the problems and experiences of those who have raised the plants in northeast Louisiana.)

No flower that blooms in the Southland is more admired or more sought after than is the camellia. Its many varieties now run into the thousands and each variety produces a bloom, characteristic in form and color, only of that particular variety. Among these many varieties now available are early, midseason and late bloomers. Thus camellia growers are able to enjoy these magnificient flowers during the fall, winter and spring months of September through March.

Anyone who enjoys these cold weather bloomers can grow them by observing a few fundamental rules, all of which tend to duplicate the conditions under which they grow in their native habitat, where they flourish in a mild climate, in an acid soil, with rainfall and a moist atmosphere.

BUYING TIPS

Nothing will contribute more to success in growing camellias than beginning with strong, healthy, vigorous plants. The health of the plant is far more important than its size. Many new and beautiful varieties are on the market today, some of which are best adapted to greenhouse growing and will not bloom well when planted in the open, so before selecting your plants advise with your nurseryman about the best outdoor varieties.

Once the varieties have been decided upon another problem faces the buyer. How can he know and find the best possible plant of that variety in the nursery? Buying camellias wisely is an important technique that most amateurs learn only after much needless expense and disappointment. Yet, actually, anyone can become a good camellia buyer by learning a few simple rules.

ADVICE

Always buy from a reputable nurseryman. Select your plants personally, if possible, although it is perfectly safe to order by phone or mail from established firms.

Container grown plants are usually preferable to plants dug from the field or beds, as they are easier to handle, plant and establish. The size of the container or ball and the height or caliper of a plant are not accurate criteria for judging the worth of a camellia. A vigorous gallon-can plant is worth more than a poor five-gallon plant; a perfectly healed graft on one - inch stock is far better than a sloppy union on two - inch stock; a fine 18 - inch plant will outstrip a weak four-foot plant in a single season.

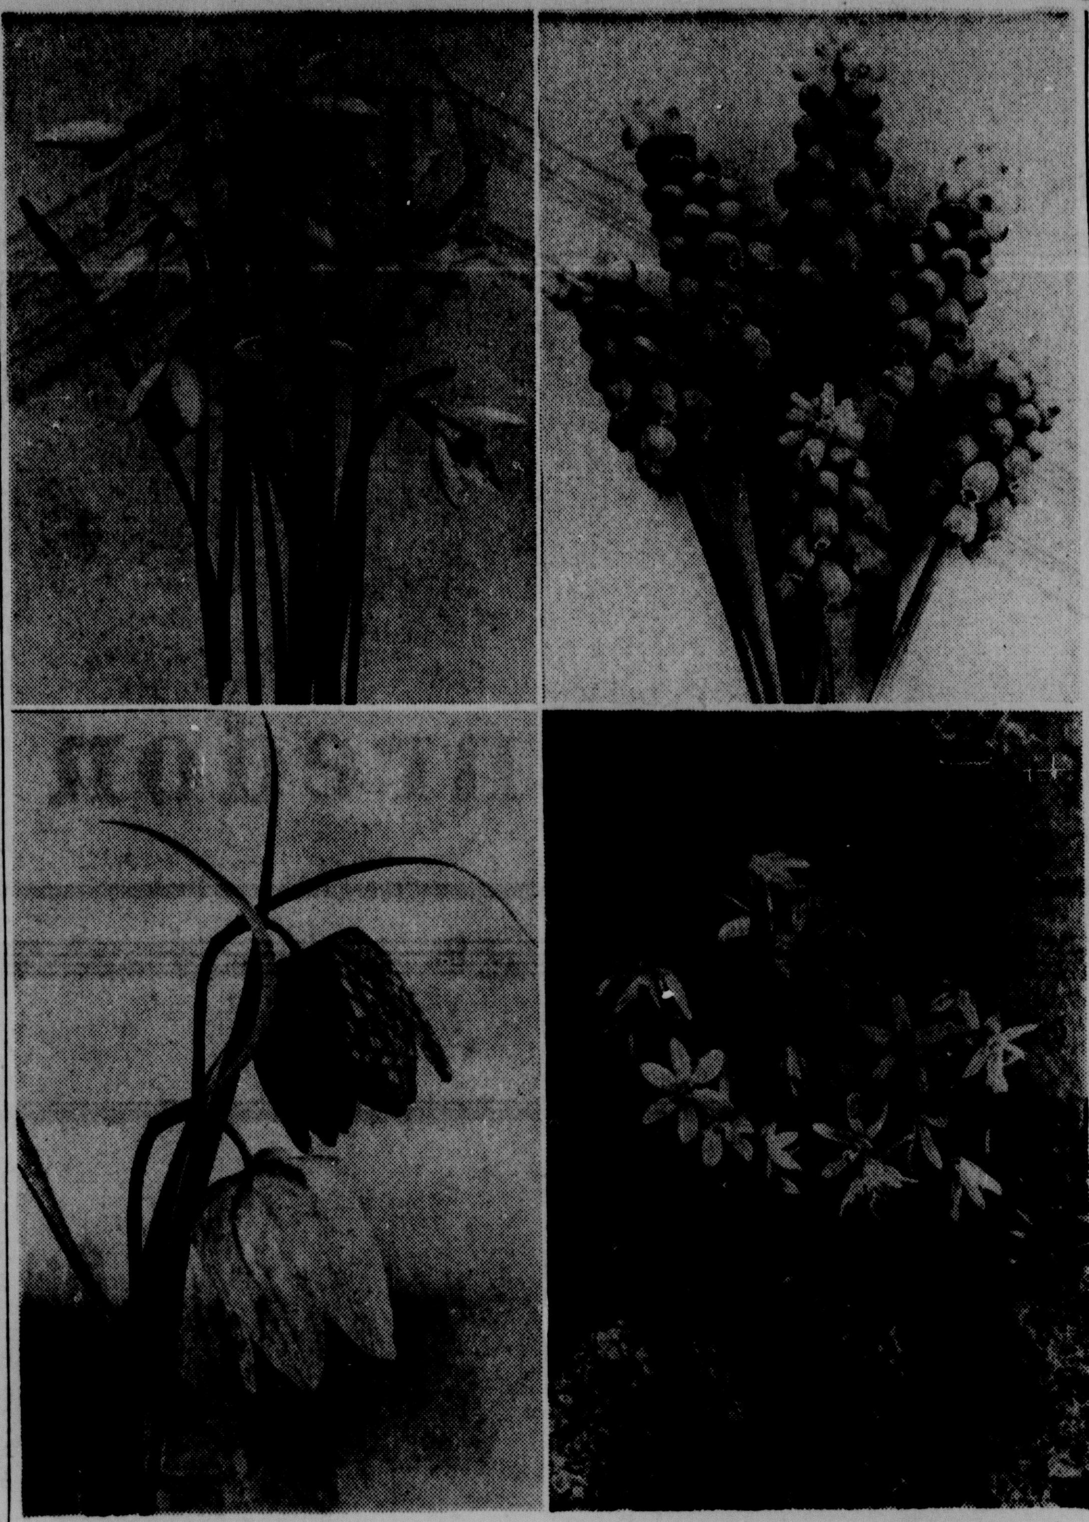
In selecting your plant, judge it against other plants of the same variety and size in the nursery. Camellias vary greatly in growth habit and appearance according the species and variety. Some are naturally lanky like the Sasanquas, spare-leafed like the reticulatas, or dwarf, or bushy, or strong. Pick the most normal plant — not the tallest or the most budded or the biggest — but the one which is well-branched from the ground up, with the freshest, greenest foliage and best shape. Actually, if you select the plant with the greatest number of healthy leaves you will probably have the plant with the best root system too, for the quantity and quality of foliage is a very good indication of the quantity and quality of roots in the container below. Needless to say, the plant must be absolutely free of any insect - pests or diseases. Examine the bark and foliage of the plant carefully for scale, which can invade even the best regulated nursery occasionally.

NO ADVANTAGE

There is no particular advantage in buying large specimen camellia plants. For all practical purposes camellias in one-gallon or five-gallon containers, ranging from two to four feet in height, are the best buy for the beginner. These plants are inexpensive, easily transplanted and become established so quickly that they often overtake the larger sizes in a few years.

It is not necessary to wait until the blooming season to buy camellias. They may be purchased and planted from containers safely the year round. Only when one is anxious to get a certain variable strain or coloring in a camellia plant as, for example, "Ward's Daikagura," Adolph Audusson "Special" or "English" Donckelarii is is necessary to see the plant in bloom before buying.

However, even these unpredictable strains may be ordered from reputable nurserymen with assurance, for they always guarantee their plants to be properly labeled. In the last analysis your best guide and insurance in buying camellias is to patronize a reliable camellia grower.



SNOWDROPS (upper left), grape hyacinths (upper right), guinea hen flower (lower left), and scillas or squills (lower right) are among the little gems that bloom in the garden in early spring. All of them grow from bulbs, and must be planted in early autumn. Though one tiny bulb will produce only one tiny flower, a hundred tiny bulbs will create quite a colorful area. Snowdrops are white-flowered, scillas and grape hyacinths have blue blooms, while guinea hen flowers are checkered, usually purple, but sometimes white.

Loose and crumbling mortar in the joints between bricks should be repaired before a major financial outlay becomes necessary. Aside from the poor appearance and general deterioration of the outside wall, the condition permits the entry of rain and moisture with resultant damage to inside walls and ceilings.

Replacing the loosened mortar, known among professionals as tuck pointing, can be handled by the do-it yourselfer with reasonable efficiency if he follows certain simple fundamentals. The first step involves cleaning out all pieces of the old mortar which have disintegrated. There is no necessity to chip out old mortar which is still in solid condition. The loose mortar can be taken out with a cold chisel, an old screwdriver or some other similar tool. For major overhauls involving hundreds of bricks, there is a special tool for this purpose.

NEXT STEP

The next step is to thoroughly wet the area from which the loose mortar has been moved. This will prevent new mortar from drying too quickly.

You can buy ready-mixed mortar at building supply dealers, lumber yards and some hardware stores. After the mortar ingredients have ben mixed while dry, add water until there is a fairly thick consistency. If you wish to make your own mortar, mix one part of hydrated lime and one part of portland cement with five parts of sand, then add the water.

Apply the mortar to the joints with a pointed trowel, being sure it is packed in well. Keep a damp cloth handy to wipe off instantly any mortar which gets on the face of the bricks. It will come off easily if the wiping is done at once; it will be difficult to remove if you wait until you have completed the job.

Decorating Services Help Budget

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Young married people should investigate decorating services available at their local stores, advises interior designer David Eugene Bell of New York.

"You'll be surprised at savings that can be made this way. A good person can help you plan everything from floor to ceiling so that a room is completely coordinated, and less expensive in the long run than shopping on your own with the risk of making expensive mistakes, and you have the store's good name behind the transaction," he says. This is especially important in areas where decorating services are limited, he says.

COLORFUL

The over-all color scheme was olive, deep orange, blue, white.

"I built the room around the fabric, about the easiest way to choose a color scheme," Bell says.

Garden Jobs Reminders

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

Some garden jobs that need attention in November are: Clean flower beds; clean away dead annuals and cut back perennials that have ceased blooming and remake beds for later planting.

Beds which are not to be replanted right away profit from being worked up and left in the rough. Dead leaves or other vegetable matter worked into the beds help to loosen and lighten the soil for spring planting.

You, Mrs. Gardener, may plant annuals that survive Louisiana winters as the pansy, calendula and sweet pea.

PLANT RYE GRASS

If you among those who want some green grass through the winter, plant rye grass in early November. Over seeding is a common problem that will bring headaches in the spring when it becomes heavy and matted. Your primary lawn grass will get off to a better start in early spring if not crowded by a heavy turf of rye grass.

Before a frost arrives, select plants growing outdoors for indoor enjoyment through the winter. Water well at transplanting and then keep the soil a little on the dry side until plant becomes well established. For large hard to manage speciments prune back severely. This will provide the proper ration of leaf surface to roots, some of which will have been cut at digging time.

TOPS MAY'S TOTAL

October Building Permits Highest

Building permits in Monroe continued to decline slightly during the past week, but the total for the month marked October as the month with the greatest number of permits sold.

Costs of permitsh for the week of Oct. 26 — Nov. 1 totaled $72,315, decreasing from the $72,325 of the previous week. Only 28 permits were issued, as compared with a prior 34.

Unseasonal dry and warm weather creating good construction conditions was the probable cause of the large number of permits granted during October, according to Dale Martha, coordinator for the City of Monroe inspector's department.

The 127 permits issued during the past month topped May's total of 126. May was this year's peak month in the building trade Martha explained.

Dominating the permits during the past week were orders for additions and demolishing buildings. The breakdown shows nine additions, eight demolitions, five new structures, four moves and two alterations.

Largest single permit went to M. L. Cooley for a new metal warehouse to be constructed at 405 Hudson Lane, at a cost of $24,000. Another large new structure is planned by Pan American Life Insurance — a $19,000 brick insurance office building at 2115 Forsythe Ave.

Mid-South Homes, Inc. was issued permits for two $11,000 brick veneer residences, one to be located at 2106 Park Ave. and the other at 1510 Tidewater.

The other grant for a new structure was to Curtis Freeman for construction of a $200 storage building at 1011 St. John.

Clint Hamilton Enterprises, Inc. applied for permission to remodel a stucco washeteria at 317 Hudson Lane, to the extent of $1,000. Hattie Coleman got a permit to remodel her frame residence at 3104 Barlow for $400.

Additions to frame residences were as follows: Roy C. Welch, 3711 Webster, $2,000; Voley Fuchen, 3108 Barlow, $500; R. M. Kirkham, 3110 Gordan, $700; Doc Moss, 3911 Wiley, $100; Oliver Evans, 2807 Georgia, $750; Robert Whitehead, 806 Wilson, $150; Mrs. J. M. Ourso, 4307 Harrison, $1,500; and William Dawkins, 2603 Oak.

Residences to be moved include those of Mary Cascio, from 604 Wood to 303 Wilson; William C. Hines Jr., from 710 Wood to 4102 Curry; Jack L. Smith, from 805 Sterlington Road to 601 S. 13th St.; and C. O. Boyd, to move outside the city.

Orders for demolishing went to F. C. Eason Const. Co., at 2213 Jasmine; Howard K. McAlmond, 807 Calypso; Billy McKinney, 605 Calypso; Elbert Scarbrough, 400 7th; A. G. Patterson, 407 and 411 6th; Walter Brooks, 709 Oak; and Harriet Louis, 402 7th.

The 127 permits issued during October totaled $1,484,305. Breakdown for the month's activities is as follows: one-family dwellings, 7, totalling $91,000; two-family dwelling, 1, $15,000; one college dormitory, $1,126,000; one fire station, $48,389; one warehouse, $24,000; one shop building, $4-300; 61 alterations and additions to residences, $87,455; 16 alterations and additions to non-residences, $88,000; 20 moved buildings and 18 demolished.

BY DISTRICT OFFICE

Car License Mail Renewals Pushed

North Louisiana residents are still being urged to purchase their 1964-65 auto license plates in the advance renewal-by-mail program being offered this year by the Monroe district office of the Louisiana Department of Revenue.

District Manager Fred M. Ussery Jr. continued to stress the fact that this system will prove a time-saving convenience for both the public and for the revenue office staff.

"We are well pleased with the progress of the program," Ussery remarked, adding, "There has been a very good response by the public."

At the onset of the advance promotion, Ussery and his staff set a pre-season goal of 5,000 orders. To date, they have received about 1,000 advance mail renewals.

"We will have a comparatively slack period for about a month before the rush of the regular registration renewal time. During this period we are better able to regulate our work and prepare more plates for mailing," the manager explained.

Orders will be processed and the 1964-65 auto tags will be put in the mail at the start of the official sale, which will run from December 1 through February 6.

"We want to encourage the public to mail in their renewals before the Dec. 1 starting date," Ussery continued, "but the mail program will continue throughout the registration period."

Renewal by mail application forms are available at certain service stations throughout the Twin Cities. Forms have also been sent to various establishments in the vicinity employing large numbers of personnel.

Perhaps the greatest response has come from the schools, Ussery commented. Requests have come into the revenue office from many of the institutions asking for additional application blanks for faculty members.

The necessary papers can also be obtained by going by the local revenue office, located at 611 N. 3rd St.

To purchase 1964-65 plates by mail, first obtain the license renewal forms. Complete this paper in triplicate and enclose with it a 1964 registration (pink) slip and a check or money order for $6.20 payable to Department of Revenue, State of Louisiana. Mail to: Louisiana Department of Revenue, P. O. Box 2897, Monroe, La.

The orders will be processed as soon as received at the local office, but license plates will not be mailed until after the start of the official registration period on Dec. 1.

This is the first year Louisiana has had two-year license plates. The $6 fee covers auto registration for the two-year period, and the 20 cents is for postage expense.

New tags will be dark blue and utilize a new numering system. Replacing the pelican in the cneter of the plate will be the code number of the district. The Fifth Congressional District, the territory under the jurisdiction of the Monroe revenue office, will have the letter "F", corresponding with the letter of the local state police unit.

All citizens in the 14 parishes of the fifth district obtain their license plates from the Monroe office. However, during the final three weeks of the official renewal period, temporary branch offices are set up in the parish seats of each parish.

The renewal-by-mail plan should be a great help to persons living outside the immediate Monroe area, Ussery said.

Jack Benny's Wife Robbed Of Valuable Stones

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Livingstone, wife of comedian Jack Benny, was robbed Saturday at gunpoint of jewelry valued up to $200,000 in her suite at the Hotel Pierre, police reported.

Miss Livingstone told detectives she was alone when an armed man, shabbily dressed, walked in and announced, "This is a stickup."

The six pieces taken included an emerald-cut diamond ring valued at $150,000, Miss Livingstone told officers.

TOPS MAY'S TOTAL

October Building Permits Highest

Building permits in Monroe continued to decline slightly during the past week, but the total for the month marked October as the month with the greatest number of permits sold.

Costs of permitsh for the week of Oct. 26 — Nov. 1 totaled $72,315, decreasing from the $72,325 of the previous week. Only 28 permits were issued, as compared with a prior 34.

Unseasonal dry and warm weather creating good construction conditions was the probable cause of the large number of permits granted during October, according to Dale Martha, coordinator for the City of Monroe inspector's department.

The 127 permits issued during the past month topped May's total of 126. May was this year's peak month in the building trade Martha explained.

Dominating the permits during the past week were orders for additions and demolishing buildings. The breakdown shows nine additions, eight demolitions, five new structures, four moves and two alterations.

Largest single permit went to M. L. Cooley for a new metal warehouse to be constructed at 405 Hudson Lane, at a cost of $24,000. Another large new structure is planned by Pan American Life Insurance — a $19,000 brick insurance office building at 2115 Forsythe Ave.

Mid-South Homes, Inc. was issued permits for two $11,000 brick veneer residences, one to be located at 2106 Park Ave. and the other at 1510 Tidewater.

The other grant for a new structure was to Curtis Freeman for construction of a $200 storage building at 1011 St. John.

Clint Hamilton Enterprises, Inc. applied for permission to remodel a stucco washeteria at 317 Hudson Lane, to the extent of $1,000. Hattie Coleman got a permit to remodel her frame residence at 3104 Barlow for $400.

Additions to frame residences were as follows: Roy C. Welch, 3711 Webster, $2,000; Voley Fuchen, 3108 Barlow, $500; R. M. Kirkham, 3110 Gordan, $700; Doc Moss, 3911 Wiley, $100; Oliver Evans, 2807 Georgia, $750; Robert Whitehead, 806 Wilson, $150; Mrs. J. M. Ourso, 4307 Harrison, $1,500; and William Dawkins, 2603 Oak.

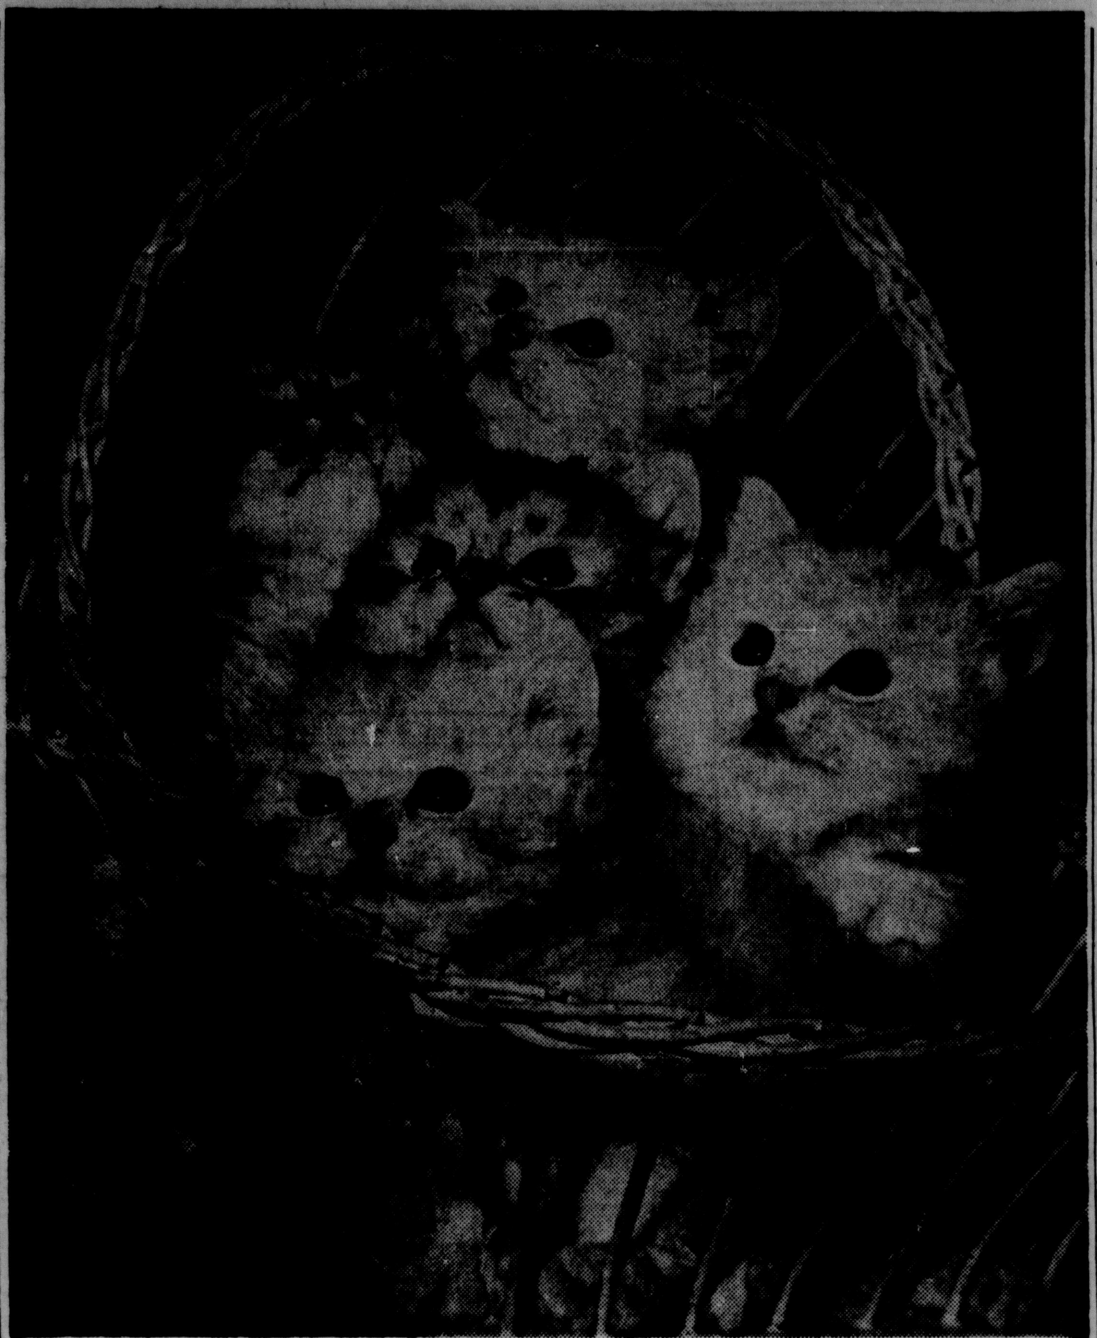
Residences to be moved include those of Mary Cascio, from 604 Wood to 303 Wilson; William C. Hines Jr., from 710 Wood to 4102 Curry; Jack L. Smith, from 805 Sterlington Road to 601 S. 13th St.; and C. O. Boyd, to move outside the city.

Orders for demolishing went to F. C. Eason Const. Co., at 2213 Jasmine; Howard K. McAlmond, 807 Calypso; Billy McKinney, 605 Calypso; Elbert Scarbrough, 400 7th; A. G. Patterson, 407 and 411 6th; Walter Brooks, 709 Oak; and Harriet Louis, 402 7th.

The 127 permits issued during October totaled $1,484,305. Breakdown for the month's activities is as follows: one-family dwellings, 7, totalling $91,000; two-family dwelling, 1, $15,000; one college dormitory, $1,126,000; one fire station, $48,389; one warehouse, $24,000; one shop building, $4-300; 61 alterations and additions to residences, $87,455; 16 alterations and additions to non-residences, $88,000; 20 moved buildings and 18 demolished.

FLOW TO NEEDY

NEW YORK (AP) —Clothing, food and medical supplies valued at $5,271,405 were shipped by Lutheran World Relief Inc. to 15 countries during the first half of 1963.



"FIVE LITTLE KITTENS" photographed by Louise Hill of Oklahoma City, is one of 50 prints from the 10th annual Gulf States Camera Club Council Salon, which will be on display today from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the College Union Building at Northeast State College, and daily thereafter for the next two weeks under sponsorship of the North Louisiana Camera Club.

CATHOLIC SURVEY

CHICAGO (AP) — A nationwide survey of Catholics is under way to attempt to measure the effect of parochial school education on their lives. It is being carried out by the National Opinion Research Center of the University of Chicago in cooperation with the University of Notre Dame, financed by a $136,000 Carnegie Corporation grant.

BY DISTRICT OFFICE

Car License Mail Renewals Pushed

North Louisiana residents are still being urged to purchase their 1964-65 auto license plates in the advance renewal-by-mail program being offered this year by the Monroe district office of the Louisiana Department of Revenue.

District Manager Fred M. Ussery Jr. continued to stress the fact that this system will prove a time-saving convenience for both the public and for the revenue office staff.

"We are well pleased with the progress of the program," Ussery remarked, adding, "There has been a very good response by the public."

At the onset of the advance promotion, Ussery and his staff set a pre-season goal of 5,000 orders. To date, they have received about 1,000 advance mail renewals.

"We will have a comparatively slack period for about a month before the rush of the regular registration renewal time. During this period we are better able to regulate our work and prepare more plates for mailing," the manager explained.

Orders will be processed and the 1964-65 auto tags will be put in the mail at the start of the official sale, which will run from December 1 through February 6.

"We want to encourage the public to mail in their renewals before the Dec. 1 starting date," Ussery continued, "but the mail program will continue throughout the registration period."

Renewal by mail application forms are available at certain service stations throughout the Twin Cities. Forms have also been sent to various establishments in the vicinity employing large numbers of personnel.

Perhaps the greatest response has come from the schools, Ussery commented. Requests have come into the revenue office from many of the institutions asking for additional application blanks for faculty members.

The necessary papers can also be obtained by going by the local revenue office, located at 611 N. 3rd St.

To purchase 1964-65 plates by mail, first obtain the license renewal forms. Complete this paper in triplicate and enclose with it a 1964 registration (pink) slip and a check or money order for $6.20 payable to Department of Revenue, State of Louisiana. Mail to; Louisiana Department of Revenue, P. O. Box 2897, Monroe, La.

The orders will be processed as soon as received at the local office, but license plates will not be mailed until after the start of the official registration period on Dec. 1.

This is the first year Louisiana has had two-year license plates. The $6 fee covers auto registration for the two-year period, and the 20 cents is for postage expense.

New tags will be dark blue and utilize a new numering system. Replacing the pelican in the cneter of the plate will be the code number of the district. The Fifth Congressional District, the territory under the jurisdiction of the Monroe revenue office, will have the letter "F", corresponding with the letter of the local state police unit.

All citizens in the 14 parishes of the fifth district obtain their license plates from the Monroe office. However, during the final three weeks of the official renewal period, temporary branch offices are set up in the parish seats of each parish.

The renewal-by-mail plan should be a great help to persons living outside the immediate Monroe area, Ussery said.

12 COMPLETIONS

Drilling Activity Heavy For Week In Monroe Area

Activity was heavy last week and widely scattered over the Monroe Oil and Gas District, according to a report released by Manager Duncan S. Cook.

Twelve wells were completed in seven of the 15 parishes, and substantial gains were recorded in the number of new locations staked in the area and the number of rigs actively drilling or testing.

Continuing the trend of recent weeks, new locations spurted to a total of 44, scattered over 10 parishes, while there were 42 rigs active in 11 parishes.

LaSALLE HIGH

The parish breakdown showed most of the completions in LaSalle, with four, followed by the Union Parish Monroe Field's three, and one each in Rapides, Ouachita, Grant, Concordia and Catahoula.

LaSalle was by far the leading area for active rigs, as well, with a total of 17 drilling or testing. Following were Concordia with five, Catahoula with four, Tensas, Rapides and Avoyelles with three each, Ouachita and Union with two each, and Madison, Franklin and Caldwell had one each.

The breakdown on the new locations included 12 in Avoyelles Parish, six in Union (the Monroe Field), five each in Concordia, LaSalle and Tensas, three each in Ouachita (the Monroe Field) and Catahoula, two each in Rapides and Caldwell, and one in LaSalle.

Eleven wells were plugged and abandoned during the week, leaving the total on inactive sites at 87. Locations numbered 82, with 54 listed as drilling.

Solon Seeks Protection In FHA Homes

Hardships Caused By Major Defects Measure's Object

WASHINGTON (Special) — Additional protection for FHA home owners who suffer hardships because of major defects in new homes purchased with FHA-insured mortgages would be provided under a bill introduced this week by U.S. Rep. Joe D. Waggonner of Plain Dealing.

The bill would authorize FHA to pay for the correction of "structural or other major defects affecting the liability of the property" where the house was built subject to FHA standards and inspections and the defect cannot be corrected under the one-year builder's warranty now required in new FHA homes.

"We have had the one-year waranty in effect for some time." Waggonner of the Fourth District said, "and in most cases this has served to protect FHA home owners, but there have been some instances where the building corporation is no longer in existence, or has no assets, or refuses to cooperate.

"To provide relief in such cases my bill would permit FHA, over a two - year period from the time the loan is insured, to make the repairs from FHA's reserve funds. FHA, which is wholly self-supporting, now has over $1 billion in reserves."

FHA's property standards and inspection system, its builder warranty requirements, and the reliability of the home building industry in general assure that such cases presently are few in number. Nevertheless, they do occur and it is of small comfort to the affected home owner to know that his is an isolated instance. I believe we ought to assist him in protecting his investment, and this is the aim of my bill.

"Under present law," Waggonner said, "FHA can make these repairs, but only after it has acquired the property. Before this can take place, the owner must have defaulted in his mortgage payments and foreclosure proceedings must have been instituted. It just makes good sense to let FHA correct matters before the home owner has been displaced and lost his equity in the property.

"This measure will insure that the FHA inspection is all that it is required to be and that the buyer is protected in the event it is not.

"The general objective of my bill is supported by the FHA and also by the National Association of Home Builders, and I am hopeful that we can enact protective legislation of this kind for the FHA home owner early next session," Waggonner said.

PAPAL POSSESSION

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul VI, in his capacity as bishop of Rome, will take formal possession of his cathedral, St. John Lateran, Nov. 10, the Vatican announced Saturday.

Stocks Take 1st Loss In Three Weeks

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week took its first clear-cut loss in three weeks, but it was a small one.

In the preceding week the averages advanced even though considerably more stocks declined than advanced. This week both the averages and the figures on gains and losses were in gear.

The contradiction between what the averages were doing and what most listed stocks were doing continued for the first couple of days this week. The Dow Jones industrial average touched record highs Monday and Tuesday, establishing its peak of 760.50 at the Tuesday close.

On Wednesday when the market underwent its sharpest decline in a month as profits were taken briskly in many of the blue chips whose strong rise had pushed the averages into record high ground.

Stocks rallied moderately on Thursday and performed unevenly on Friday.

For the week as a whole, the 30-stock Dow industrials took a moderate loss of 1.88 at 753.73.

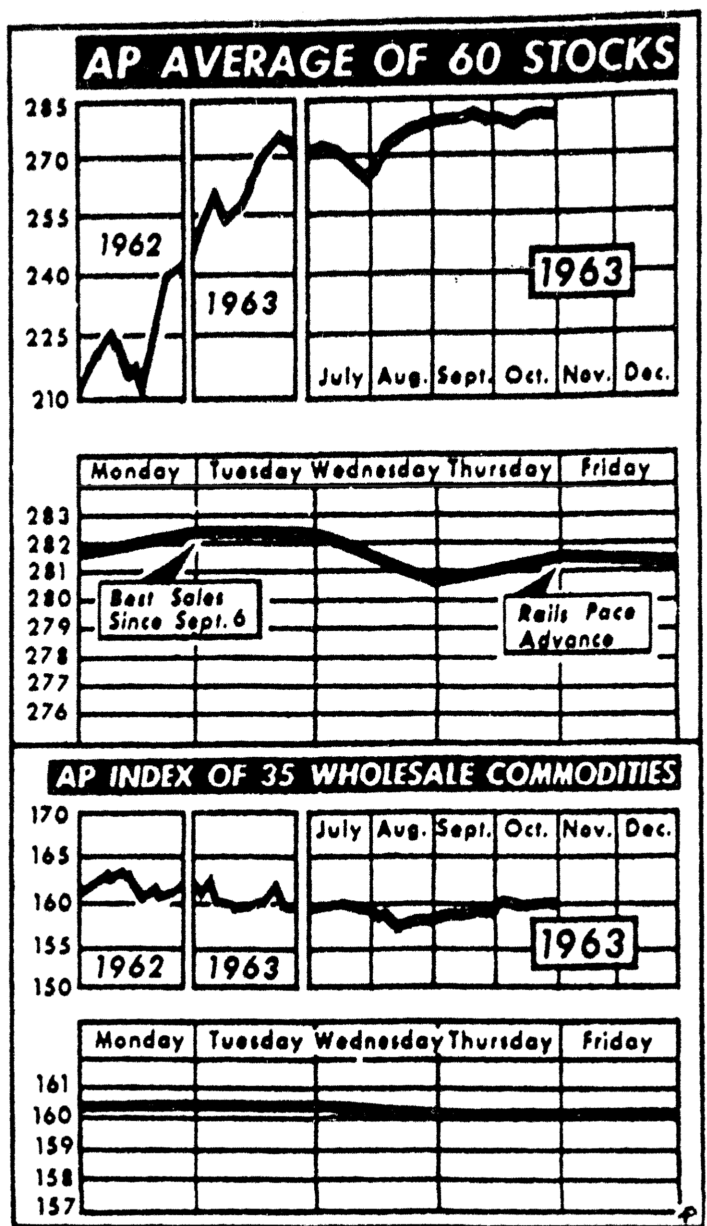
The Associated Press average of 60 stocks also showed a minor decline as it lost .5 at 2.81.2.

Stock market trading and volume on the New York Stock Exchange was a lively 28,722,840 shares compared with 30,346,801 the previous.

U.S. government bonds experienced their worse sinking spell of the year in October. The maximum loss was a point.

Corporates, on the other hand, registered a shaky advance that made October the third month of the year in the plus column.

Bond sales totaled $24,624,000 par value on the stock exchange last week, compared with sales of $21,801,000 the previous week.



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined this week, closing at 281.2 from 281.7 a week ago. The commodity index also declined, closing at 160.1 from 160.2 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto)

Earnings Rise For United Gas In Nine Months

SHREVEPORT (Special) — Earnings of United Gas Corporation and subsidiaries for the first nine months of 1963 were $23,075,426, compared with $21,890,414 for the same period last year, Ed Parkes, president, has reported to shareholders.

The earnings were equal to $1.79 per share for the nine months of this year, an increase of 10 cents per share over the same period of 1962. Earnings figures have been adjusted to relfect rate refunds actually made in 1962 and probable refunds that may be required in the current year, according to Parkes.

Consolidated operating income for the 1963 period amounted to $314,318,989, up $14,109,954 over the first nine months of the prior year. Most of the earnings improvement comes from natural gas operations and is principally due to good heating weather the early part of the year.

GAS VOLUME

"The volume of gas sold continues to exceed last year," Parkes said in his letter to shareholders. "The effect of air conditioning was quite pronounced in the third quarter when the volume of gas sold to power plants exceeded the same quarter of last year.The total volume of gas sold during the first nine months of this year was 6 per cent more than in 1962."

Other operations were generally in line with last year, Parkes reported. Sulphur was lower than last year. Production of potash, natural gas and copper was up, but there was a slight decrease in the production of molybdenum.

Sales of gas-burning appliances continued their upward pace, and sales of instruments manufactured by United's Instruments Division continued to increase.

Major construction projects of the third quarter were two main line compressor stations at Marksville and Arnaudville in Louisiana, which will be in service shortly, and completion of a 20-inch loop line to provide increased gas capacity to the New Orleans area.

The net interest of Union Producing Company, United's production subsidiary, in 47 wells drilled so far this year is 20.8 oil wells, 4.2 gas wells and 8.3 dry holes. The drilling program for the remainder of 1963 includes 9 more development wells and 5 exploratory wells.

Parkes reported that during the third quarter the company paid $40 million of bank loans from company funds without the need of permanent financing.

Disposal Of Stock Becomes Difficult

By STERLIN F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unloading its holdings of General Motors stock, the Du Pont Co. has learned, is like trying to give away a family of rabbits.

They multiply faster than you can find takers.

Du Pont owned about $3 billion worth of GM shares in July, 1962, when it began distributing them to its stockholders under a federal court's anti-trust order.

It got rid of $1 billion worth then. But now it finds itself with $3.5 billion worth on its hands, because General Motors stock has nearly doubled in price in the meantime.

Fairly soon again Du Pont must distribute another batch of shares, under the legal requirement that it divest itself of all its GM holdings by the end of February, 1965.

Du Pont chose to parcel out the huge block — representing nearly one-fourth ownership of GM, the world's biggest corporation—in three or perhaps four installments, to minimize any depressing effect on the stock's value. The 1962 distribution was 23,000 shares.

But the spectacular rise in the price of GM shares means that each of the coming distributions, totaling another 40,000 shares, will be much larger, in money value, than was anticipated. GM stock was worth about $47 a share at the time of the first distribution, but last week it hit the vicinity of $90 when the motor company announced a dazzling nine-month profit of $1.1 billion.

The windfall to the Du Pont stockholders may embarrass some of them financially, for the federal tax will be a stiff jolt despite a special 1962 act of Congress designed to ease the impact.

Grain Futures React Broadly

CHICAGO (AP) — The grain futures market reacted rather broadly last week but finished mostly little changed on the Board of Trade.

Old crop soybeans exceeded $3-a-bushel in spots but encountered increased resistance at those levels and fell back slightly as speculators cash profits. At the end of the week, gains ranged to more than 7-cents-a-bushel while the new crop September showed a decline of 8 cents.

Wheat finished the week a little easier, corn a bit firmer and other grains about steady.

The major influence in the pits all week was talk about negotiations on massive sales of wheat to the Soviet Union and other grains, principally corn, to Hungary.

Business Briefs

AD AWARD

The Forest Products Operations of Olin in West Monroe has received the "Silver Mail Box" award from the Direct Mail Advertising Association for having conducted one of the "most outstanding direct mail advertising campaigns internationally during the last year.

The award was made to the company for being the number two overall campaign in all categories. The products operation won the DMAA awards in 1958 and 1960 in the industrial advertising category.

The annual competition, in its 33rd year, is open to every business organization in the world with a direct mail program. The winners were selected from among hundreds of entries by a 20-man board of judges.

The winning Olin campaign was conducted last spring to introduce the products and service offered by Olin's new corrugated shipping container plant in New Orleans. It consisted of six separate mailing pieces with each piece representing a different New Orleans historical event, then it drew an analogy between it and a benefit offered by the Olin plant. The entire campaign was originated and completed in the Forest Products Sales Promotion department in West Monroe with no outside assistance other than printing.

MEETING

Three representatives from the Monroe district office of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. at 208 Louisville Ave., are scheduled to attend the annual business meeting and luncheon of the New Orleans chapter of the company's Veterans Association at the Fontainebleau Motor Hotel in New Orleans Thursday.

Membership in the association is made up of person employed by Metropolitan for at least 20 years. Altogether, approximately 150 members from district officers in Louisiana and Texas are expected to be present at the annual meeting.

Invited from the Monroe office are: Ted Harper - 113 Slack St., West Monroe; Sam Cathey - 320 Ogden Ave., Bastrop and Charles Cascio, - 805 Rochelle Ave., Monroe.

SALES REPRESENTATIVE

J. Fred Cole Jr., has joined Lion Oil Company as district sales representative for east-central Arkansas with headquarters in Pine Bluff, Ark., according to an announcement by L. D. Sullivan of El Dorado, Lion's director of branded sales.

A native of El Dorado, Cole is a graduate of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute with a BS degree in business administration. For the past six years he has been associated with a major oil company at Monroe.

Cole has been assigned to the Little Rock sales district and will report to Ivan Thompson, Little Rock district sales manager. The new sales representative will serve Lion Distributors and bulk plants located in Pine Bluff, Altheimer, Cabot, Clarendon, DeWitt, England, Forrest City, Hazen, Helena, Hughes, Lonoke, Marianna and Stuttgart.

WINS HONOR

Monroe life insurance man Joe R. Goyne has qualified for the 14th time for Mutual Of New York's National Field Club, an annual honor organization for sales leaders among the company's 3,500 field underwriters in the United States and Canada.

Goyne is associated with MONY's Shreveport agency.

Cotton Futures Mostly Higher

NEW YORK (AP)—Domestic cotton futures were mostly higher in limited dealings this week.

At the close of trading Friday, active contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were off 35 cents to up 75 cents a bale for the week.

Answer To Question Possible

Racial Issue Marks Major Election Contests

WASHINGTON (AP)—Racial issues are hot in several major contests as Americans prepare to choose two governors, hundreds of mayors and members of four state legislatures in scattered elections Tuesday.

The balloting could give a partial snwer to a question to which politicians are giving increasing attention:

How strong is the so - called "white flareback"—that is, how partial answer to a question to among some white people that Negroes are pressing their civil rights drive too fast and too militantly?

In each case, other issues are entangled with the racial one and the interpretations of results are likely to vary widely, depending on the interpreter's views.

The race question figures, among others, in a struggle for the Kentucky governorship and the Philadelphia mayor's chair.

President Kennedy in his news conference Thursday conceded that there might be some backlash against the Democrats that could hurt his party's candidate for re-election as mayor of Philadelphia.

However, he said he thinks the two candidates have taken about the same position and that the two parties have civil rights policies that are much alike.

In Mississippi, where Republicans have mounted their first serious governorship drive since reconstruction, the race issue is predominant.

The injection of racial controversy in a Kentucky governorship fight is something new in that state's modern history.

The background: Gov. Bert Combs, Democrat, issued an executive order last summer calling for an end to racial discrimination in state - licensed businesses and professions catering to the public.

The order, for the moment, is somewhat academic because it is tied up in court after a challenge by tavern keepers. However, it figures in the campaign.

The Republican nominee for governor, Louie B. Nunn, 39, a former county judge, called the order a vote-catching device and an abuse of the governor's power. However, Nunn did not endorse segregation.

Edward T. Breathitt Jr., the Democratic nominee, defended the order at first, then backed away. He said he would leave the problem to the next legislature.

The election odds appear to favor Breathitt, because registered Democrats outnumber Republicans 3-1, and Kentuckians have rarely selected a Republican as governor.

In Philadelphia, nerves are taut as Negroes drive for more and better jobs, a freer choice of housing and other goals. The city has experienced picket-line violence, teen-age slash-and-run tactics and rioting over the shooting of a Negro shoplifting suspect by a white policeman.

The civil rights issue is not sharply defined in the race for mayor. Both Democrats and Republicans say they favor a liberal, enlightened stand on racial questions.

But Democratic Mayor James H. J. Tate has accused his Republican opponent, James T. McDermott, of "playing for the white vote." Denying this, McDermott says the city's social climate is "as bad as it can be" because of indecisiveness and blundering by Tate.

Tate is the target of a two-way squeeze. Some white persons complain he gives in too readily to Negro demands; some Negroes feel he does not move fast enough in their behalf.

President Kennedy carried Philadelphia by 331,000 votes in 1960. But when he went there Wednesday, to speak for Tate and the compromise civil rights bill pending in Washington, the street crowds were distinctly

The feeling among political insiders is that the city's Democratic organization has enough momentum from the past to carry it to another victory, but by a smaller margin than Philadelphians are used to seeing.

In Mississippi, after hard campaigning this summer, Lt. Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. won the Democratic governorship nomination as heir to segregationist Gov. Ross Barnett, who cannot succeed himself. Ordinarily that would have settled things.

But this time Rubel Phillips, Jackson lawyer, is in there pitching as the Republican nominee. He is aided by a troupe sounding off with ditties like:

"Rubel, Rubel, we've been thinking
"What a fine land this would be
"If all the Kennedys were transported
"Far beyond the Arctic Sea."

Republicans have been challenging the Democratic contention that Johnson "stood tall" in the attempt to bar James H. Meredith, a Negro, from the University of Mississippi a year ago. Phillips contended Barnett and Johnson made a deal with Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to admit Meredith after a token show of resistance.

In support of this, Phillips cited alleged transcripts of conversations between the attorney general in Washington and Barnett and Johnson in Jackson.

Johnson sort of ignored this charge at first but then reached into his large bag of adjectives and branded it: "A vicious, malicious, pusillanimous, premeditated, plain, common, ordinary, bald-face, self-made, contemptible, damnable, self-concocted falsehood."

Phillips and other Republicans in Mississippi are trying to tie their wagons to Barry Goldwater's apparently rising star in the South. They show stickers "Rubel in '63, Barry in '64."

However, analysts do not figure Tuesday's election will be an accurate guide to the Arizona Republican senator's strength. The thesis is that many Mississippians who might vote for Goldwater for president can't yet bring themselves to support a Republican for governor.

Among states where mayors are being elected Tuesday; New York, 50 mayors; Indiana, 111; Massachusetts, 39; Idaho, 63; Connecticut, 8; Pennsylvania, 29.

States electing members of their legislatures are Kentucky, Mississippi, New Jersey and Virginia.

Drilling Activity Heavy For Week In Monroe Area

Activity was heavy last week and widely scattered over the Monroe Oil and Gas District, according to a report released by Manager Duncan S. Cook.

Twelve wells were completed in seyen of the 15 parishes, and substantial gains were recorded in the number of new locations staked in the area and the number of rigs actively drilling or testing.

Continuing the trend of recent weeks, new locations spurted to a total of 44, scattered over 10 parishes, while there were 42 rigs active in 11 parishes.

LaSALLE HIGH

The parish breakdown showed most of the completions in LaSalle, with four, followed by the Union Parish Monroe Field's three, and one each in Rapides, Ouachita, Grant, Concordia and Catahoula.

LaSalle was by far the leading area for active rigs, as well, with a total of 17 drilling or testing. Following were Concordia with five, Catahoula with four, Tensas, Rapides and Avoyelles with three each, Ouachita and Union with two each, and Madison, Franklin and Caldwell had one each.

The breakdown on the new locations included 12 in Avoyelles Parish, six in Union (the Monroe Field), five each in Concordia, LaSalle and Tensas, three each in Ouachita (the Monroe Field) and Catahoula, two each in Rapides and Caldwell, and one in LaSalle.

Eleven wells were plugged and abandoned during the week, leaving the total on inactive sites at 87. Locations numbered 82, with 54 listed as drilling.

Solon Seeks Protection In FHA Homes

Hardships Caused By Major Defects Measure's Object

WASHINGTON (Special) — Additional protection for FHA home owners who suffer hardships because of major defects in new homes purchased with FHA-insured mortgages would be provided under a bill introduced this week by U.S. Rep. Joe D. Waggonner of Plain Dealing.

The bill would authorize FHA to pay for the correction of "structural or other major defects affecting the liability of the property" where the house was built subject to FHA standards and inspections and the defect cannot be corrected under the one-year builder's warranty now required in new FHA homes.

"We have had the one-year warranty in effect for some time," Waggonner of the Fourth District said, "and in most cases this has served to protect FHA home owners, but there have been some instances where the building corporation is no longer in existence, or has no assets, or refuses to cooperate.

"To provide relief in such cases my bill would permit FHA, over a two - year period from the time the loan is insured, to make the repairs from FHA's reserve funds. FHA, which is wholly self-supporting, now has over $1 billion in reserves."

FHA's property standards and inspection system, its builder warranty requirements, and the reliability of the home building industry in general assure that such cases presently are few in number. Nevertheless, they do occur and it is of small comfort to the affected home owner to know that his is an isolated instance. I believe we ought to assist him in protecting his investment. and this is the aim of my bill.

"Under present law," Waggonner said, "FHA can make these repairs, but only after it has acquired the property. Before this can take place, the owner must have defaulted in his mortgage payments and foreclosure proceedings must have been instituted. It just makes good sense to let FHA correct matters before the home owner has been displaced and lost his equity in the property.

"This measure will insure that the FHA inspection is all that it is required to be and that the buyer is protected in the event it is not.

"The general objective of my bill is supported by the FHA and also by the National Association of Home Builders, and I am hopeful that we can enact protective legislation of this kind for the FHA home owner early next session," Waggonner said.

Stocks Take 1st Loss In Three Weeks

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week took its first clear-cut loss in three weeks, but it was a small one.

In the preceding week the averages advanced even though considerably more stocks declined than advanced. This week both the averages and the figures on gains and losses were in gear.

The contradiction between what the averages were doing and what most listed stocks were doing continued for the first couple of days this week. The Dow Jones industrial average touched record highs Monday and Tuesday, establishing its peak of 760.50 at the Tuesday close.

On Wednesday when the market underwent its sharpest decline in a month as profits were taken briskly in many of the blue chips whose strong rise had pushed the averages into record high ground.

Stocks rallied moderately on Thursday and performed unevenly on Friday.

For the week as a whole, the 30-stock Dow industrials took a moderate loss of 1.88 at 753.73.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks also showed a minor decline as it lost .5 at 2.81.2.

Stock market trading and volume on the New York Stock Exchange was a lively 28,722,840 shares compared with 30,346,801 the previous.

U.S. government bonds experienced their worse sinking spell of the year in October. The maximum loss was a point.

Corporates, on the other hand, registered a shaky advance that made October the third month of the year in the plus column.

Bond sales totaled $24,624,000 par value on the stock exchange last week, compared with sales of $21,801,000 the previous week.

Earnings Rise For United Gas In Nine Months

SHREVEPORT (Special) — Earnings of United Gas Corporation and subsidiaries for the first nine months of 1963 were $23,075,426, compared with $21,890,414 for the same period last year, Ed Parkes, president, has reported to shareholders.

The earnings were equal to $1.79 per share for the nine months of this year, an increase of 10 cents per share over the same period of 1962. Earnings figures have been adjusted to relfect rate refunds actually made in 1962 and probable refunds that may be required in the current year, according to Parkes.

Consolidated operating income for the 1963 period amounted to $314,318,989, up $14,109,954 over the first nine months of the prior year. Most of the earnings improvement comes from natural gas operations and is principally due to good heating weather the early part of the year.

GAS VOLUME

"The volume of gas sold continues to exceed last year," Parkes said in his letter to shareholders. "The effect of air conditioning was quite pronounced in the third quarter when the volume of gas sold to power plants exceeded the same quarter of last year.The total volume of gas sold during the first nine months of this year was 6 per cent more than in 1962."

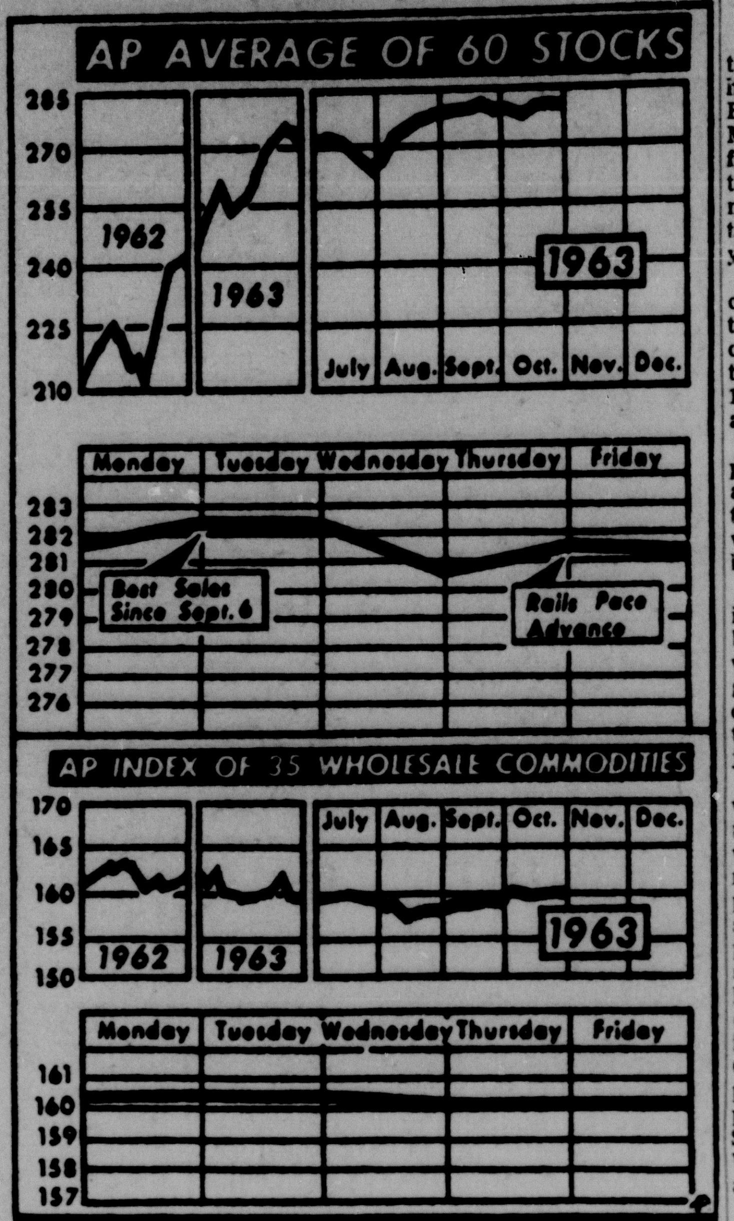
Other operations were generally in line with last year, Parkes reported. Sulphur was lower than last year. Production of potash, natural gas and copper was up, but there was a slight decrease in the production of molybdenum.

Sales of gas-burning appliances continued their upward pace, and sales of instruments manufactured by United's Instruments Division continued to increase.

Major construction projects of the third quarter were two main line compressor stations at Marksville and Arnaudville in Louisiana, which will be in service shortly, and completion of a 20-inch loop line to provide increased gas capacity to the New Orleans area.

The net interest of Union Producing Company, United's production subsidiary, in 47 wells drilled so far this year is 20.8 oil wells, 4.2 gas wells and 8.3 dry holes. The drilling program for the remainder of 1963 includes 9 more development wells and 5 exploratory wells.

Parkes reported that during the third quarter the company paid $40 million of bank loans from company funds without the need of permanent financing.



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined this week, closing at 281.2 from 281.7 a week ago. The commodity index also declined, closing at 160.1 from 160.2 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto)

Disposal Of Stock Becomes Difficult

By STERLIN F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unloading its holdings of General Motors stock, the Du Pont Co. has learned, is like trying to give away a family of rabbits.

They multiply faster than you can find takers.

Du Pont owned about $3 billion worth of GM shares in July, 1962, when it began distributing them to its stockholders under a federal court's antitrust order.

It got rid of $1 billion worth then. But now it finds itself with $3.5 billion worth on its hands, because General Motors stock has nearly doubled in price in the meantime.

Fairly soon again Du Pont must distribute another batch of shares, under the legal requirement that it divest itself of all its GM holdings by the end of February, 1965.

Du Pont chose to parcel out the huge block — representing nearly one-fourth ownership of GM, the world's biggest corporation—in three or perhaps four installments, to minimize any depressing effect on the stock's value. The 1962 distribution was 23,000 shares.

But the spectacular rise in the price of GM shares means that each of the coming distributions, totaling another 40,000 shares, will be much larger, in money value, than was anticipated. GM stock was worth about $47 a share at the time of the first distribution, but last week it hit the vicinity of $90 when the motor company announced a dazzling nine-month profit of $1.1 billion.

The windfall to the Du Pont stockholders may embarrass some of them financially, for the federal tax will be a stiff jolt despite a special 1962 act of Congress designed to ease the impact.

Grain Futures React Broadly

CHICAGO (AP) — The grain futures market reacted rather broadly last week but finished mostly little changed on the Board of Trade.

Old crop soybeans exceeded $3-a-bushel in spots but encountered increased resistance at those levels and fell back slightly as speculators cash profits. At the end of the week, gains ranged to more than 7-cents-a-bushel while the new crop September showed a decline of 8 cents.

Wheat finished the week a little easier, corn a bit firmer and other grains about steady.

The major influence in the pits all week was talk about negotiations on massive sales of wheat to the Soviet Union and other grains, principally corn, to Hungary.

Business Briefs

AD AWARD

The Forest Products Operations of Olin in West Monroe has received the "Silver Mail Box" award from the Direct Mail Advertising Association for having conducted one of the "most outstanding direct mail advertising campaigns internationally during the last year.

The award was made to the company for being the number two overall campaign in all categories. The products operation won the DMAA awards in 1958 and 1960 in the industrial advertising category.

The annual competition, in its 33rd year, is open to every business organization in the world with a direct mail program. The winners were selected from among hundreds of entries by a 20-man board of judges.

The winning Olin campaign was conducted last spring to introduce the products and service offered by Olin's new corrugated shipping container plant in New Orleans. It consisted of six separate mailing pieces with each piece representing a different New Orleans historical event, then it drew an analogy between it and a benefit offered by the Olin plant. The entire campaign was originated and completed in the Forest Products Sales Promotion department in West Monroe with no outside assistance other than printing.

MEETING

Three representatives from the Monroe district office of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. at 208 Louisville Ave., are scheduled to attend the annual business meeting and luncheon of the New Orleans chapter of the company's Veterans Association at the Fontainebleau Motor Hotel in New Orleans Thursday.

Membership in the association is made up of person employed by Metropolitan for at least 20 years. Altogether, approximately 150 members from district officers in Louisiana and Texas are expected to be present at the annual meeting.

Invited from the Monroe office are: Ted Harper - 113 Slack St., West Monroe; Sam Cathey - 320 Ogden Ave., Bastrop and Charles Cascio, - 805 Rochelle Ave., Monroe.

SALES REPRESENTATIVE

J. Fred Cole Jr., has joined Lion Oil Company as district sales representative for east-central Arkansas with headquarters in Pine Bluff, Ark., according to an announcement by L. D. Sullivan of El Dorado, Lion's director of branded sales

A native of El Dorado, Cole is a graduate of Louisiana Polytechnic Institute with a BS degree in business administration. For the past six years he has been associated with a major oil company at Monroe.

Cole has been assigned to the Little Rock sales district and will report to Ivan Thompson, Little Rock district sales manager. The new sales representative will serve Lion Distributors and bulk plants located in Pine Bluff, Altheimer, Cabot, Clarendon, DeWitt, England, Forrest City, Hazen, Helena, Hughes, Lonoke, Marianna and Stuttgart.

WINS HONOR

Monroe life insurance man Joe R. Goyne has qualified for the 14th time for Mutual Of New York's National Field Club, an annual honor organization for sales leaders among the company's 3,500 field underwriters in the United States and Canada

Goyne is associated with MONY's Shreveport agency.

Cotton Futures Mostly Higher

NEW YORK (AP)—Domestic cotton futures were mostly higher in limited dealings this week.

At the close of trading Friday, active contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were off 35 cents to up 75 cents a bale for the week.

Answer To Question Possible

Racial Issue Marks Major Election Contests

WASHINGTON (AP)—Racial issues are hot in several major contests as Americans prepare to choose two governors, hundreds of mayors and members of four state legislatures in scattered elections Tuesday.

The balloting could give a partial snwer to a question to which politicians are giving increasing attention:

How strong is the so - called "white flareback"—that is, how partial answer to a question to among some white people that Negroes are pressing their civil rights drive too fast and too militantly?

In each case, other issues are entangled with the racial one and the interpretations of results are likely to vary widely, depending on the interpreter's views.

President Kennedy in his news conference Thursday conceded that there might be some backlash against the Democrats that could hurt his party's candidate for re-election as mayor of Philadelphia.

However, he said he thinks the two candidates have taken about the same position and that the two parties have civil rights policies that are much alike.

The injection of racial controversy in a Kentucky governorship fight is something new in that state's modern history.

The background: Gov. Bert Combs, Democrat, issued an executive order last summer calling for an end to racial discrimination in state - licensed businesses and professions catering to the public.

The order, for the moment, is somewhat academic because it is tied up in court after a challenge by tavern keepers. However, it figures in the campaign.

The Republican nominee for governor. Louie B. Nunn, 39, a former county judge, called the order a vote-catching device and an abuse of the governor's power. However, Nunn did not endorse segregation.

Edward T. Breathitt Jr., the Democratic nominee, defended the order at first, then backed away. He said he would leave the problem to the next legislature.

The election odds appear to favor Breathitt, because registered Democrats outnumber Republicans 3-1, and Kentuckians have rarely selected a Republican as governor.

In Philadelphia, nerves are taut as Negroes drive for more and better jobs, a freer choice of housing and other goals. The city has experienced picket-line violence, teen-age slash-and-run tactics and rioting over the shooting of a Negro shoplifting suspect by a white policeman.

The civil rights issue is not sharply defined in the race for mayor. Both Democrats and Republicans say they favor a liberal, enlightened stand on racial questions.

But Democratic Mayor James H. J. Tate has accused his Republican opponent, James T. McDermott, of "playing for the white vote." Denying this, McDermott says the city's social climate is "as bad as it can be" because of indecisiveness and blundering by Tate.

Tate is the target of a two-way squeeze. Some white persons complain he gives in too readily to Negro demands; some Negroes feel he does not move fast enough in their behalf.

President Kennedy carried Philadelphia by 331,000 votes in 1960. But when he went there Wednesday, to speak for Tate and the compromise civil rights bill pending in Washington, the street crowds were distinctly cool.

The feeling among political insiders is that the city's Democratic organization has enough momentum from the past to carry it to another victory, but by a smaller margin than Philadelphians are used to seeing.

In Mississippi, after hard campaigning this summer, Lt. Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. won the Democratic governorship nomination as heir to segregationist Gov. Ross Barnett, who cannot succeed himself. Ordinarily that would have settled things.

But this time Rubel Phillips, Jackson lawyer, is in there pitching as the Republican nominee. He is aided by a troupe sounding off with ditties like:

"Rubel, Rubel, we've been thinking
"What a fine land this would be
"If all the Kennedys were transported
"Far beyond the Arctic Sea."

Republicans have been challenging the Democratic contention that Johnson "stood tall" in the attempt to bar James H. Meredith, a Negro, from the University of Mississippi a year ago. Phillips contended Barnett and Johnson made a deal with Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to admit Meredith after a token show of resistance.

In support of this, Phillips cited alleged transcripts of conversations between the attorney general in Washington and Barnett and Johnson in Jackson.

Johnson sort of ignored this charge at first but then reached into his large bag of adjectives and branded it: "A vicious, malicious, pusillanimous, premeditated, plain, common, ordinary, bald-face, self-made, contemptible, damnable, self-concocted falsehood."

Phillips and other Republicans in Mississippi are trying to tie their wagons to Barry Goldwater's apparently rising star in the South. They show stickers "Rubel in '63, Barry in '64."

However, analysts do not figure Tuesday's election will be an accurate guide to the Arizona Republican senator's strength. The thesis is that many Mississippians who might vote for Goldwater for president can't yet bring themselves to support a Republican for governor.

Among states where mayors are being elected Tuesday; New York, 50 mayors; Indiana, 111; Massachusetts, 39; Idaho, 63; Connecticut, 8; Pennsylvania, 29.

States electing members of their legislatures are Kentucky, Mississippi, New Jersey and Virginia.

Entertainment

CURTAIN CALL

The unprecedented demand to see "Auntie Mame" required an extra performance last Monday, as overflow crowds filled every seat and the "Standing room" on the preceding four nights. Even though the holdover was not announced until Sunday, the box office counted about 175 in attendance for the final performance, making a grand total of more than 2,100 for the entire run. We believe this attendance has been exceeded only at "Bye Bye Birdie."

Apart from the drawing power of a hit like "Auntie Mame," reservations reflected our growing membership which passed 2,800 before the final curtain. This means that only a few hundred more can be accepted before we hit our 3,000 ceiling and we look forward to "The Glass Menagerie" to accomplish this for us.

Naturally the cast of "Auntie Mame" was flattered at being held over by popular demand. Still everyone was pretty exhausted by the end and glad to get back to normal routine. Probably no one was more pleased to see it over than Myrtle Carter and Frances McHenry who bore the brunt of putting all in readiness for the coffee service each night.

Belated than to Pincus Gardsbane of Tallulah for the loan of props via Walter Kotz. And again to Norma Brandle for taking the time to letter all the "Auntie Mame" tiles so they would be done before the last night. Layne Gandy who played young Patrick so capably might not have stood the suspense of waiting to see his tile much longer.

Jack Carmack surprised Feejee with tiles for her memorable performances in "Auntie Mame," "The Miracle Worker" and "Gigi." And Feejee surprised cast and crew with an immense cake decorated with a dragon like the one of her hostess coat in the opening party scene. Finally, the cast and crew surprised Richard and Lonny with a memento of phonograph records.

Other tiles mark Alice Goorley's appearance in "Teahouse," and John Goorley's in "Auntie Mame," and "Annie." The Maxwells honored their daughters with tiles for Martha's parts in "Annie," and "The Miracle Worker," and Carolyn's in "Hansel and Gretel." M. W. Montgomery gave us a permanent remembrance of grand-niece Kay Oslin's striking appearance in "Anniversary Waltz," while we went all the way back to our fifth play, "Dulcy," for a tile honoring Emma Alexander, its director.

If we only had tiles for "Up Pops The Devil," and the 1935 version of "Hay Fever," the record would be complete for the first three seasons of Little Theatre. After that there are many gaps down to the last five seasons which are fully represented except for "Bus Stop," "Visit To A Small Planet," "Caine Mutiny," and "Mr. Roberts."

Richard Clark and Lonny Fraze are due back today from the Southwest Theatre Conference at Austin. The major community and university theatres in Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma are members of this group and gain from an interchange of ideas.

NEW THEATRES

The new Little Theatres have been started in small Arkansas communities: Hope, Rogers and Camden. The theatre groups in Baton Rouge, New Orleans, El Dorado and Alexandria have all taken steps to recognize our 150th production in their programs. The Central Louisiana Community Theatre, for example, dedicated its recent production of "Take Her, She's Mine," in our honor.

Various members have reported on theatre activities elsewhere. Ivey Faulk was well pleased with the road company of "Mary, Mary," in Oklahoma City, while Allan Solomon, like many of the critics, thought the new Mary Martin show, "Jenny," left much to be desired. The A. V. Breards took in "How To Succeed," and "She Loves Me," in New York while returning from Europe where, among many other things, they visited the famous opera house, La Scala, in Milan.

Stamp News

Sam Houston, foremost figure in the history of Texas, appears in determined fashion holding a rifle in a new 5c U.S. stamp to be issued in his honor on Dec. 13. Houston, first president of the Republic of Texas, was also the first United States senator to represent that new state when it entered the Union in 1845.

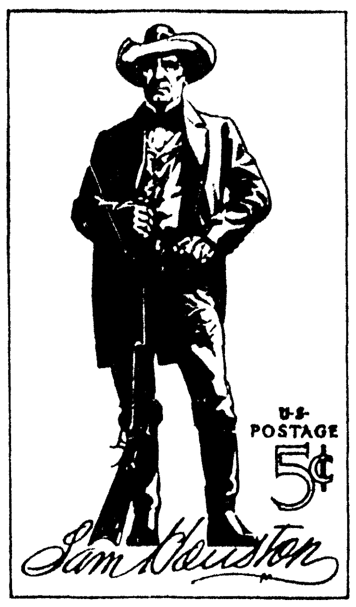
Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send envelopes together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Houston, Tex., 77002. The outside envelope should be marked 'First Day Cover Sam Houston." Cover requests must be postmarked no later than Dec. 13.



Australia has issued a 1.50 shilling stamp commemorating Prince Eugene of Savoy's 300th birthday. Prince Eugene is one of the most beloved individuals in the history of Austria and helped that country become one of the great powers of Europe during his lifetime. The stamp features a vignette portrait of Prince Eugene and is dark violet in color.

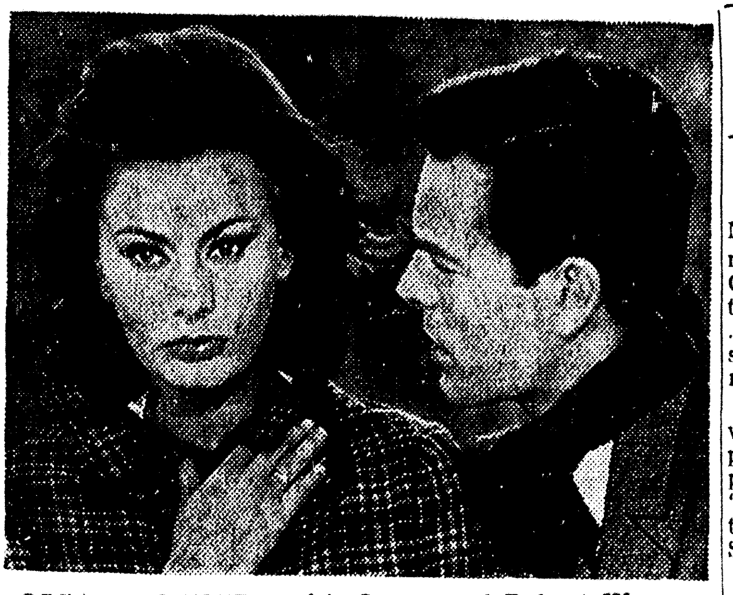
The director of posts in Finland has announced that a set of two new stamps will be issued on Nov. 1 to honor 40 years of airway traffic in that country. One stamp will show a Convair C.V. 440 and the other will illustrate an S.E. 210 Caravelle plane. Also to be issued by Finland is a stamp commemorating the 150th anniversary of the birth of Matias Castren, noted explorer. Featured on the stamp is a portrait of Castren which is based on an oil painting now in Helsinki University.

San Marino has issued two new stamps to honor the 15th International Stamp Fair. One shows the outline of the San Marino government palace and a profile of the figure of St. Marinus. The other stamp depicts a modern statue which now stands in front of the Riccone Fair Palace.

Scotts 1964 Volume II Standard Postage Stamp Catalog contains 53,871 price changes found chiefly in the popular European issues with the accent on 19th Century and topicals such as Red Cross. This volume covers Europe, Asia and Africa. A total of 350 minor varieties have also been added to the book.

Four bicolored stamps were issued by Liberia to honor the 100th anniversary of the International Red Cross. The 5c shows the top surface of a globe with a Red Cross emblem. The 10c features the centenery emblem and a torch. The 25c air mail illustrates a globe and the Red Cross. The 50c air mail pictures a globe and the centenery emblem.

Vatican City has announced the issuance of two new stamps to mark the presentation of the Balzan Prize for Peace to Pope John. The 15 lire and the 160 lire depict the Pope on his throne. The stamps appear on the usual Vatican watermarked paper.



OSCAR WINNER Sophia Loren and Robert Wagner star in "The Condemned of Altona," which opens today at the Jim Theatre. Also starring in the show are Maxmilian Schell and Fredric March.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

This is the hunting season so there I was with my cameras stalking big game. Big? Well, there was a 70-foot brontosaurus, a 50-foot tyrannosaurus, a 40-foot trachodon, a 30-foot corythosaurus, a 25-foot stegosaurus and a couple of smaller dinosaurs.

They appeared out of the mist of upper Hudson River and barged their way in single file past the skyscrapers of Manhattan. River craft scooted near the monsters and circled around. Helicopters buzzed overhead, darted down for a close look and flew off in curving loops. A press boat of observers and photographers paced the expedition to record the invasion in words and pictures.

CHANGING TIMES

After all, it's been several million years since a herd of dinosaurs went that-a-way — unpublicized and unrecorded. Times have changed.

Today they were stars, welcomed to the big city by Robert Moses, president of the 1964 New York World's Fair. This was to be their refuge for the next two years. Instead of heading for the caves, they had a haven, Dinoland, and a protector in big industry, Sinclair Oil.

How does one cover a picture story like that? I used two cameras. A Rollei was loaded with high speed Tri-X for black and white. My 35mm Contaflex Super-B had the new ASA 200 Anscochrome and made good use of both the wideangle 35mm and the telephoto 115mm lenses.

It was necessary to rise over foreground heads in shooting so there was constant shifting from the ship rail to any elevation for a high camera angle. When we landed at the Battery for the city's official welcome to the dinosaurs, the crowds posed a problem. Looking around, I spotted a window one flight up at the nearby corner. It was sight of the cameras which opened doors and the window like magic. Exposures were made at 1-125 second to eliminate camera motion while shooting and still get a good depth of field.

When we took time out for lunch, the giant lizards took the chance to barge off into the East River. A couple of photographers and myself gave chase in a small launch. We caught up with the dinosaurs near the United Nations building and came in for a closeup. It was also our fadeout.

This picture story is one that amateur photographers can finish for themselves if they would like to do their own dinosaur hunting. The monsters will be "at home" for camera fans at the Wrold's Fair next year. Better bring a wide-angle lens for full length shots and a telephoto lens for portraits.

Here's The Answer

QUESTION: The paint on some parts of the outside of our house has started to blister. We had a paint job done a little over a year ago. We keep everything in good condition. The house is insulated, weather-stripped, etc. Can you tell us what is causing this blistering?

ANSWER: Exterior paint blistering usually results from excessive moisture within the house which can not escape except through the walls. It goes through the walls, condensing into water as it hits the cooler inside surface of the siding and then pushing through the outer paint coating.

It rarely happened years ago when houses were not of such tight construction. The moisture then could escape easily without forcing its way through the walls. However, the same openings that permitted the moisture to leave also afforded passageways for heat, causing fuel bills to mount and making houses much harder to keep comfortable.

Another modern - day factor in this entire picture is the moisture - excluding appliance, of which there are many. Exhaust fans, especially in the kitchen and bathroom and whethever the clothes dryer is located, often solve the problem.

CURTAIN CALL

The unprecedented demand to see "Auntie Mame" required an extra performance last Monday, as overflow crowds filled every seat and the "Standing room" on the preceding four nights. Even though the holdover was not announced until Sunday, the box office counted about 175 in attendance for the final performance, making a grand total of more than 2,100 for the entire run. We believe this attendance has been exceeded only at "Bye Bye Birdie."

Apart from the drawing power of a hit like "Auntie Mame," reservations reflected our growing membership which passed 2,800 before the final curtain. This means that only a few hundred more can be accepted before we hit our 3,000 ceiling and we look forward to "The Glass Menagerie" to accomplish this for us.

Naturally the cast of "Auntie Mame" was flattered at being held over by popular demand. Still everyone was pretty exhausted by the end and glad to get back to normal routine. Probably no one was more pleased to see it over than Myrtle Carter and Frances McHenry who bore the brunt of putting all in readiness for the coffee service each night.

Belated than to Pincus Gardsbane of Tallulah for the loan of props via Walter Kotz. And again to Norma Brandle for taking the time to letter all the "Auntie Mame" tiles so they would be done before the last night. Layne Gandy who played young Patrick so capably might not have stood the suspense of waiting to see his tile much longer.

Jack Carmack surprised Feejee with tiles for her memorable performances in "Auntie Mame," "The Miracle Worker" and "Gigi." And Feejee surprised cast and crew with an immense cake decorated with a dragon like the one of her hostess coat in the opening party scene. Finally, the cast and crew surprised Richard and Lonny with a memento of phonograph records.

Other tiles mark Alice Goorley's appearance in "Teahouse," and John Goorley's in "Auntie Mame," and "Annie." The Maxwells honored their daughters with tiles for Martha's parts in "Annie," and "The Miracle Worker," and Carolyn's in "Hansel and Gretel." M. W. Montgomery gave us a permanent remembrance of grand-niece Kay Oslin's striking appearance in "Anniversary Waltz," while we went all the way back to our fifth play, "Dulcy," for a tile honoring Emma Alexander, its director.

If we only had tiles for "Up Pops The Devil," and the 1935 version of "Hay Fever," the record would be complete for the first three seasons of Little Theatre. After that there are many gaps down to the last five seasons which are fully represented except for "Bus Stop," "Visit To A Small Planet," "Caine Mutiny," and "Mr. Roberts."

Richard Clark and Lonny Fraze are due back today from the Southwest Theatre Conference at Austin. The major community and university theatres in Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma are members of this group and gain from an interchange of ideas.

NEW THEATRES

The new Little Theatres have been started in small Arkansas communities: Hope, Rogers and Camden. The theatre groups in Baton Rouge, New Orleans, El Dorado and Alexandria have all taken steps to recognize our 150th production in their programs. The Central Louisiana Community Theatre, for example, dedicated its recent production of "Take Her, She's Mine," in our honor.

Various members have reported on theatre activities elsewhere. Ivey Faulk was well pleased with the road company of "Mary, Mary," in Oklahoma City, while Allan Solomon, like many of the critics, thought the new Mary Martin show, "Jenny," left much to be desired. The A. V. Breards took in "How To Succeed," and "She Loves Me," in New York while returning from Europe where, among many other things, they visited the famous opera house, La Scala, in Milan.

Stamp News

Sam Houston, foremost figure in the history of Texas, appears in determined fashion holding a rifle in a new 5c U.S. stamp to be issued in his honor on Dec. 13. Houston, first president of the Republic of Texas, was also the first United States senator to represent that new state when it entered the Union in 1845.

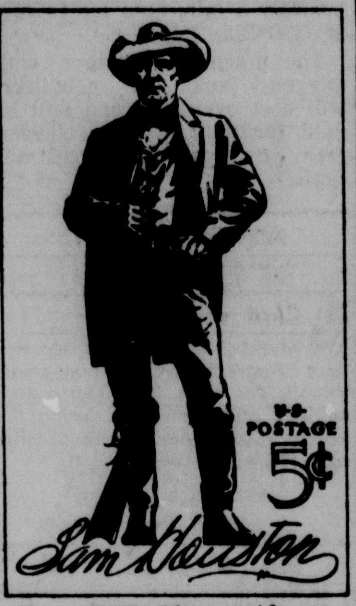
Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send envelopes together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Houston, Tex., 77002. The outside envelope should be marked 'First Day Cover Sam Houston." Cover requests must be postmarked no later than Dec. 13.



Australia has issued a 1.50 shilling stamp commemorating Prince Eugene of Savoy's 300th birthday. Prince Eugene is one of the most beloved individuals in the history of Austria and helped that country become one of the great powers of Europe during his lifetime. The stamp features a vignette portrait of Prince Eugene and is dark violet in color.

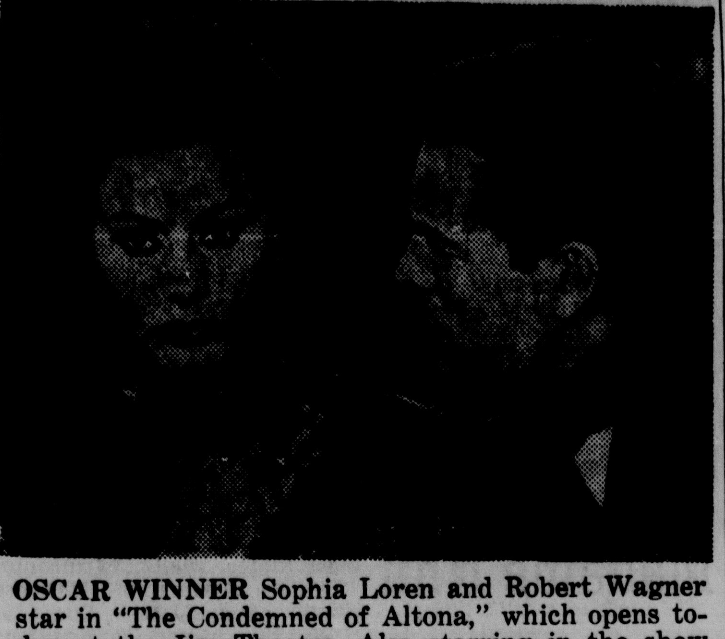
The director of posts in Finland has announced that a set of two new stamps will be issued on Nov. 1 to honor 40 years of airway traffic in that country. One stamp will show a Convair C.V. 440 and the other will illustrate an S.E. 210 Caravelle plane. Also to be issued by Finland is a stamp commemorating the 150th anniversary of the birth of Matias Castren, noted explorer. Featured on the stamp is a portrait of Castren which is based on an oil painting now in Helsinki University.

San Marino has issued two new stamps to honor the 15th International Stamp Fair. One shows the outline of the San Marino government palace and a profile of the figure of St. Marinus. The other stamp depicts a modern statue which now stands in front of the Riccone Fair Palace.

Scotts 1964 Volume II Standard Postage Stamp Catalog contains 53,871 price changes found chiefly in the popular European issues with the accent on 19th Century and topicals such as Red Cross. This volume covers Europe, Asia and Africa. A total of 350 minor varieties have also been added to the book.

Four bicolored stamps were issued by Liberia to honor the 100th anniversary of the International Red Cross. The 5c shows the top surface of a globe with a Red Cross emblem. The 10c features the centenery emblem and a torch. The 25c air mail illustrates a globe and the Red Cross. The 50c air mail pictures a globe and the centenery emblem.

Vatican City has announced the issuance of two new stamps to mark the presentation of the Balzan Prize for Peace to Pope John. The 15 lire and the 160 lire depict the Pope on his throne. The stamps appear on the usual Vatican watermarked paper.



OSCAR WINNER Sophia Loren and Robert Wagner star in "The Condemned of Altona," which opens today at the Jim Theatre. Also starring in the show are Maxmilian Schell and Fredric March.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

This is the hunting season so there I was with my cameras stalking big game. Big? Well, there was a 70-foot brontosaurus, a 50-foot tyrannosaurus, a 40-foot trachodon, a 30-foot corythosaurus, a 25-foot stegosaurus and a couple of smaller dinosaurs.

They appeared out of the mist of upper Hudson River and barged their way in single file past the skyscrapers of Manhattan. River craft scooted near the monsters and circled around. Helicopters buzzed overhead, darted down for a close look and flew off in curving loops. A press boat of observers and photographers paced the expedition to record the invasion in words and pictures.

CHANGING TIMES

After all, it's been several million years since a herd of dinosaurs went that-a-way — unpublicized and unrecorded. Times have changed.

How does one cover a picture story like that? I used two cameras. A Rollei was loaded with high speed Tri-X for black and white. My 35mm Contaflex Super-B had the new ASA 200 Anscochrome and made good use of both the wideangle 35mm and the telephoto 115mm lenses.

It was necessary to rise over foreground heads in shooting so there was constant shifting from the ship rail to any elevation for a high camera angle. When we landed at the Battery for the city's official welcome to the dinosaurs, the crowds posed a problem. Looking around, I spotted a window one flight up at the nearby corner. It was sight of the cameras which opened doors and the window like magic. Exposures were made at 1-125 second to eliminate camera motion while shooting and still get a good depth of field.

When we took time out for lunch, the giant lizards took the chance to barge off into the East River. A couple of photographers and myself gave chase in a small launch. We caught up with the dinosaurs near the United Nations building and came in for a closeup. It was also our fadeout.

This picture story is one that amateur photographers can finish for themselves if they would like to do their own dinosaur hunting. The monsters will be "at home" for camera fans at the Wrold's Fair next year. Better bring a wide-angle lens for full length shots and a telephoto lens for portraits.

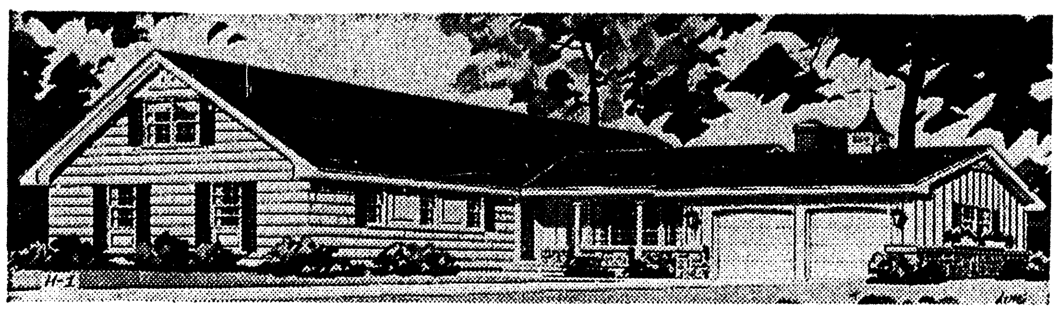
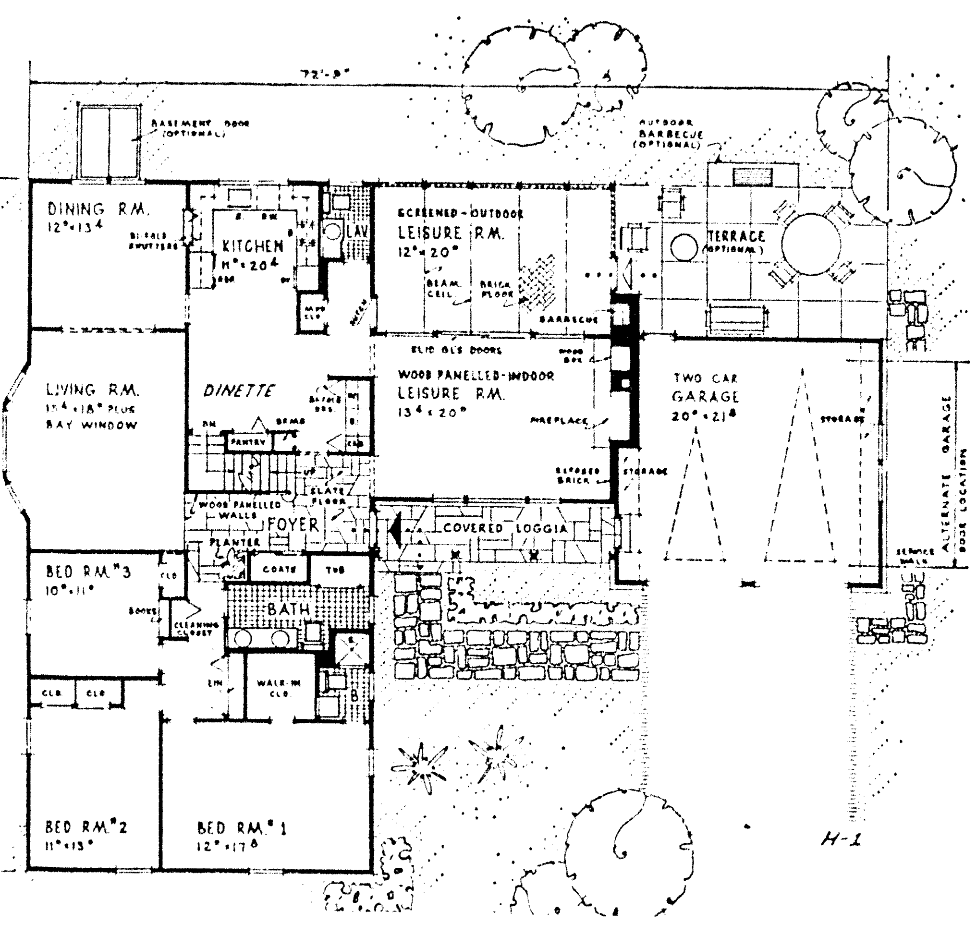
THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK

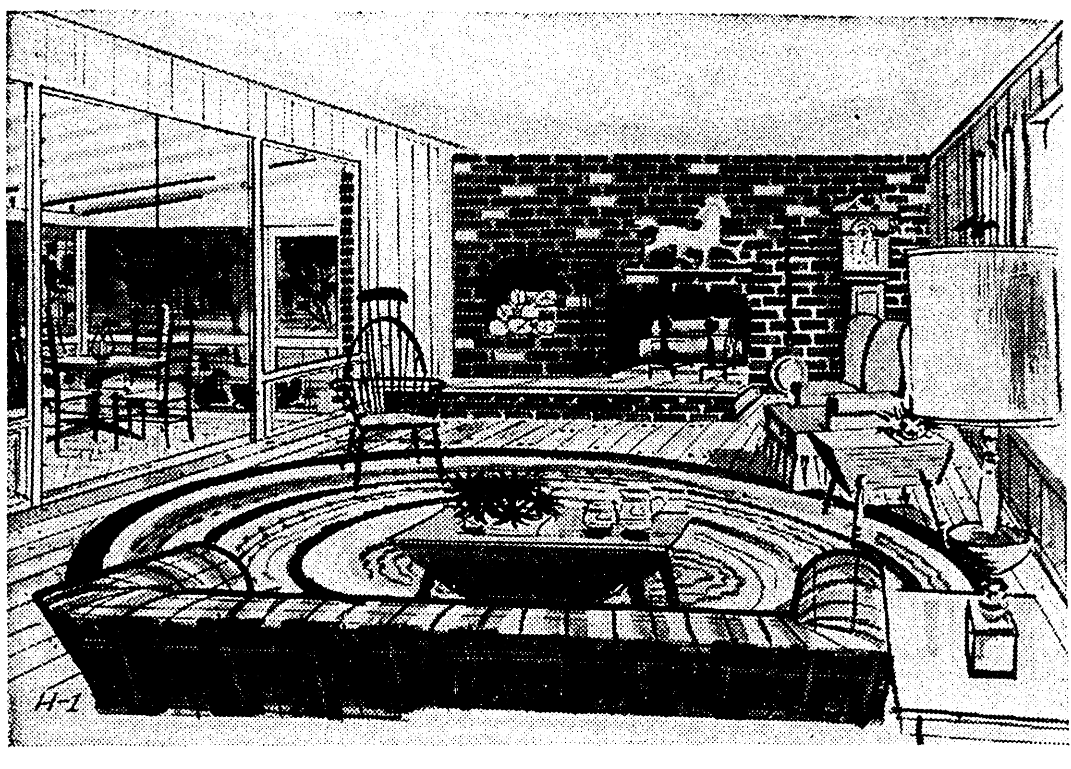
An Expandable Ranch For Leisurely Living



TRADITIONAL GLAMOR: This expandable ranch contains up to five bedrooms and 3½ baths when the attic space over the main wing is completed. Wood shingles and vertical boards with a touch of stone for accent give the exterior a traditional flavor.



FLOOR PLANS: Main foyer, with slate floor and wood panelled walls, funnels traffic to three clearly zoned areas: formal, informal and sleeping. Note the alternate location for the garage doors.



LEISURE ROOM: This spacious family room connects through sliding glass doors to a covered porch. The massive fireplace and wood panelled walls give the room an air of cozy informality.

Basically the house is a one-story model with three bedrooms. But it contains an open attic over the main wing which can be finished off when needed, adding two more huge bedrooms, a bath, and a large "sitting area" which can serve as a sewing room, den, or what have you.

An equally outstanding feature is the informal area, a nicely arranged combination of family room and screened porch which offer more than 500 square feet for relaxing in any kind of weather.

The house was designed by Architect Herman H. York. It is design H-1 in the House of the Week series.

York says the trend in today's housing is toward greater attention to informal areas. The family room (or "leisure room," as he calls it) is larger than the living room. It has wood panelled walls and a massive fireplace and wood box in one exposed brick wall.

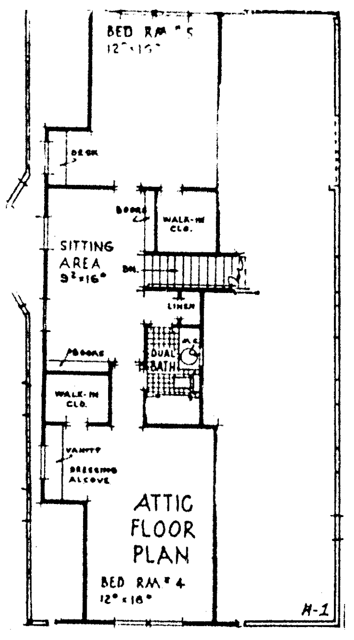
Beyond, through sliding glass doors, is a modern version of an old fashioned screened porch — complete with built-in-barbecue. The porch has a beamed ceiling, exposure on two sides, and leads to an optional outdoor terrace which can be added at a later time.

The house offers excellent circulation around the kitchen area with its adjoining lavatory and mud closet. Nearby, in a separate alcove behind space saving bi-fold doors, are the clothes washer and dryer.

The formal living and dining area are clearly removed from the daily living zone, giving them an air of exclusivity. A large bay window is the eye-catcher in the living room. A nice feature in the dining room is the shuttered pass-through to the kitchen.

The bedroom wing is isolated from any of the noise areas. It contains generous closet space (even the linen closet is more than five feet long) and there is an extra closet for the vacuum and other housecleaning paraphernalia.

The attic offers the most economical type of expansion area. It already is roofed, walled and insulated, and all that's required is the sort of finish work a handy husband can do himself.



EXPANSION ATTIC: If desired, the front bedroom could be converted into a living room and a small kitchen located in the walk-in closet area, making the attic a private apartment.

The H-1 study plan also shows how the attic could be converted into an apartment complete with kitchen and sitting room.

Basic living area of the house totals 1,980 square feet. The expansion attic would provide an additional 843 square feet of bonus space. The screened porch is 250 square feet and the attached garage 434 square feet.

Architect York suggests a combination of wood shingles and vertical boards for the major portion of the side walls, and a touch of stone for accent in front of the family room window and across the garage entry.

The covered loggia and a cupola atop the garage give the house a traditional flavor that will assure its popularity for years to come.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La. and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-1.

New England Gets Bulk Of Misty Weather

CHICAGO (AP) — New England had the bulk of the nation's clammy weather Saturday.

There was snow, fog, rain and cold in the upper Atlantic coast and Appalachians region.

In most other places, there was pleasant fall weather, although cloudy.

There were a few sprinkles along the Pacific coast. Some light showers and snow flurries spread out south of the Great Lakes.

The great fall drought, dampened by a moderate sweep of rains in the last three days, almost ceased to be a concern. However, conditions remained essentially lacking in moisture over much of the drought region. This section included much of the nation's eastern half.

Snow fell in northern New England at an increasing rate. Elsewhere, it rained or periodic showers and thundershowers wet down southern New England. Rainfall was light except for some heavy local falls. New Brunswick, Maine, caught 1.44 inches in six hours.

Temperatures in New England's snowy sections remained in the 30s and fogginess persisted over much of that region. The 30s also predominated in the northern Great Lakes area.

In the Gulf states, readings were in the 60s, and there were 70s in Florida and the Southwest. Much of the country's weather ran to the 40s and 50s.

END CONVENTION HERE

Louisiana Music Teachers Elect

Duchein Cazedessus of Louisiana Tech was re-elected president of the Louisiana Music Teachers Association at its annual convention which closed here Saturday.

Also re-elected was Vice President Ilda Schriefer of Louisiana State University.

Elected secretary was Mrs. Emily Bell O'Bannon of New Orleans. Max Pugh of Louisiana College was chosen treasurer.

Willis Ducrest of the University of Southwestern Louisiana, was named membership chairman for the coming year.

Serving again during the 1963-64 year will be the following section chairmen:

Joe Barry Mullins of Northeast State, wind instruments; Kathleen Allums of McNeese State, piano; James Burke of USL, theory and composition; Monas Harlan of Centenary, voice; R. Frank Parker Jr. of Monroe, student activities, and Kenneth Klaus of LSU, stringed instruments.

Hosts for the 1964 convention will be the Greater Shreveport Music Teachers Association. The convention will be held on the Centenary campus.

Speaking at the final session Saturday at noon, Prof. Walter Westafer of Elon (N.C.) College reminded music teachers there is more to being a good teacher than just knowing their subject matter well.

"We must realize we are associated with our students' ultimate destiny," said the Southern Division president of the Music Teachers National Association.

He stressed the importance of creating in students the joy of learning.

Humility, kindness and patience were listed as keys to success in music teaching — just as in other fields of specialization.

Madame Nhu Hurls Charge Of 'Murder'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu, her voice choked with sobs, charged Saturday that the deaths of her husband and brother-in-law in South Viet Nam "were murders, either with the official or unofficial blessings of the American government."

She also said the United States must take responsibility for whatever has happened to her three younger children, who she believes were in a palace strafed and bombarded during the upheaval that deposed her ruling family.

Reports from South Viet Nam said her husband, the small nation's secret police chief, and his brother, President Ngo Dinh Diem, committed suicide after being captured.

Mrs. Nhu told a news conference in her hotel in Beverly Hills: "This cannot be hidden under the label of suicide."

"To stab them when they are winning the war will only bring them more glory." she added. "The deaths were murders, either with the official or unofficial blessings of the American government."

The slender former first lady of South Viet Nam countered rumors that she might seek asylum in this country by saying: "Surely, I shall return to Viet Nam."

She opened the conference by reading a prepared statement, helped at times by her daughter, Le Thuy, 18, who has accompanied her mother on a world tour.

In the statement she said: "It is not enough to try to kill or subdue the duly elected leaders of a country just because one wants to transform that country into a satellite. To kill or subdue is easy, but what happens afterward? Treason does not pay and nobody can rule Viet Nam with just money and puppets.

"The whole world has its eyes on Viet Nam and knows perperfectly well what is going on there in spite of all the distortion and blackouts directed by that international Communist propaganda network which has become so strong."

There was no immediate word whether Mrs. Nhu would meet with her father, former Viet Nam Ambassador Tran Van Chuong, when he flies here from Washington on Saturday to talk at Chapman college.

He refused to see her several weeks ago in Washington, but Saturday he said, "There is no reason not to see her, especially if the reports of her husband's death are true. She is my daughter and if she is unhappy and needs me I will see her."

After the news conference, a police escort took Mrs. Nhu and Le Thuy to the nearby Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd, where they attended a Mass marking the feast of All Souls, on which Catholics pray for the dead.

They later returned to the hotel.

4 Scholarships In Engineering Are Announced

RUSTON (Special) — Four Louisiana Tech engineering students have received R. C. Baker Foundation scholarships, with two named in the department of mechanical engineering and two in petroleum and geological engineering.

Receiving the mechanical engineering senior scholarship as a continuation of the one he received last year is Donald W. Patterson of Ferriday. John H. Maxwell, also of Ferriday, has been awarded the junior grant for this year.

Claude Mahlen of Shreveport, a senior in petroleum engineering, and Oliver R. Hollinshead of Tullos, a freshman, have been selected to receive the scholarships by the petroleum engineering department. Mahlen is also receiving the award as a continuation of the one he had last year.

Each scholarship totals $850 with $100 of each going to the department and the student getting $750.

The students were selected by faculty members of their departments on the basis of United States citizenship, financial need and previously demonstrated qualities of scholarship, leadership and character.

ART BREAKTHROUGH

LONDON (AP)—George Romney and Co., a 188-year-old firm of artists' colormen, claims it has perfected a new paint for artists that is the only development in oil colors since the 15th Century.

Student Union Campus Carnival Slated At Tech

RUSTON (Special) — Entrance forms for participation in the annual Campus Carnival to be held by the Louisiana Tech Student Union on Friday, Nov. 15, are being submitted to the campus entertainment organization, according to John Burton of Monroe, president.

Letters have been sent to all organizations to determine how many will enter the three competing divisions — fraternity, sorority and independent.

Entrance forms may be turned in to Sue Carlisle of Pioneer, carnival chairman, or can be mailed to Student Union, Box 174, Tech Station.

Trophies will be awarded to the organization in each group making the most profit. All net income will be given to the cheerleaders to help defray the year's expenses.

Each year at the event, organizations furnish booths, games, concession stands, entertainment groups and other features of a regular carnival.

Respirator Will Be Purchased In Madison Parish

TALLULAH (Special) — The Madison-Delta Tuberculosis Association is purchasing a respirator to be used primarily by out patients suffering from emphysema, asthma and other chronic lung diseases, according to Dr. B. G. Trosclair, chairman of the medical committee.

The machine is already installed in the Madison Parish Hospital and will be ready for use as soon as the manufacturers demonstrate its use.

Sister Audrey has offered her services to administer the treatments and the only charge for the use of the machine will be possibly a minimum fee to cover operating expense.

The machine, together with oxygen tank and nebulizer will cost over $800 and will be paid for with money collected from the sale of Christmas seals.

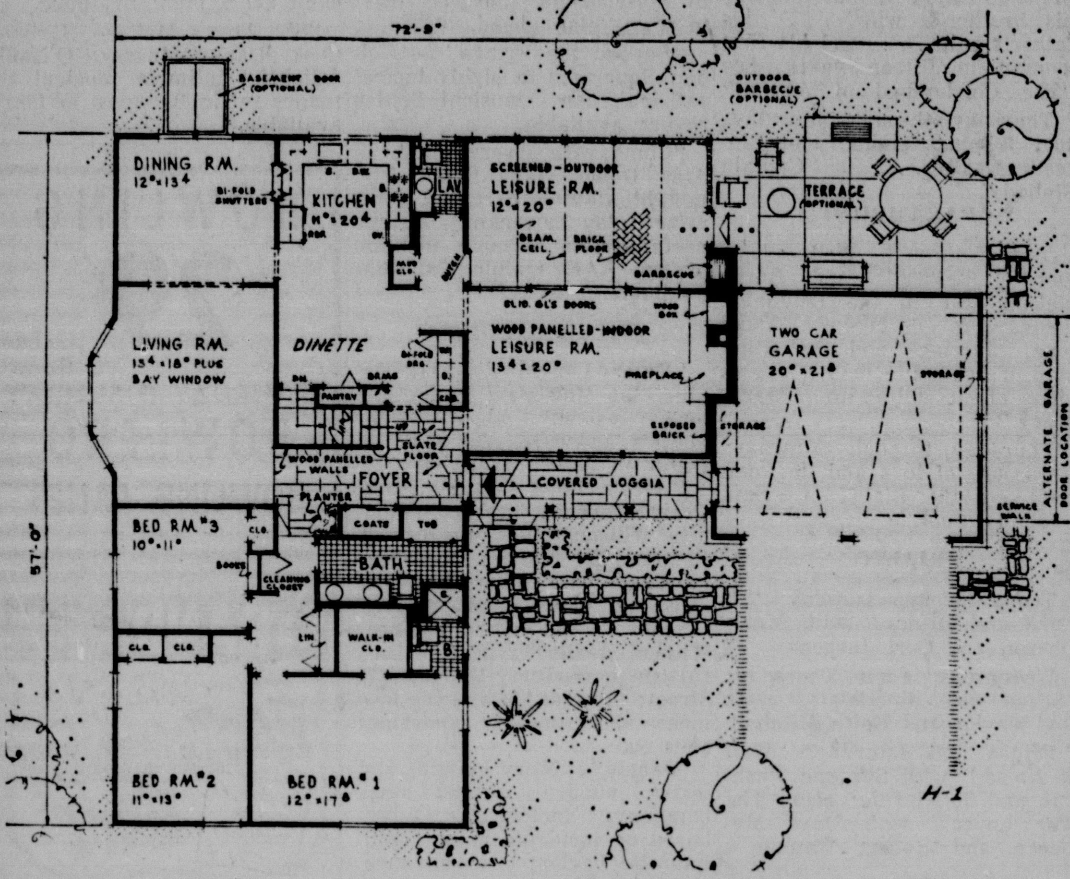
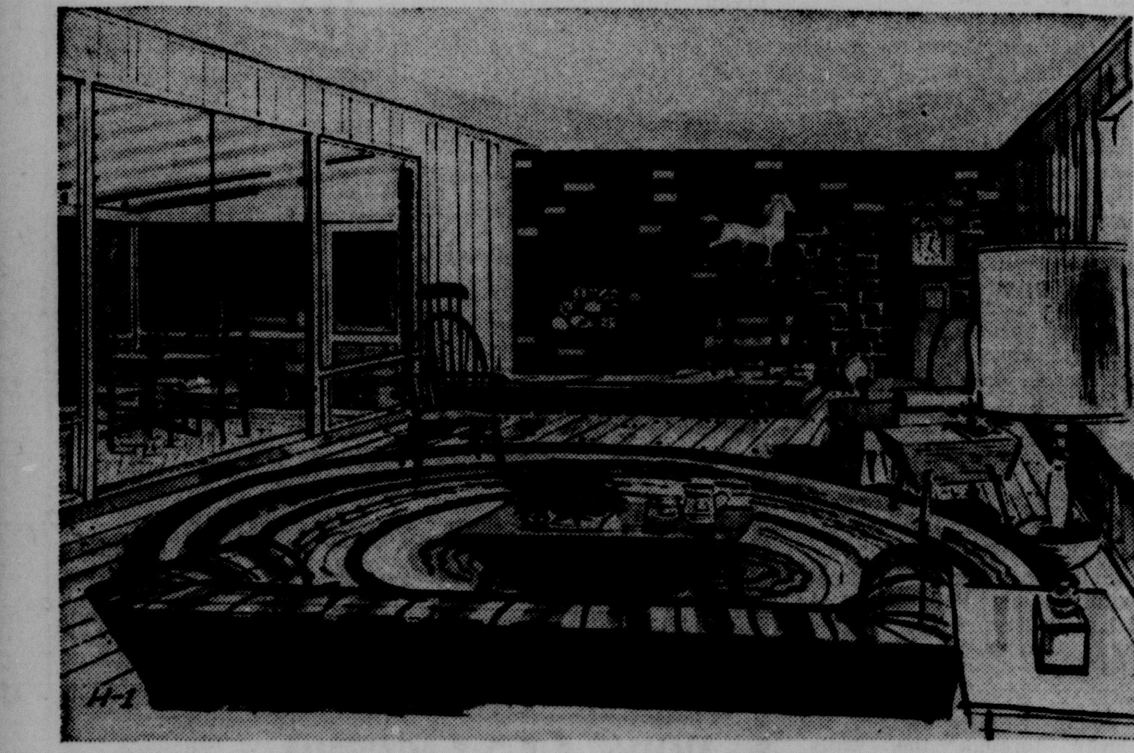
THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK

An Expandable Ranch For Leisurely Living

TRADITIONAL GLAMOR: This expandable ranch contains up to five bedrooms and 3½ baths when the attic space over the main wing is completed. Wood shingles and vertical boards with a touch of stone for accent give the exterior a traditional flavor.



FLOOR PLANS: Main foyer, with slate floor and wood panelled walls, funnels traffic to three clearly zoned areas: formal, informal and sleeping. Note the alternate location for the garage doors.



LEISURE ROOM: This spacious family room connects through sliding glass doors to a covered porch. The massive fireplace and wood panelled walls give the room an air of cozy informality.

Basically the house is a one-story model with three bedrooms. But it contains an open attic over the main wing which can be finished off when needed, adding two more huge bedrooms, a bath, and a large "sitting area" which can serve as a sewing room, den, or what have you.

An equally outstanding feature is the informal area, a nicely arranged combination of family room and screened porch which offer more than 500 square feet for relaxing in any kind of weather.

The house was designed by Architect Herman H. York. It is design H-1 in the House of the Week series.

York says the trend in today's housing is toward greater attention to informal areas. The family room (or "leisure room," as he calls it) is larger than the living room. It has wood panelled walls and a massive fireplace and wood box in one exposed brick wall.

Beyond, through sliding glass doors, is a modern version of an old fashioned screened porch — complete with built-in-barbecue. The porch has a beamed ceiling, exposure on two sides, and leads to an optional outdoor terrace which can be added at a later time.

The house offers excellent circulation around the kitchen area with its adjoining lavatory and mud closet. Nearby, in a separate alcove behind space saving bi-fold doors, are the clothes washer and dryer.

The formal living and dining area are clearly removed from the daily living zone, giving them an air of exclusivity. A large bay window is the eye-catcher in the living room. A nice feature in the dining room is the shuttered pass-through to the kitchen.

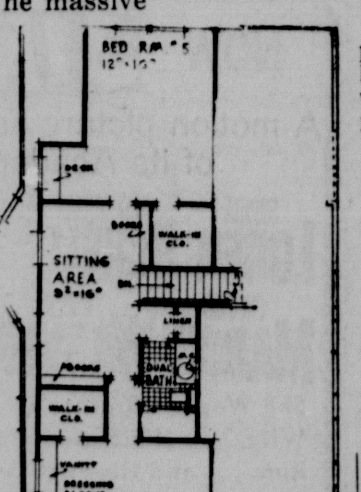
The bedroom wing is isolated from any of the noise areas. It contains generous closet space (even the linen closet is more than five feet long) and there is an extra closet for the vacuum and other housecleaning paraphernalia.

The attic offers the most economical type of expansion area. It already is roofed, walled and insulated, and all that's required is the sort of finish work a handy husband can do himself.

The H-1 study plan also shows how the attic could be converted into an apartment complete with kitchen and sitting room.

Basic living area of the house totals 1,980 square feet. The expansion attic would provide an additional 843 square feet of bonus space. The screened porch is 250 square feet and the attached garage 434 square feet. Architect York suggests a combination of wood shingles and vertical boards for the major portion of the side walls, and a touch of stone for accent in front of the family room window and across the garage entry.

The covered loggia and a cupola atop the garage give the house a traditional flavor that will assure its popularity for years to come.



EXPANSION ATTIC: If desired, the front bedroom could be converted into a living room and a small kitchen located in the walk-in closet area, making the attic a private apartment.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La. and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-1.

H-1 STATISTICS

A one-story house with attic expansion containing up to five bedrooms and 3½ baths. Basic area is 1,980 square feet; screened porch adds 250 square feet; garage 434 square feet; expansion attic 843 square feet. Overall dimensions are 72'9" wide by 57' deep. Contains full basement.

New England Gets Bulk Of Misty Weather

CHICAGO (AP) — New England had the bulk of the nation's clammy weather Saturday.

There was snow, fog, rain and cold in the upper Atlantic coast and Appalachians region.

In most other places, there was pleasant fall weather, although cloudy.

There were a few sprinkles along the Pacific coast. Some light showers and snow flurries spread out south of the Great Lakes.

The great fall drought, dampened by a moderate sweep of rains in the last three days, almost ceased to be a concern. However, conditions remained essentially lacking in moisture over much of the drought region. This section included much of the nation's eastern half.

Snow fell in northern New England at an increasing rate. Elsewhere, it rained or periodic showers and thundershowers wet down southern New England. Rainfall was light except for some heavy local falls. New Brunswick, Maine, caught 1.44 inches in six hours.

Temperatures in New England's snowy sections remained in the 30s and fogginess persisted over much of that region. The 30s also predominated in the northern Great Lakes area.

In the Gulf states, readings were in the 60s, and there were 70s in Florida and the Southwest. Much of the country's weather ran to the 40s and 50s.

END CONVENTION HERE

Louisiana Music Teachers Elect

Duchein Cazedessus of Louisiana Tech was re-elected president of the Louisiana Music Teachers Association at its annual convention which closed here Saturday.

Also re-elected was Vice President Ilda Schriefer of Louisiana State University.

Elected secretary was Mrs. Emily Bell O'Bannon of New Orleans. Max Pugh of Louisiana College was chosen treasurer.

Willis Ducrest of the University of Southwestern Louisiana, was named membership chairman for the coming year.

Serving again during the 1963-64 year will be the following section chiarmen:

Joe Barry Mullins of Northeast State, wind instruments; Kathleen Allums of McNeese State, piano; James Burke of USL, theory and composition; Monas Harlan of Centenary, voice; R. Frank Parker Jr. of Monroe, student activities, and Kenneth Klaus of LSU, stringed instruments.

Hosts for the 1964 convention will be the Greater Shreveport Music Teachers Association. The convention will be held on the Centenary campus.

Speaking at the final session Saturday at noon, Prof. Walter Westafer of Elon (N.C.) College reminded music teachers there is more to being a good teacher than just knowing their subject matter well.

"We must realize we are associated with our students' ultimate destiny," said the Southern Division president of the Music Teachers National Association.

He stressed the importance of creating in students the joy of learning.

Humility, kindness and patience were listed as keys to success in music teaching — just as in other fields of specialization.

Madame Nhu Hurls Charge Of 'Murder'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mrs. Ngo Dinh Nhu, her voice choked with sobs, charged Saturday that the deaths of her husband and brother-in-law in South Viet Nam "were murders, either with the official or unofficial blessings of the American government."

She also said the United States must take responsibility for whatever has happened to her three younger children, who she believes were in a palace strafed and bombarded during the upheaval that deposed her ruling family.

Reports from South Viet Nam said her husband, the small nation's secret police chief, and his brother, President Ngo Dinh Diem, committed suicide after being captured.

Mrs. Nhu told a news conference in her hotel in Beverly Hills: "This cannot be hidden under the label of suicide."

"To stab them when they are winning the war will only bring them more glory," she added. "The deaths were murders, either with the official or unofficial blessings of the American government."

The slender former first lady of South Viet Nam countered rumors that she might seek asylum in this country by saying: "Surely, I shall return to Viet Nam."

She opened the conference by reading a prepared statement, helped at times by her daughter, Le Thuy, 18, who has accompanied her mother on a world tour.

In the statement she said: "It is not enough to try to kill or subdue the duly elected leaders of a country just because one wants to transform that country into a satellite. To kill or subdue is easy, but what happens afterward? Treason does not pay and nobody can rule Viet Nam with just money and puppets.

"The whole world has its eyes on Viet Nam and knows perperfectly well what is going on there in spite of all the distortion and blackouts directed by that international Communist propaganda network which has become so strong."

There was no immediate word whether Mrs. Nhu would meet with her father, former Viet Nam Ambassador Tran Van Chuong, when he flies here from Washington on Saturday to talk at Chapman college.

He refused to see her several weeks ago in Washington, but Saturday he said, "There is no reason not to see her, especially if the reports of her husband's death are true. She is my daughter and if she is unhappy and needs me I will see her."

After the news conference, a police escort took Mrs. Nhu and Le Thuy to the nearby Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd, where they attended a Mass marking the feast of All Souls, on which Catholics pray for the dead.

They later returned to the hotel.

Student Union Campus Carnival Slated At Tech

RUSTON (Special) — Entrance forms for participation in the annual Campus Carnival to be held by the Louisiana Tech Student Union on Friday, Nov. 15, are being submitted to the campus entertainment organization, according to John Burton of Monroe, president.

Letters have been sent to all organizations to determine how many will enter the three competing divisions — fraternity, sorority and independent.

Entrance forms may be turned in to Sue Carlisle of Pioneer, carnival chairman, or can be mailed to Student Union, Box 174, Tech Station.

Trophies will be awarded to the organization in each group making the most profit. All net income will be given to the cheerleaders to help defray the year's expenses.

4 Scholarships In Engineering Are Announced

RUSTON (Special) — Four Louisiana Tech engineering students have received R. C. Baker Foundation scholarships, with two named in the department of mechanical engineering and two in petroleum and geological engineering.

Receiving the mechanical engineering senior scholarship as a continuation of the one he received last year is Donald W. Patterson of Ferriday. John H. Maxwell, also of Ferriday, has been awarded the junior grant for this year.

Claude Mahlen of Shreveport, a senior in petroleum engineering, and Oliver R. Hollinshead of Tullos, a freshman, have been selected to receive the scholarships by the petroleum engineering department. Mahlen is also receiving the award as a continuation of the one he had last year.

Each scholarship totals $850 with $100 of each going to the department and the student getting $750.

The students were selected by faculty members of their departments on the basis of United States citizenship, financial need and previously demonstrated qualities of scholarship, leadership and character.

Respirator Will Be Purchased In Madison Parish

TALLULAH (Special) — The Madison-Delta Tuberculosis Association is purchasing a respirator to be used primarily by out patients suffering from emphysema, asthma and other chronic lung diseases, according to Dr. B. G. Trosclair, chairman of the medical committee.

The machine is already installed in the Madison Parish Hospital and will be ready for use as soon as the manufacturers demonstrate its use.

Sister Audrey has offered her services to administer the treatments and the only charge for the use of the machine will be possibly a minimum fee to cover operating expense.

The machine, together with oxygen tank and nebulizer will cost over $800 and will be paid for with money collected from the sale of Christmas seals.

BLONDIE
BY CHIC YOUNG
I FEEL PUNK TODAY-- I'VE GOT THE BLUES
WHY DON'T YOU DO WHAT WOMEN DO WHEN THEY FEEL BLUE AND DEPRESSED?
WHAT'S THAT?
WELL, FIRST THEY GO TO THE BEAUTY PARLOR FOR A COMPLETE GOING-OVER-- EVERYTHING
THEN THEY GO TO A MILLINERY SHOP AND PICK OUT A PERKY NEW HAT
THEN TO A DRESS SHOP FOR A SMART NEW DRESS-- THAT DOES IT SOUNDS REASONABLE
I'LL SHOW YOU HOW WOMEN CURE THE BLUES
SPECIAL TODAY
A SHAMPOO--A NEW HAIR-SET-- A MANICURE-- THE WORKS
NOW A NEW HAT
FINALLY, A BRIGHT, GAY, NEW DRESS
SEE THERE--IT WORKS LIKE A CHARM--I FEEL LIKE A NEW WOMAN
AREN'T YOU PLEASED ABOUT ME BEING SO HAPPY?
YES, EXCEPT THAT I'M THE ONE WHO HAD THE BLUES IN THE FIRST PLACE
CHIC YOUNG
WELL, I JUST WANTED TO SHOW YOU HOW MY SYSTEM WORKS

BY THE WAY, JAN..THE COMMERCIAL ARTISTS' LEAGUE IS GIVING A DINNER DANCE NEXT THURSDAY!...I'M ASKING YOU...BEFORE YOU TAKE A DATE WITH...SOMEBODY ELSE!
SORRY, DON! I FLY TO PARIS TOMORROW!...FOR THE "COLLECTIONS" ...THE DESIGNERS' SHOW!
RAY BLOSSER PHOTOGRAPHER
STEP ON IT, HONEY! LOT OF HOUSE-DRESSES TO SHOOT FOR THE HUTTON CATALOG!
IN STUDIO 4, JANNIS!
GREAT MODEL!...WE USUALLY HAVE TO FIT THE DRESS TO THE GIRL, BUT SHE CAN SLIP INTO A SIZE 8 WITHOUT PINNING THE BACK OR PADDING THE RIB-CAGE!
SHE...SEEMS TO KEEP VERY BUSY!
IF SENSIBLE LIVING...AND THE OLD MAN WITH THE SCYTHE...LET HER KEEP HER FACE AND FIGURE, THAT KID CAN MAKE BIG DOUGH FOR YEARS!...ALMOST AS MUCH AS A MOVIE STAR!
ERNST SAUNDERS
THAT'S VERY FORTUNATE! ...FOR HER, I MEAN!
YEAH!...JOBS ALL OVER THE WORLD!...FILM COMMERCIALS!...THE WHOLE BIT!
BUT CHANCES ARE SHE'LL MARRY SOME APE AND SETTLE DOWN TO RAISE A FLOCK OF SQUAWKERS BEFORE SHE REALLY PILES UP A SCORE!
JOE! WERE THE BOLTS IN THIS LADDER MISS McBETH STANDS ON CHECKED OUT FOR SAFETY?
I TOLD EMIL, MR. BLOSSER ...BEFORE HE LEFT!

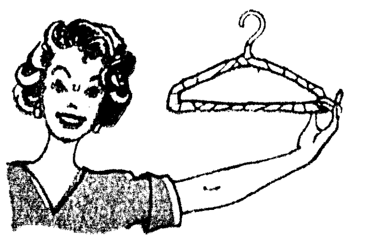
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:
I save all the plastic bags from my dry cleaning and use them to wrap and pad those wire coat hangers. It's wonderful. The hangers never rust and the padding prevents creases across the shoulders on dresses and suits.

Here's how I do it:

Cut the plastic bags into three or four-inch strips. Start wrapping the strips at the top of the coat hanger (where the hook is). Wrap completely around all the wire. It takes about three plastic bags to really do a good job. The colored bags are very pretty. Especially the blue ones.



When I want hangers that are really padded at the shoulder I use an old nylon stocking wrapped around the shoulder part of the hanger first and then cover it with plastic.

This makes drip drying very simple and there is no rust whatsoever.

M. B.

LE TOAST TERRIF

DEAR HELOISE:

When I make French toast, I put at least a tablespoon or more of maple syrup in the BATTER and beat it with the egg. I found that it browns better and is delicious. Try it.

Mrs. W. F.

Maple, almond, banana and all kinds of imitation flavorings may be added to French toast batter. These may be bought at food stores and they are very inexpensive. Just try banana flavoring . . . It's really terrif.

Heloise

PUP'S PILL

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have to give a pill to your dog and do not want to do it by force, try wrapping it in a little wad of liverwurst, and he will never know he has had it.

Florence Holt

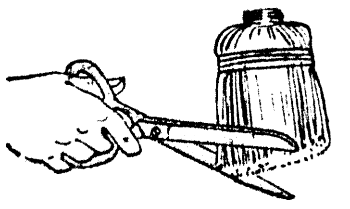
NEW BROOM

DEAR HELOISE:

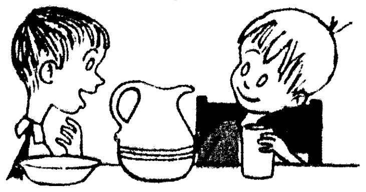
There are many of us who have a favorite old broom, but it is usually shorter on one side than the other side.

Do women know that they can soak the broom in hot water for about ten minutes, and while it is still wet trim it evenly with the kitchen shears? It will not only be even, but will sweep harder and get more dirt up!

Joseph P.



A WINNING PITCHER



DEAR HELOISE:

Have you ever had a cream pitcher that leaked on your tablecloth? Try putting a little butter on the lip of the cream pitcher and the cream will run right back into the pitcher instead of drip, drip, drip, etc.

I have found that plain baking soda will remove the black marks from my tile floors.

Shirley

CLOSET CUE

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a good use for old diapers. I make a small hole in the center so they will slip over a hanger, and they make excellent dust covers for suits and clothing that are seldom worn.

This certainly has cut down our cleaning bills.

Marion M.

CLOTHESLINE BRIGADE

DEAR HELOISE:

I bought a small plastic bucket (or pail) at my dime store and attached a shower curtain clip to it. I hang this on the line and use it for my clothespins. It slides up and down the line beautifully.

The new, lightweight plastic utility pails are brightly colored and could be "dolled-up" with some decal.

Diane Zabnow

CLEAN SCREENS

DEAR HELOISE:

When washing window screens I take them to the carport and lay them FLAT on the cement floor.

Take a pail of hot sudsy water and scrub the screens with a BROOM! Rinse with the water hose on both sides and stand them on their ends to dry. By the time my windows are clean my screens are dry and ready to put back up.

Sylvia

FROZEN FOOD TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you, too, freeze things with an inner wrap of wax paper and when you go to use the food, the wax paper sticks and tears (naturally only when you are in a rush) and the paper won't pull away from the food?

Next time it happens just SWISH the wax-paper-covered article under the COLD water faucet for an instant . . . just long enough to barely pass the water over the wax wrap . . . and watch the ease with which the paper comes free from the food!

Mrs. Don Hancock

* * *

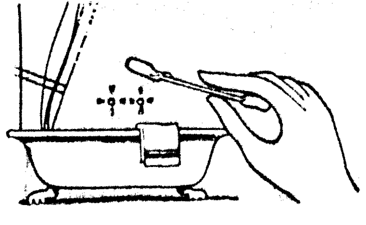
It worked! Hooray for our side!

Heloise

AHOY SWABS!

DEAR HELOISE:

Those cotton swabs we use to clean the baby's ears are just wonderful for cleaning hard-to-get-at cracks and crevices around the house, especially the corner tiles in the shower where mold collects.



Dip the cotton swab in straight household bleach and rub up the corner a few times. Mold disappears and hands don't touch bleach.

Dot Chrysler

WHAT GROUNDS!

DEAR HELOISE:

One of the best ways I have found to clean broilers or skillets where food has stuck is to put used coffee grounds in them, let sit awhile and then wash off. It works fine and does not harm the metal.

Mrs. Sue DeShong

* * *

Now, who would ever think of a way to use those coffee grounds except our dear Sue?

Try it on a skillet after scrambling eggs! Terrif! I used a paper napkin to wipe the goo with, and it worked like a charm!

Thanks, Sue.

Heloise

NEAT ASH TRAY

DEAR HELOISE:

I always carry an old metal compact with me in my purse.

This really makes an excellent emergency ash tray. It is fireproof, can be shut tight and really comes in handy. This can be kept either in your pocket or purse.
